

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

Andrews' Series of Latin School Books.
Andrews' Series of Latin School Books.

PUBLISHED BY CROCKER AND BREWSTER,

47 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON.

THE LATIN SCHOOL BOOKS prepared by Prof. E. A. ANDREWS, exclusive of his Latin-English Lexicon, founded on the Latin-German Lexicon of Dr. Freund, constitute two distinct series, adapted to different and distinct purposes. The basis of the First Series is Andrews' First Latin Book; of the Second, Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar.

First Series.
FIRST SERIES.

This Series is designed expressly for those who commence the study of Latin at a very early age, and for such as intend to pursue it to a limited extent only, or merely as subsidiary to the acquisition of a good English education. It consists of the following works, viz.:

Book 1.
1. Andrews' First Latin Book; or Progressive Lessons in Reading and Writing Latin. This small volume contains most of the leading principles and grammatical forms of the Latin language, and, by the logical precision of its rules and definitions, is admirably fitted to serve as an introduction to the study of general grammar. The work is divided into lessons of convenient length, which are so arranged that the student will, in all cases, be prepared to enter upon the study of each successive lesson, by possessing a thorough knowledge of those which preceded it. The lessons generally consist of three parts:—1st. The statement of important principles in the form of rules or definitions, or the exhibition of orthographical or etymological forms; 2d. Exercises, designed to illustrate such principles or forms; and 3d. Questions, intended to assist the student in preparing his lesson. In addition to the grammatical lessons contained in this volume, a few pages of Reading Lessons are annexed, and these are followed by a Dictionary comprising all the Latin words contained in the work. This book is adapted to the use of all schools above the grade of primary schools, including also Academies and Female Seminaries. It is prepared in such a manner that it can be used with little difficulty by any intelligent parent or teacher, with no previous knowledge of the language.

2. The Latin Reader, with a Dictionary and Notes, containing explanations of difficult idioms, and numerous references to the Lessons contained in the First Latin Book.

3. The Viri Romæ, with a Dictionary and Notes, referring, like those of the Reader, to the First Latin Book. This series of three small volumes, if faithfully studied according to the directions contained in them, will not only render the student a very tolerable proficient in the principles of the Latin language and in the knowledge of its roots, from which so many words of his English language are derived, but will constitute the best preparation for a thorough study of the English grammar.

SECOND SERIES.

NOTE.—The "Latin Reader" and the "Viri Romæ," in this series, are the same as in the first series.

This Series is designed more especially for those who are intending to become thoroughly acquainted with the Latin language, and with the principal classical authors of that language. It consists of the following works:—

1. Latin Lessons. This small volume is designed for the younger classes of Latin students, who intend ultimately to take up the larger Grammar, but to whom that work would, at first, appear too formidable. It contains the prominent principles of Latin grammar, expressed in the same language as in the larger Grammar, and likewise Reading and Writing Lessons, with a Dictionary of the Latin words and phrases occurring in the Lessons.

NEW SERIES OF LATIN SCHOOL BOOKS.

2. Latin Grammar. Revised, with Corrections and Additions. A Grammar of the Latin Language, for the use of Schools and Colleges. By Professors E. A. ANDREWS and S. STODDARD. This work, which for many years has been the text-book in the department of Latin Grammar, claims the merit of having first introduced into the schools of this country the subject of grammatical analysis, which now occupies a conspicuous place in so many grammars of the English language. More than twenty years have elapsed since the first publication of this Grammar, and it is hardly necessary to say that its merits—placing it in a practical view, preëminently above every other Latin Grammar—have been so fully appreciated that it has been adopted as a Text Book in nearly every College and Seminary in the country. The present edition has not only been thoroughly revised and corrected (two years of continuous labor having been devoted to its careful revision and to the purpose of rendering it conformable in all respects to the advanced position which it aims to occupy), but it contains at least one third more matter than the previous editions. To unite the acknowledged excellencies of the older English manuals, and of the more recent German grammars, was the special aim of the authors of this work; and to this end particular attention was directed:—1st. To the preparation of more extended rules for the pronunciation of the language; 2d. To a clear exposition of its inflectional changes; 3d. To a proper basis of its syntax; and 4th. To greater precision in rules and definitions.

3. Questions on the Grammar. This little volume is intended to aid the student in preparing his lessons, and the teacher in conducting his recitations.

4. A Synopsis of Latin Grammar, comprising the Latin Paradigms, and the Principal Rules of Latin Etymology and Syntax. The few pages composing this work contain those portions of the Grammar to which the student has occasion to refer most frequently in the preparation of his daily lessons.

5. Latin Reader. The Reader, by means of two separate and distinct sets of notes, is equally adapted for use in connection either with the First Latin Book or the Latin Grammar.

6. Viri Romæ. This volume, like the Reader, is furnished with notes and references, both to the First Latin Book and to the Latin Grammar. The principal difference in the two sets of notes found in each of these volumes consists in the somewhat greater fulness of those which belong to the smaller series.

7. Latin Exercises. This work contains exercises in every department of the Latin Grammar, and is so arranged that it may be studied in connection with the Grammar through every stage of the preparatory course. It is designed to prepare the way for original composition in the Latin language, both in prose and verse.

8. A Key to Latin Exercises. This Key, in which all the exercises in the preceding volume are fully corrected, is intended for the use of teachers only.

9. Cæsar's Commentaries on the Gallic War, with a Dictionary and Notes. The text of this edition of Cæsar has been formed by reference to the best German editions. The Notes are principally grammatical. The Dictionary, which, like all the others in the series, was prepared with great labor, contains the usual significations of the words, together with an explanation of all such phrases as might otherwise perplex the student.

10. Sallust. Sallust's Jugurthine War and Conspiracy of Cataline, with a Dictionary and Notes. The text of this work, which was based upon that of Cortius, has been modified by reference to the best modern editions, especially by those of Krits and Gerlach; and its orthography is, in general, conformed to that of Pottier and Planche. The Dictionaries of Cæsar and Sallust connected with this series are original works, and, in connection with the Notes in each volume, furnish a very complete and satisfactory apparatus for the study of these two authors.

11. Ovid. Selections from the Metamorphoses and Heroides of Ovid, with Notes, Grammatical References, and Exercises in Scanning. These selections from Ovid are designed as an introduction to Latin poetry. They are accompanied with numerous brief notes explanatory of difficult phrases, of obscure historical or mythological allusions, and especially of grammatical difficulties. To these are added such Exercises in Scanning as serve fully to introduce the student to a knowledge of Latin prosody, and especially of the structure and laws of hexameter and pentameter verse.

In announcing the Revised Edition of ANDREWS and STODDARD'S LATIN GRAMMAR, the Publishers believe it to be quite unnecessary to speak of the merits of the work. The fact that in the space of about Twenty Years, SIXTY-FIVE EDITIONS, numbering above Two Hundred Thousand Copies, have been required for the purpose of meeting the steadily increasing demand for the work, sufficiently evinces the estimation in which it has been held. In preparing this Revised and Enlarged Edition, every portion of the original work has been reconsidered in the light of the experience of twenty years spent by the present editor in studies connected with this department of education, and with the aid of numerous publications in the same department, which, during this period, have issued from the European press. The results of this labor are apparent on almost every page, in new modifications of the old materials, and especially in such additional information in regard to its various topics as the present advanced state of classical education in this country seemed obviously to demand. The publishers commend this new edition to the attention of Teachers throughout the country, and express the hope that in its present form it will be deemed worthy of a continuance of the favor which it has so long received.

The following are extracts from a few of the many letters the Publishers have received from teachers from all parts of the country in commendation of this work:—

The revised edition of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar is without doubt the best published in America. I have no doubt that the time is near at hand when this series of works will, by all lovers of the classics, be considered as the 'National Series.' The pronunciation is now by the same class considered the American Standard. I will hail with joy the day when every college and school in our country shall have adopted Prof. Andrews' series as the foundation of true classic knowledge. As such I consider it, and for that reason have I used it since I first knew its existence.—Martin Armstrong, Potomac Seminary, Romney, Va.

Allow me to say, after a careful examination, that, in my judgment, it is the best manual of Latin Grammar to be found in the English language. In revising it the author has preserved the happy medium between saying too much and too little, so desirable for a Latin text-book for this country. In philosophical arrangement, simplicity of expression, and for brevity and fulness, it must entitle the author to the first rank in American classical scholarship. I shall use it in my classes, and recommend it to all teachers of Latin in this country.—N. E. Cobleigh, Professor of Ancient Languages and Literature, in Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis.

I most heartily concur in the above recommendation.—F. O. Blair, Professor in Lawrence University.

The Grammar, as revised, is, I think, for school purposes superior to any work of the kind yet published in America. Philosophie in its arrangement and definitions, and full and accurate in its details, it sets forth the results of the learned researches of the Germans in language easy of comprehension and suitable for reference in daily recitations.—L. H. Deneen, Lebanon, Illinois.

I am highly pleased with the Revised Edition, and consider the additions as decided improvements. In my opinion Dr. Andrews' works surpass all others in the market. I see no reason why the Grammar should not now supersede even Zumpt's, both in the study and recitation rooms.—Sidney A. Norton, Hamilton, Ohio.

NEW SERIES OF LATIN SCHOOL BOOKS.

I have reason to believe that the improvements, introduced into the last edition of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar by my respected and lamented friend Dr. Andrews, a little before his death, add very decidedly to the value of a work, which has done more to give the knowledge of that language to the youth of this country than any, perhaps than all others.—Theodore W. Woolsey, President of Yale College, New Haven.

No book, probably, has done more to improve classical training in American schools than Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar. Its use is almost universal; and where it has not itself been adopted as a manual, it has made grammars of similar excellence necessary. The last edition, the sixty-fifth, was carefully revised by the lamented Dr. Andrews, not long before his death, by whom it was greatly enlarged by the incorporation of much valuable information, derived mainly from the last edition of the Latin Grammar of Professor Zumpt. It will therefore be found to be much improved as a repository of the principles and facts of the Latin language.—Thomas A. Thacher, Professor of Latin in Yale College, New Haven.

It is unnecessary to commend a Latin Grammar, which has been for twenty years in common use in our Colleges, and has generally superseded all others. The Revised Edition contains the results of the labors of Dr. Andrews, during all that time, on various Latin Classics, and on his great Latin Lexicon; and cannot, therefore, but be greatly improved.—Edward Robinson, D. D., LL. D., Prof. of Biblical Literature in Union Theol. Seminary, New York City.

I regard Andrews' and Stoddard's new Latin Grammar, as an exceedingly valuable work. It evidently contains the results of the Author's careful and long continued investigation, and from its fulness, clearness, and accuracy, will undoubtedly become the Standard Latin Grammar of this Continent. In Western New York, we have for a long time been using the earlier editions, and they have rapidly won upon the public regard. This new edition will give it a stronger claim upon our favor. It must rapidly supersede all others. I can unhesitatingly recommend the New Grammar as the best in use.—Lewis H. Clark, Principal of Sodus Academy, Wayne Co., N. Y.

I have looked over the new edition of the Grammar with great interest. It is now eighteen years since I introduced it into this college, and I have never felt inclined to change it for any other. The revision, without changing its general character, has added greatly to its fulness and completeness. It is now fully equal to Zumpt's in these respects, and far superior to it in adaptation to the class room. There is no other school grammar that can pretend to compare with it. I have introduced the new edition here, and have no idea I shall ever wish to substitute another. The services of Prof. Andrews in the cause of classical learning in the United States cannot be over estimated.—M. Sturgis, Professor in Hanover College, Indiana.

I am willing to say that I am decidedly in favor of Andrews' Latin Series.—Geo. Gale, Galesville University, Wisconsin.

Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar I consider decidedly the best Latin Grammar ever published.—Ransom Norton, North Livermore, Maine.

Such a work as Andrews and Stoddard's Revised Latin Grammar needs no recommendation, it speaks for itself.—A. A. Keen, Professor of Greek and Latin, Tufts College, Medford, Ms.

I have examined the revised edition of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, and think it a complete success. I see it has all of Zumpt's merits and none of his defects, and welcome its advent with great pleasure.—James M. Whiton, Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven, Conn.

I have examined Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, and say, without hesitation, that the principles of the Latin language can be more easily and systematically acquired from it than any work I have ever seen. The arrangement and simplicity of its terms are such as to make it easily comprehended by the beginner, while, at the same time, its copiousness is sufficient for the most advanced student. The author has evidently noted and profited by the defects in this respect of most of the Latin Grammars now in use.—C. W. Field, Mauch Chunk, Pa.

The superior merits of the original work are too well known and appreciated to need any commendation from me. I have had some means of knowing how great pains and labor Dr. Andrews has bestowed upon this final revision and improvement of the work, and, therefore, was not unprepared to find its acknowledged excellence materially increased, and I do not hesitate to say, that its value has been greatly enhanced, and that it has been brought as near as practicable to the present state of philological science.—John D. Philbrick, Superintendent of Public Schools, city of Boston.

I have looked the Grammar through with much care and a great degree of satisfaction, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it superior to any Latin Grammar in method and manner of discussion, and happily adapted to the wants of both teachers and pupils.—J. W. Simonds, Principal of New England Christian Institute, Andover, N. H.

NEW SERIES OF LATIN SCHOOL BOOKS.

' We have lately introduced the Revised Edition, and regard it as a great improvement upon former editions. We shall use it exclusively in future.—E. Flint, Jr., Principal of Lee High School.

After a due examination, I am happy to state that the Author has admirably accomplished the objects which he aimed at in making this last revision. He has added much that is in the highest degree valuable without materially changing the arrangement of the original work. The work appears to me well adapted to the daily use of our Classical Schools, and I shall hereafter direct my classes to use it.—C. L. Cushman, Principal of Peabody High School, South Danvers, Ms.

The Revised Grammar seems to me greatly improved and to be every thing a scholar could wish.—Z. B. Sturgis, Charlestown, Indiana.

I have subjected the Revised Edition to the test of actual use in the recitation room, and am persuaded that in its present form it decidedly surpasses every other Latin Grammar in point of adaptation to the wants of students in our Academies, High Schools and Colleges.—William S. Palmer, Central High School, Cleveland, Ohio.

I think Andrews' Series of Latin Works the most systematic and best arranged course I have ever seen,—and believe if our pupils would use them altogether, we should find them much better scholars. I shall use them wholly in my school.—A. C. Stockin, Principal of Monmouth Academy, Maine.

The examination of the Revised Edition has afforded me very great pleasure, and leads me to express the deep and sincere conviction that it is the most complete Grammar of the Latin language with which I am acquainted, and best adapted for ready consultation upon any subject connected with the study of Latin Authors. The paper, the typography, and the binding,—the whole style of publication—are such as to commend the good taste and judgment of the Publishers.—J. R. Boyd, Principal of Maplewood Young Ladies Institute, Pittsfield, Mass.

I find the Revised Edition to be just what is needed for a Latin Grammar,—clear, comprehensive, yet concise, in the subject matter. I shall introduce it as a permanent textbook.—B. F. Dake, Principal of Clyde High School, Wayne Co., N. Y.

I have carefully examined your Revised Edition throughout, particularly the Corrections and Additions. It now appears to me all that can be desired. It seems like parting with a familiar friend to lay aside the old edition, with its many excellencies, and adopt the new, but I shall cheerfully make the sacrifice for the greater benefit that will accrue to those commencing the study of Latin from time to time.—J. H. Graham, Principal of Northfield Institution, Vermont.

I thought before that the old edition was entitled to the appellation of "The Latin Grammar," but I perceive its value has been much increased by the numerous emendations and additions of Prof. Andrews. The Grammar is now fitted to be a complete hand-book for the Latin scholar during his whole course.—E. W. Johnson, Canton Academy, Canton, N. Y.

I unhesitatingly pronounce the Revised Edition of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar the best Grammar of the Latin Language, and shall certainly use my influence in its behalf.—H. E. J. Clute, Edinboro', Pa.

After a thorough examination, I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best Latin Grammar for the purposes of the recitation room that I have ever examined. In its present form it ought certainly to displace a large majority of the Grammars in common use. Its rules of Syntax are expressed with accuracy and precision, and are in fact, what all rules ought to be, reliable guides to the learner.—James W. Andrews, Principal of Hopedell Academy, Penn.

Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, in the arrangement and adaptation to the learner, has excelled all others, and the revised edition is certainly a great improvement, and I do believe is better adapted to the wants of the student than any other. The whole seems to be critically revised and corrected. Prof. Andrews was truly the student's benefactor.—M. L. Severance, North Troy, Vermont.

It gives me great pleasure to bear my testimony to the superior merits of the Latin Grammar edited by Professor Andrews and Mr. Stoddard. I express most cheerfully, unhesitatingly, and decidedly, my preference of this Grammar to that of Adam, which has, for so long a time, kept almost undisputed sway in our schools.—Dr. C. Beck, Cambridge.

I know of no Grammar published in this country, which promises to answer so well the purposes of elementary classical instruction, and shall be glad to see it introduced into our best schools.—Charles K. Dillaway, Boston.

Your new Latin Grammar appears to me much better suited to the use of students than any other grammar I am acquainted with.—Prof. Wm. M. Holland, Hartford, Ct.

NEW SERIES OF LATIN SCHOOL BOOKS.

I have adopted the Latin Grammar of Andrews and Stoddard in the school under my charge, believing it better adapted, upon the whole, for elementary instruction than any similar work which I have examined. It combines the improvements of the recent German works on the subject with the best features of that old favorite of the schools, Dr. Adam's Latin Grammar.—Henry Drisler, Professor of Latin in Columbia College.

A careful review of the Revised Edition of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, shows that this favorite text-book still continues to deserve the affections and confidence of Teachers and Pupils, incorporating as it does the results of Prof. Andrews' own constant study for many years with the investigations of English and German Philologists. No other Grammar is now so well fitted to meet the wants of the country as the rapid demand for it will show beyond doubt.—A. S. Hartwell, University of St. Louis.

This Grammar of the Latin Language, now universally pronounced the very best, is greatly improved by the corrections, revisions and additions of this revised edition. We do not believe a text-book was ever written which introduced so great an improvement in the method of teaching Latin, as this has done. We wish the revised edition the greatest success, which we are sure it merits.—Rhode Island Schoolmaster.

I have examined your revised edition with considerable care, and do not hesitate to pronounce it a great improvement upon the old editions, and as near perfection as we are likely to have. I have no doubt it will come into general use.—A. Williams, Professor of Latin, Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa.

I have been much interested in the Revised Edition. The improvement is very striking, and I shall no longer think of giving it up and putting Zumpt in its place. I am much pleased with the great improvement in the typography. You have given to our schools a book fifty per cent better in every respect, and I trust you will have your reward in largely increased sales.—William J. Rolfe, Master of Oliver High School, Lawrence, Ms.

I can with much pleasure say that your Grammar seems to me much better adapted to the present condition and wants of our schools than any one with which I am acquainted, and to supply that which has long been wanted—a good Latin Grammar for common use.—F. Gardner, Principal of Boston Latin School.

The Latin Grammar of Andrews and Stoddard is deserving, in my opinion, of the approbation which so many of our ablest teachers have bestowed upon it. It is believed that, of all the grammars before the public, this has greatly the advantage, in regard both to the excellence of its arrangement, and the accuracy and copiousness of its information.—H. B. Hackett, Prof. of Biblical Literature in Newton Theological Seminary.

The universal favor with which this Grammar is received was not unexpected. It will bear a thorough and discriminating examination. In the use of well-defined and expressive terms, especially in the syntax, we know of no Latin or Greek grammar which is to be compared to this.—American Quarterly Register.

These works will furnish a series of elementary publications for the study of Latin altogether in advance of any thing which has hitherto appeared, either in this country or in England.—American Biblical Repository.

I cheerfully and decidedly bear testimony to the superior excellence of Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar to any manual of the kind with which I am acquainted. Every part bears the impress of a careful compiler. The principles of syntax are happily developed in the rules, whilst those relating to the moods and tenses supply an important deficiency in our former grammars. The rules of prosody are also clearly and fully exhibited.—Rev. Lyman Coleman, Manchester, Vt.

This work bears evident marks of great care and skill, and ripe and accurate scholarship in the authors. We cordially commend it to the student and teacher.—Biblical Repository.

Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar is what I expected. It would be—an excellent book. We cannot hesitate a moment in laying aside the books now in use, and introducing this.—Rev. J. Penney, D. D., New York.

Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar bears throughout evidence of original and thorough investigation and sound criticism. It is, in my apprehension, so far as simplicity is concerned, on the one hand, and philosophical views and sound scholarship on the other, far preferable to other grammars; a work at the same time highly creditable to its authors and to our country.—Professor A. Packard, Bowdoin College, Maine.

I do not hesitate to pronounce Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar superior to any other with which I am acquainted. I have never seen, any where, a greater amount of valuable matter compressed within limits equally narrow.—Hon. John Hall, Principal of Ellington School, Conn.

We have no hesitation in pronouncing this Grammar decidedly superior to any now in use.—Boston Recorder.

Dr. Robinson's Gesenius.

Robinson's Hebrew Lexicon. Sixth Edition, Revised and Stereotyped. A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament, including the Biblical Chaldee. Translated from the Latin of William Gesenius, late Professor of Theology in the University of Halle-Wittenberg. By EDWARD ROBINSON, D. D., LL. D., Professor of Biblical Literature in the Union Theological Seminary, New York. A new edition, with corrections and large additions, partly furnished by the author in manuscript, and partly condensed from his larger Thesaurus, as compiled by Roediger. These corrections and additions were made by Dr. Gesenius, during an interval of several years, while carrying his Thesaurus through the press, and were transcribed and furnished by him expressly for this edition. They will be found to be very numerous, every page having been materially corrected and enlarged, and a large number of articles having been re-written. It is printed on a new type, the face and cut of which is very beautiful, and has been highly commended and approved.

Dr. Robinson had already been trained to the business of lexicographical labor, when he began the translation of the present work. He is, in an uncommon degree, master of his own native tongue. He has diligence, patience, perseverance—yes, the iron diligence of Gesenius himself. For aught that I have yet been able to discover, all that can reasonably be expected or desired, has been done by the translator; not only as to rendering the work into English, but as to the manner and the accuracy of printing. The work will speak for itself, on the first opening. It does honor, in its appearance, to editor, printers, and publishers. I have only to add my hearty wish, that its beautiful white pages may be consulted and turned over, until they become thoroughly worn with the hands of the purchasers.—Prof. Stuart, in the Biblical Repository.

There is no lexicon in English that can be put on a level with Robinson's. I recommend the present as the best Lexicon of the Hebrew and Biblical Chaldee which an English scholar can have.—Rev. Dr. Samuel Davidson, of London.

Gesenius' Lexicon is known wherever Hebrew is studied. On the merits of this work criticism has long ago pronounced its verdict of approval.—London Jewish Chronicle.

This is a very beautiful and complete edition of the best Hebrew Lexicon ever yet produced. Gesenius, as a Hebrew philologist, is unequalled.—London Clerical Journal.

This is decidedly the most complete edition of Gesenius' Manual Hebrew Lexicon.—London Journal of Sacred Literature.

Robinson's Harmony of the Gospels, in Greek.

A Harmony of the Four Gospels, in Greek, according to the text of Hahn. Newly arranged, with Explanatory Notes, by EDWARD ROBINSON, D. D., LL. D., Professor of Biblical Literature in the Union Theological Seminary, New York. Revised Edition.

This work of Dr. Robinson confines itself to the legitimate sphere of a Harmony of the Gospels; and we do not hesitate to say that in this sphere it will be found to be all that a Harmony need or can be. The original text is printed with accuracy and elegance. It is a feast to the eyes to look upon a page of so much beauty. Its arrangement is distinguished for simplicity and convenience. No one will ever be able to comprehend the relations of the Gospels to each other, or acquire an exact knowledge of their contents, unless he studies them with the aid of a Harmony. The present work furnishes in this respect just the facility which is needed; and we trust that among its other effects, it will serve to direct attention more strongly to the importance of this mode of study.—Prof. Hackett, of Newton Theological Seminary.

William Palmer's Arithmetic.
Arithmetic, Oral and Written, practically applied by means of Suggestive Questions. By THOMAS H. PALMER, Author of the Prize Essay on Education, entitled the "Teacher's Manual," "The Moral Instructor," etc.

Robinson's Harmony of the Gospels, in English.

A Harmony of the Four Gospels, in English, according to the common version; newly arranged, with Explanatory Notes. By EDWARD ROBINSON, D. D., LL. D.

The object of this work is to obtain a full and consecutive account of all the facts of our Lord's life and ministry. In order to do this, the four gospel narratives have been so brought together, as to present as nearly as possible the true chronological order, and where the same transaction is described by more than one writer, the different accounts are placed side by side, so as to fill out and supply each other. Such an arrangement affords the only full and perfect survey of all the testimony relating to any and every portion of our Lord's history. The evangelists are thus made their own best interpreters; and it is shown how wonderfully they are supplementary to each other in minute as well as in important particulars, and in this way is brought out fully and clearly the fundamental characteristics of their testimony, unity in diversity. To Bible classes, Sabbath schools, and all who love and seek the truth in their closets and in their families, this work will be found a useful assistant.

I have used "Robinson's English Harmony" in teaching a Bible Class. The result, in my own mind, is a conviction of the great merits of this work, and its adaptation to impart the highest life and interest to Bible Class exercises, and generally to the diligent study of the Gospel. It is much to be desired that every one accustomed to searching the Scriptures should have this invaluable aid.—Rev. Dr. Skinner, New York.

Robinson's Dictionary of the Bible.

Robinson's Bible Dictionary. A Dictionary for the use of Schools and Young Persons. By EDWARD ROBINSON, D. D., LL. D. Illustrated with Engravings on wood, and Maps of Canaan, Judea, Asia Minor, and the Peninsula of Mount Sinai, Idumea, etc.

Elements of Astronomy.

The Elements of Astronomy; or The World as it is and as it Appears. By the author of "Theory of Teaching," "Edward's First Lessons in Grammar," etc. Revised in manuscript by George P. Bond, Esq., of the Cambridge Observatory, to whom the author is also indebted for superintending its passage through the press.

Scott's Family Bible.

Scott's Family Bible. Boston Stereotype Edition. 6 vols. royal 8vo., containing all the Notes, Practical Observations, Marginal References, and Critical Remarks, as in the most approved London edition, with a line engraved likeness of the Author, Family Record, etc.

This Edition is the only one that has, or can have, the benefit of the final Additions and Emendations of the Author. The extent of these may be judged from the fact that upwards of Four Hundred Pages of letter-press were added; and as they consist chiefly of Critical Remarks, their importance to the Biblical student is at once apparent. The Preface to the entire work contains an elaborate and compendious view of the evidences that the Holy Scriptures were given by inspiration of God. Prefixed to each Book, both in the Old and New Testament, is an Introduction, or statement of its purport and intent. There are also copious Marginal References, with various Tables, a Chronological Index, and a copious Topical Index.

P R E F A C E .

As more than twenty years have elapsed, since the first publication of this Grammar, it can scarcely be necessary, in offering to the public a revised edition of the work, to make more than a passing allusion to its original plan or to the circumstances to which it owed its origin.

For some years previous to the date of its publication, the progress of classical learning in Europe, and particularly in Germany, had been such, as plainly to indicate the necessity of a corresponding advance in the manuals of Latin grammar employed in the schools of this country. Their deficiencies had indeed become so apparent, that various attempts had already been made to furnish a remedy by means of translations of German grammars; but none of these, however excellent in many respects, had seemed to be fully adapted to the purpose for which they were intended.

To unite the acknowledged excellencies of the older English manuals and of the more recent German grammars was the special aim of the authors of this work; and to this end their attention was directed, first to the preparation of more extended rules for the pronunciation of the language, secondly to a clearer exposition of its inflectional changes, thirdly to the proper basis of its syntax, and fourthly to greater precision in its rules and definitions.

The system of rules for the division and accentuation of Latin words, prepared in pursuance of the plan which has just been specified, was accordingly more copious than any previously found in the Latin grammars in common use in this country. For the purpose also of preventing the formation of erroneous habits of pronunciation in the early part of the student's course, the penultimate quantities of all Latin words occurring in the Grammar were carefully marked, unless determinable by some general rule, and the paradigms were divided and accented in such a manner as to indicate their true pronunciation.

In their treatment of Latin etymology, the authors aimed to render its study less a mere exercise of memory, and in a greater degree an efficient aid in the general cultivation of the mental powers. The principal means adopted for this purpose consisted in the practical distinction, every where made in treating inflected words, between the root, or ground-form, and the termination.

The third prominent peculiarity of the original work was its direct derivation of the rules of Syntax from the logical analysis of sentences, and its distinct specification of the particular use of each of the several words of which a sentence is composed. This method of treating syntax—a method previously unknown in the schools of this country—has, since that period, been extensively adopted, and in some instances greatly extended, particularly in a portion of the English grammars recently published in this country, and has probably contributed more to the advancement of grammatical science, than any other innovation of modern times.

The errors noticed in the original work have been corrected, as successive editions have issued from the press, but no opportunity has occurred, until the present, of thoroughly revising it in every part. Two years of continuous labor have now been devoted to its revision, and to the purpose of rendering it conformable in all respects to the advanced position which it originally aspired to occupy.

In all the modifications which have now been made, I have aimed to accomplish these two purposes—to preserve, as far as possible, the identity of the work, and at the same time to bring it as near, as should be practicable, to the present state of philological science. Hence, while I have made no changes either in language or arrangement, but such as appeared to me quite necessary, I have omitted none which logical accuracy or requisite fulness of explanation seemed to demand. In doing even this it soon became evident, that the changes and additions must be more numerous, than would well consist with the convenient use of the old and the new editions in the same classes. Though not insensible of the trouble occasioned to the teacher by alterations in a familiar text-book, I could not but suppose, that such modifications as the progress of the last twenty years had rendered necessary, would still be welcomed by him, notwithstanding the personal inconvenience arising from the disturbance of his previous associations. To his pupils, who will have known no other form of the Grammar, than that in which it now appears, the work, it is believed, will not only be as easy of comprehension in its new, as in its old form, but in its practical application far more satisfactory.

Of the minor changes and additions occurring on almost every page, and even of the occasional rearrangement of small portions of the materials, it is unnecessary to speak particularly. The student familiar with former editions will at once detect these slight modifications, and note them in his memory for future use; and though he may fail to find a rule, exception, or remark on the page where he has been wont to see it, he will still meet with it in the same relative position,—in the same section and subdivision of the section in which it formerly appeared.

In the department of Orthœpy will now be found some account of the Continental mode of pronouncing Latin; and, by means of the joint exhibition of this and of the English methods, the student will be able to use the Grammar with equal facility, whether choosing to adhere to the usual pronunciation of English and American scholars, or preferring that of the continental schools.

In the Etymology of nouns, no other alteration need be specified, except the introduction, in the third declension, of "Rules for forming the nominative singular from the root." These are copied, in a modified form, from the editor's First Latin Book. In themselves they are of considerable utility in showing the mutual relations between the sounds of certain letters, and they are also closely connected with corresponding changes in some of the verbal roots. In the Etymology of adjectives, besides the minor modifications already alluded to, a few changes in arrangement have been made in those sections which relate to Comparison. To pronouns have been added some remarks on Pronominal Adjectives, which seemed to require a more particular notice, than they had heretofore received, both in their relation to each other and to the Adverbial Correlatives. The Etymology of particles has been treated somewhat more fully than in former editions—a fulness especially observable in relation to adverbs and conjunctions, and which was rendered necessary by the more extended treatment of those particles in the revised Syntax.

In almost every section of the Syntax the student will meet with modifications and especially with additions, which, as in other parts of the work, are introduced in such a manner as seldom to interfere with the references made to former editions in the series based upon this Grammar. The principal exception to the latter remark is to be found in sections 247—251, which relate to certain uses of the ablative.

A comparison of the Prosody in the present and former editions will show, that it has been revised with minute care in every part. Similar attention has also been given to the Appendix, in which will be found some additions relating to Roman Money, Weights and Measures. For the greater convenience of the student the Index in this edition has been much enlarged.

In conclusion, I would briefly indicate the principal sources from which have been derived the various additions and corrections, to which allusion has been made. In preparing the original work, the earlier editions of Zumpt's Grammar were consulted at almost every step, and while frequent use was made of the grammars of Scheller, Grant, Adam, Ruddiman, Hickie and others, the treatises of Zumpt were even then regarded as the most valuable embodiment of the principles of Latin philology. It was therefore natural and almost unavoidable, in revising a work which had in so many points received both its form and its substance from the earlier labors of that distinguished grammarian, to look to his maturer works for many of the materials by means of which our original sketch should be made more complete. Accordingly I have constantly consulted the last edition of his Grammar, translated by Dr. Schmitz, and have freely incorporated in this edition such of its materials, as were suited to my purpose. In most cases his ideas have been either expressed in my own language, or in language so modified as to suit the general plan of my work. In the Etymology, and not unfrequently in the Syntax also, the copious Grammar of Ramshorn has furnished valuable materials; and the Grammars of Key and of Kühner, the latter translated by Prof. Champlin, have been consulted with profit and satisfaction. In the sections comprising conjunctions, and especially in those relating to grammatical analysis, I am happy to acknowledge my indebtedness to Prof. S. S. Greene of Brown University. To the sources already specified I must add the Latin Lexicon of Dr. Freund, in editing a translation of which I had frequent occasion to note such matters as promised to be of utility in the revision of this Grammar. The additions in the Appendix relating to Roman money, etc., are taken principally from Dr. Riddle's translation of Dr. Freund's School Dictionary. To these references I will only add, that such other notes relating to Latin philology, as I have made during the past twenty years, so far as they were adapted to my purpose, have either been used in my former occasional corrections, or are incorporated in the present edition.

In taking a final leave of the earliest of the elementary Latin works with which my name has been associated, and with which, in my own mind, must ever be connected the pleasant memory of my early friend and associate, Prof. Stoddard, I trust I shall be pardoned in commending it once more to the kind indulgence of the teachers of this country, and in expressing the hope that, in its present form, it will be deemed not altogether unworthy of a continuance of the favor which it has so long received. I cannot indeed venture to indulge the hope, that all the imperfections of the work have even now been removed, or that, in my attempts to render it more perfect, I may not sometimes have fallen into new errors; but this I can truly say, that since its first publication I have devoted much time to its revision, and have sought to manifest my sense of the kindness with which it has been received, by doing all in my power to render it less unworthy of public favor.

LATIN GRAMMAR.

§ 1. The Latin language is the language spoken by the ancient Romans. Latin Grammar teaches the principles of the Latin language. These relate,

1. To its written characters;
2. To its pronunciation;
3. To the classification and derivation of its words;
4. To the construction of its sentences;
5. To the quantity of its syllables, and its versification.

The first part is called Orthography; the second, Orthoëpy; the third, Etymology; the fourth, Syntax; and the fifth, Prosody.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

§ 2. Orthography treats of the letters, and other characters of written language, and the proper mode of spelling words.

1. The Latin alphabet consists of twenty-five letters. They have the same names as the corresponding characters in English. They are A, a; B, b; C, c; D, d; E, e; F, f; G, g; H, h; I, i; J, j; K, k; L, l; M, m; N, n; O, o; P, p; Q, q; R, r; S, s; T, t; U, u; V, v; X, x; Y, y; Z, z.

2. The Romans used only the capital letters.

3. I and j were anciently but one character, as were likewise u and v.

4. W is not found in Latin words, and k occurs only at the beginning of a few words before a, and even in these c is commonly used, except in their abbreviated form; as, K or Kal. for Kalenda or Calenda, the Calends.

5. Y and z are found only in words derived from the Greek.

6. H, though called a letter, only denotes a breathing, or aspiration.

DIVISION OF LETTERS.

§ 3. Letters are divided into vowels and consonants.

1. The vowels are a, e, i, o, u, y.
- The consonants are divided into
- | | | |
|---|------------------------------|---------------------|
| { | Liquids, | l, m, n, r. |
| | Labials, | p, b, f, v. |
| | | Palatals, |
| | Linguals, | |
| | Sibilant, | s. |
| | Double consonants, | x, z. |
| | Aspirate, | h. |

2. X is equivalent to cs or gs; z to ts or ds; and, except in compound words, the double consonant is always written, instead of the letters which it represents. In some Greek words x is equivalent to chs.

DIPHTHONGS.

§ 4. Two vowels, in immediate succession, in the same syllable, are called a diphthong.

The diphthongs are ae, ai, au, ei, eu, oe, oi, ua, ue, ui, uo, uu, and yi. Ae and oe are frequently written together, æ, œ.

PUNCTUATION.

§ 5. The only mark of punctuation used by the ancients was a point, which denoted pauses of different length, according as it was placed at the top, the middle, or the bottom of the line. The moderns use the same marks of punctuation, in writing and printing Latin, as in their own languages, and assign to them the same power.

Marks of quantity and of accent are sometimes found in Latin authors, especially in elementary works:—

1. There are three marks of quantity, viz. $\grave{}$, $\bar{}$, \circ ; the first denotes that the vowel over which it stands is short; the second, that it is long; the third, that it is doubtful, that is, sometimes long and sometimes short.

2. There are also three written accents—the acute ($\acute{}$), the grave ($\grave{}$), and the circumflex (\circ). These were used by the old grammarians to denote the rising and sinking of the voice in the Roman mode of pronouncing words. (See §§ 14 and 15.) In modern elementary Latin works, the acute marks the emphatic syllable of a word, (§ 16), the grave distinguishes certain particles from other words spelled in the same manner; as, quòd, because; quod, which; and the circumflex is placed over certain penultimate and final syllables that are formed by contraction.

The diæresis (\circ) denotes that the vowel over which it stands does not form a diphthong with the preceding vowel; as, aër, the air. It is used principally with ae, ai, and œ.

ORTHOËPY.

The ancient pronunciation of the Latin language being in a great measure lost, the learned, in modern times, have applied to it those principles which regulate the pronunciation of their own languages; and hence has arisen, in different countries, a great diversity of practice.

The various systems now prevalent in Europe, may, however, be reduced to two—the Continental and the English—the former prevailing, with only slight diversities, in most of the countries of continental Europe, and the latter in England. Their principal difference is found in the pronunciation of the vowels and diphthongs, since, in both methods, the consonants are pronounced in nearly the same manner.

THE CONTINENTAL METHOD.

[According to this system, each of the vowels, when standing at the end of a syllable, is considered as having but one sound, which, however, may be either short or long. Thus,

Short â , as in hat.	Long ô , as in no.
Long ā , as in father.	Short ū , as in tub.
Short ê , as in met.	Long û , as in full.
Long ē , as in there.	æ or œ , as e in there.
Short i , as in sit.	au , as ou in our.
Long ī , as in machine.	eu , as in feudal.
Short ö , as in not.	ei , as i in ice.

REMARK. These sounds are sometimes slightly modified when followed by a consonant in the same syllable.]

THE ENGLISH METHOD.

In the following rules for dividing and pronouncing Latin words, regard has been had both to English analogy and to the laws of Latin accentuation. See § 14 and 15. The basis of this system is that which is exhibited by Walker in his "Pronunciation of Greek and Latin Proper Names." To pronounce correctly, according to this method, a knowledge of the following particulars is requisite:—

1. Of the sounds of the letters in all their combinations.
2. Of the quantities of the penultimate and final syllables.
3. Of the place of the accent, both primary and secondary.
4. Of the mode of dividing words into syllables.

+ OF THE SOUNDS OF THE LETTERS.

I. OF THE VOWELS.

§ 7. A vowel, when ending an accented syllable, has always its long English sound; as, pā-ter, de-ŭt, vī-vus, tū-tus, tū-ba, Ty-rus; in which the accented vowels are pronounced as in fatal, metre, vital, total, tutor, tyrant.

1. A, at the end of an unaccented syllable, has nearly the sound of a in father or in ah, but less distinct or prolonged; as, mu'-ea, e-pis'-tō-la, a-cer'-bus, Pal-a-mē'-des; pronounced mu'-zah, etc.

2. E, o, and u, at the end of an unaccented syllable, have nearly the same sound as when accented, but shorter and less distinct; as, re'-te, vo'-lo, u'-su-i.

3. (a.) I final has always its long sound; as, qui, au'-di, le-gā'-ti.

REM. 1. The final i of tibi and sibi has its short sound.

(b.) I, at the end of an unaccented syllable not final, has an indistinct sound like short e; as, Fa'-bi-us (fā'-be-us), phi'-los'-ō-phus (phē'-los'-o-phus).

Exc. I has its long sound in the first syllable of a word the second of which is accented, when it either stands alone before a consonant, as in i'-dō'-ne-us, or ends a syllable before a vowel, as in fi'-ē'-bam.

REM. 2. Y is always pronounced like i in the same situation.

§ 8. A vowel has always its short English sound, when followed by a consonant in the same syllable; as, mag'-nus, reg'-num, fin'-go, hoc, fus'-tis, cyg'-nus, in which the vowels are pronounced as in magnet, seldom, finish, copy, lustre, symbol.

EXCEPTION 1. A, when it follows qu before dr and rt, has the sounds of a in quadrant and in quart; as, qua'-dro, quad-ra-gin'-ta, quar'-tus. In other connections a before r has the sound of a in part; as, par'-tī-ceps, ar'-ma; except when followed by another r, as in par'-ri-ci-da.

Exc. 2. Es, at the end of a word, is pronounced like the English word ease; as, ig'-nes, au'-des.

Exc. 3. Os, at the end of plural cases, is pronounced like ose in dose; as, nos, il'-los, dom'-t-nos.

Exc. 4. Post is pronounced like the same word in English; so also are its compounds; as, post'-quam, post'-e-a; but not its derivatives; as, pos-trē'-mus.

Exc. 5. E, i and y before final r, or before r in a syllable not final, when followed in the next syllable by any other consonant, except r, have the sound of e and i in the English words her and fir; as, fer, fert, fer'-tī-lis; hir, hir'-cus, myr'-tus.

II. OF THE DIPHTHONGS.

§ 9. æ and œ are always diphthongs unless separated by diæresis. They are pronounced as e would be in the same situation; as, æ'-tas, œs'-tas, pæ'-na, œs'-trum.

1. Ai, ei, oi, and yi, usually have the vowels pronounced separately. When they are accented, and followed by another vowel, the i is pronounced like initial y, and the vowel before it has its long sound; as, Maia, Pompeius, Troia, Harpyia; pronounced Ma'-ya, Pom-pe'-yus, Tro'-ya, Har-py'-ya.

REMARK 1. Æ, when a diphthong and not followed by another vowel, is pronounced like i; as in hæi, ow'-æis.

2. Au, when a diphthong, is pronounced like aw; as, laus, au'-rum, pronounced laws, etc.

REM. 2. In the termination of Greek proper names, the letters œu are pronounced separately; as, Men-e-læ-us.

3. Eu, when a diphthong, is pronounced like long u; as, hœu, Orpheus (or'-phuse), Eu-phrā-tes.

REM. 3. The letters eu are pronounced separately in the terminations œus and eum of Latin nouns, and of all adjectives, whether Greek or Latin, except neuter; as, ur'-ce-us, m'-us, m'-um, e'-um. In other situations they form a diphthong; as, Eu-rō'-pa, Thē'-scus, e'-hœu.

4. Ua, ue, ui, uo, uu, when diphthongs, are pronounced like wa, we, etc.; as, lin'-gua, quē'-ror, sua'-de-o, quō'-tus, ē'-quus. They are always diphthongs after q, usually also after g, and often after s.

5. Ui in cui and huic, when monosyllables, is pronounced like ui, and by some like long i.

III. OF THE CONSONANTS.

§ 10. The consonants have, in general, the same power in Latin as in English words.

The following cases, however, require particular attention.

C.

C has the sound of s before e, i, and y, and the diphthongs æ, œ, and eu; as, cē'-do, cī'-bus, Cæ'-sar, cæ'-lum, ceu, Cy'-rus. In other situations, it has the sound of k; as, Cā'-to, cru'-dus, lac.

1. Ch has always the sound of k; as, charta (kar'-tah), machīna (mak'-ē-nah).

Exc. C, following or ending an accented syllable, before i followed by a vowel, and also before eu and yo, has the sound of sh; as, socia (so'-she-ah), caduceus (ca-du'she-us), Sicyon (sish'-e-on).

REMARK. In the pronunciation of the ancient Romans, the hard sound of c and g seems to have been retained in all their combinations.

G.

G has its soft sound, like j, before e, i, and y, and the diphthongs æ and œ; as ge'-nus, ag'-t-lis, Gy'-ges, Gæ-tū'-li. In other situations, it has its hard sound, as in bag, go.

Exc. When g comes before g soft, it coalesces with it in sound; as, agger (aj'-er), exaggeratio (ex-aj-e-ra'-she-o).

§ 11. S has generally its hissing sound, as in so, thus.

Exc. 1. (æ) When si followed by a vowel is immediately preceded by a consonant in an accented syllable, the s has the sound of sh; as, Per'-si-a (per'-she-a).

14 QUANTITIES OF PENULTIMATE AND FINAL SYLLABLES.

(b.) But when si or si followed by a vowel is immediately preceded by an accented vowel, the s or z has the sound of zh; as, As-pa'-si-a (as-pa'-zhe-ah), Sa-ba'-zi-a (sa-ba'-zhe-ah).

NOTE. In a few proper names, s preceded by a vowel in an accented syllable and followed by i before another vowel, has the sound, not of zh, but of sh; as, A'-si-a (a'-she-a): so Sosia, Theodosia, Lysias.

Exc. 2. S, at the end of a word, after e, æ, au, b, m, n, and r, has the sound of z; as, res, æs, laus, trabs, hi'-ems, lens, Mars.

English analogy has also occasioned the s in Cæ'-sar, cæ-sū'-ra, mī'-ser, mut'-sa, re-sid'-u-um, cau'-sa, ro'-sa, and their derivatives, and in some other words, to take the sound of z. Cæs-a-re'-a, and the oblique cases of Cæsar, retain the hissing sound; so likewise the compounds of trans; as, trans'-e-o.

T.

§ 12. 1. T, following or ending an accented syllable before i followed by a vowel, has the sound of sh; as, ratio (ra'-she-o), Sulpi-tius (sul-pish'-e-us).

Exc. T, in such case, retains its hard sound (a) after s, t, or x; as, Sal-lus'-ti-us, Brut'-ti-i, Sex'-ti-us: (b) in proper names in tion and tyon; as, Eu-ryt'-i-on, Am-phic'-ty-on; and (c) in old infinitives in er; as, flec'-ti-er, for flec'-ti.

X.

2. X, at the beginning of a syllable, has the sound of z; at the end, that of ks; as, Xenóphon (zen'-o-phon); axis (ak'-sis).

Exc. 1. When ex or ux is followed by a vowel in an accented syllable, x has the sound of gz; as, exemplum (eg-zem'-plum), ux'-o'-ri-us (ug-zo'-re-us), ine-xhaustus (in-eg-zaus'-tus).

Exc. 2. X, ending an accented syllable before i followed by a vowel, and before u ending a syllable, has the power of ksh; as, noxius (nok'-she-us), pezuí (pek'-shu-i).

REMARK. Cæ and ph, before th, in the beginning of a word, are silent; as, Chthonia (tho'-ni-a), Phthia (thi'-a). Also in the following combinations of consonants, in the beginning of words of Greek origin, the first letter is not sounded:—mne-mon'-i-ca, gnæ'-vus, ime'-sis, Cte'-si-as, Ptol-e-mæ'-us, psal'-lo.

OF THE QUANTITIES OF THE PENULTIMATE AND FINAL SYLLABLES.

§ 13. 1. The quantity of a syllable is the relative time occupied in pronouncing it.

2. A short syllable requires, in pronunciation, half the time of a long one.

REM. The penultimate syllable, or penult, is the last syllable but one. The antepenult is the last syllable but two.

The quantity of a syllable is generally to be learned from the rules of prosody, §§ 282—301; but for the convenience of the student, the following general rules are here inserted:—

3. A vowel before another vowel or h is short.

4. Diphthongs, not beginning with u, are long.

5. A vowel before x, z, j, or any two consonants, except a mute followed by a liquid, is long by position, as it is called.

6. A vowel naturally short before a mute followed by a liquid is common, i. e. either long or short.

In this Grammar, when the quantity of a penult is determined by one of the preceding rules, it is not marked; in other cases, except in dissyllables, the proper mark is written over its vowel.

To pronounce Latin words correctly, it is necessary to ascertain the quantities of their last two syllables only; and the rules for the quantities of final syllables would, for this purpose, be unnecessary, but for the occasional addition of enclitics. As these are generally monosyllables, and, for the purposes of accentuation, are considered as parts of the words to which they are annexed, they cause the final syllable of the original word to become the penult of the compound. But as the enclitics begin with a consonant, the final vowels of all words ending with a consonant, if previously short, are, by the addition of an enclitic, made long by position. It is necessary, therefore, to learn the quantities of those final syllables only which end with a vowel.

OF ACCENTUATION.

I. OF LATIN ACCENTS.

§ 14. 1. Accent, in Latin, signifies the rising and falling of the voice in pronouncing the syllables of a Latin word. It is a general rule of the Latin language, that every word has its accent. The enclitics, however, have no accent of their own, but they modify the accent of the words to which they are annexed, and prepositions lose their accent, when they precede the cases which they govern.

2. The Latin language has three accents, the acute (´), or rising tone, the grave (`), or falling tone, and the circumflex (˘), composed of the acute and the grave, i. e. of the rising and the falling tone.

3. A monosyllable, when short by nature, takes the acute, when long by nature, the circumflex accent; as, pīx, ēi, pārs; dōs, fās, spēs.

4. In words of two syllables, the penult is always accented; as, pā'ter, mā'ter, pen'-na.

REM. 1. Words of two syllables have the circumflex accent, when the vowel of the penult is naturally long and that of the last syllable short; as, Rō-mā, mō-sē, tē-cē, jā-ris; if otherwise, they have the acute; as, hō-mō, dē-us, Rō-mā (abl.), and ar'-et, in which a is long only by position.

5. In words of more than two syllables, if the penult is long, it is accented; but if it is short, the accent is on the antepenult; as, a-mī'-cus, dom'-i-nus.

REM. 2. When the accent of a word of more than two syllables falls upon the penult, it may be either the circumflex or the acute according as the last syllable is short or long. The antepenult can take no accent except the acute, and in no case can the accent be drawn farther back than to the antepenult.

Exc. Vocatives of the second declension in i, instead of ie, from nominatives in ius, and genitives in i, instead of ii, are accented as they would be, if the rejected letters were annexed, i. e. with the acute upon the penult, even when it is short; as, Vir-gl-i; Va-lē-ri, in-gē-ni. So, also, the compounds of facio with words which are not prepositions; as, cal-e-fā-cū, tep-e-fā-cū.

§ 15. If the penult is common, the accent, in prose, is upon the antepenult; as, vol'-ū-cris, phar'-ē-tra, iū'-i-que: but genitives in ius, in which i is common, accent their penult in prose; as, u-nī'-us, is-tī'-us.

REM. 3. All the syllables of a Latin word, except that on which the acute or circumflex accent falls, are supposed to have the grave accent, and were pronounced with the lower tone.

1. The rules for the accentuation of compound and simple words are the same; as, se'-cum, sub'-e-o.

2. In accentuation, the enclitics que, ne, ve, and also those which are annexed to pronouns,* are accounted constituent parts of the words to which they are subjoined; as, i'-ta, i'-ā-que; vi'-rum, vi'-rum'-que. X

II. OF ENGLISH ACCENTS.

§ 16. Accent, in English, is a particular stress of voice upon certain syllables of words. Cf. § 5, 2.

According to the English method of pronouncing Latin, a word may have two, three, or even four accents. That accent which is nearest to the termination of the word, and which always corresponds in position with the Latin accent, is called the primary or principal accent, and the secondary accent is that which next precedes the primary. The third and fourth accents, in like manner, precede the secondary, and are subject in all respects to the same rules; as, pá-ter, má-ter, ser-mó-nes, dom'-i-nis; pe-ric'-i-lum, con'-ju-ra'-ti-o, op'-por-tu'-ni-tá-tes, ex-er'''-ci-tá'''-ti-on'-i-bus-que.

1. If only two syllables precede the primary accent, the secondary accent is on the first; as, mod''-e-rá-tus, tol''-e-rab'-i-lis.

2. If three or four syllables stand before the primary accent, the secondary accent is placed, sometimes on the first, and sometimes on the second syllable; as, de-mon''-stra-ban'-tur, ad''-o-les-cen'-ti-a.

3. Some words which have only four syllables before the primary accent, and all which have more than four, have three accents; as, mod''-e-ra''-ti-ō-nis, tol''-e-ra-bil''-i-ō-rem, ex-er'''-ci-ta''-ti-ō-nis.

DIVISION OF WORDS INTO SYLLABLES.

V O W E L S .

§ 17. Every Latin word is to be divided into as many syllables, as it has separate vowels and diphthongs.

REMARK. In the following rules, the term vowel includes not only single vowels, but diphthongs; and when a particular vowel is mentioned, a diphthong, also, ending with that vowel is intended.

C O N S O N A N T S .

SPECIAL RULES.

§ 18. REMARK. The following special rules, relating to particular letters or to particular combinations of letters, are in all cases to be regarded rather than the general rules, §§ 19-23, when the latter are inconsistent with the former.

1. H, when standing alone between two vowels, is always joined to the vowel that follows it.

Thus, mi'-hi, tra'-hē-re, co'-hors, co''-hor-ta'-ti-o.

* These are te, me, ge, ce, cine, and dem; as, tute, egomet, meapte, hices, hiccine, idem.

2. Ch, ph, and th, in the division of words into syllables, are considered, not as separate letters, but as single aspirated mutes, and hence are never separated.

Thus, A-chil'-les, Ach''-ra-dt'-na, Neph'-ē-le, Tē'-thys.

3. Gl, tl, and thl, when standing alone between any two vowels, unless the first be u, and tl after u are always separated.

Thus, Ēg'-le, Ag-lau'-rus, At'-las, ath-le't'-i-cus;—Pub'-li-us, Pub'-lic'-ō-la, res-pub'-li-ca.

4. In writing syllables, x, when standing alone between two vowels, is united to the vowel before it, but, in pronouncing such syllables, its elementary sounds are separated.

Thus, sax'-um (sak'-sum); ax-il'-la (ak-sil'-lah); ex-em'-plum (eg-zem'-plum); ux-o'-ri-us (ug-zo'-re-us).

GENERAL RULES.

I. SIMPLE WORDS.

§ 19. A.—A single Consonant between two Vowels.

1. A single consonant, or a mute with l or r, between the last two vowels of a word, or between the vowels of any two unaccented syllables, must be joined to the latter vowel.

Thus, t in pā'-ter and au'-tem; th in ā'-ther; cl in Hi-er'-ō-cles; q in ā'-qua; cr in ā'-cris and vol'-ū-cris; chr in ā'-chras; r in tol''-e-ra-bil'-i-us; m in cl''-y-mo-l'-gi-a; l in am''-bu-lā-tō'-ri-us; and gr in per''-e-gri-na'-ti-o. Respecting ch and th cf. § 18, 2.

Exc. Tib'-i and sib'-i are commonly excepted.

§ 20. 2. A single consonant, or a mute with l or r, before the vowel of an accented syllable, must be joined to the accented vowel.

Thus, t in i-tin'-ē-ra; d in vi-dē'-to; th in α-the'-ri-us; cl in Eu-clī'-des and Her''-a-clē'-a; gr in α-gres'-tis and α-gric'-ō-la; pr in ca-pre'-ō-lus; q in α-quā'-ri-us; and phr in Eu-phrā'-tes.

§ 21. 3. A single consonant after the vowel of any accented syllable, except a penult, must be joined to the accented vowel.

Thus, m in dom'-i-nus and dom'-i-na'-ti-o; t in pat'-ē-ra; th in Scyth'-i-a; and q in aq'-ui-la (ak'-we-lah), and Aq'-ui-ta'-ni-a (ak''-we-ta'-ne-ah).

4. When a mute with l or r follows the vowel of any accented syllable, except the penult, the mute is to be joined to the accented vowel.

Thus, cr in ac'-ri-ter, ac''-ri-mo'-ni-a; tr in det''-ri-men'-tum; pr in cap'-ri-pes, cap''-ri-mul'-gus, phl in Paph''-la-go'-ni-a; and phr in Aph''-ro-di'-i-a. Respecting phl and phr cf. § 18, 2.

✕ EXCEPTIONS TO THE 3D AND 4TH RULES.

Exc. 1. A single consonant, or a mute with l or r, after an accented a, e, or o, and before two vowels the first of which is e, i, or y, must be joined to the syllable following the accent.

Thus, d in ra'-d-us, ta'-d-um, me''-d-i'-tor; r in ha'-re-o, Ca''-ry-d'-tes; ch in bra'-chi-um; q in re'-qui-es, re''-qui-es-co; tr in pa'-tri-us, CE-no'-tri-a; and r and l in ce''-re-a'-li-a.

Exc. 2. A single consonant or a mute with l or r, after an accented u, must be joined to the vowel following it.

Thus, r in lu'-ri-dus, au'-re-us; cr in Eu'-cri-tus; gl in ju'-glans; and pl in Nau'-pli-us, du'-pli-co, and du''-pli-ca-tio. Cf. § 18, 3.

§ 22. B.—Two Consonants between two Vowels.

Any two consonants, except a mute followed by l or r in the cases before mentioned, when standing between two vowels, must be separated.

Thus, rp in cor'-pus, rm in for'-ma and ger-mā'-nus; rv in ca-ter'-va; sc in ad-o-les'-cens; nn in an'-nus; phth in aph'-tha; cch in Bac'-chus and Bac''-cha-na'-li-a; and thl in ath-lē'-ta.

C.—Three or four Consonants between two Vowels.

1. When three consonants stand between any two vowels, the last, or, if that be l or r after a mute, the two last, are joined to the latter vowel.

Thus, mpt in emp'-tor, ad-emp'-ti-o; str in fe-nes'-tra; mpl in ex-em'-plum; rthr in ar-thri'-tis.

2. When four consonants stand between two vowels, two are joined to each vowel; as, nstr in trans-trum.

II. COMPOUND WORDS.

§ 23. 1. In dividing a compound word into syllables the component parts are to be separated, if the former part ends with a consonant; as, ab-es'-se, in'-ers, cir'-cum-er'-ro, su'-pēr-est, sub'-i-tus, præ-ter'-e-a, trans'-i-tur, sub'-stru-o. So, also, if a consonant is inserted to prevent hiatus, it is joined to the preceding vowel; as, prod'-e-o, red'-e-o, sed-il'-i-o.

2. But if the former part either ends with a vowel, or has dropped its termination, it is to be divided like a simple word; as, def'-ē-ro, dil'-i-gens, be-nev'-o-lus, præs'-to, eg'-ō-met; — po'-tes, po-tes'-tis, an''-i-mad-ver'-to, ve'-ne-o (from venum, eo), mag-nan'-i-mus, am-bā'-ges, lon-gæ'-vus.

ETYMOLOGY.

§ 24. 1. Etymology treats of the different classes of words, their derivation, and their various inflections.

2. The classes, into which words are divided in reference to their significance, are called Parts of Speech.

3. The parts of speech in Latin are eight—Substantive or Noun, Adjective, Pronoun, Verb, Adverb, Preposition, Conjunction, and Interjection.

4. The first four are inflected; the last four, which are sometimes called Particles, are not inflected, except that some adverbs change their termination to express comparison.

REM. Substantives, pronouns, and adjectives are often included by grammarians under the general term nouns; but, in this Grammar, the word noun is used as synonymous with substantive only.

§ 25. 1. To verbs belong Participles, Gerunds, and Supines, which partake of the meaning of the verb, and the inflection of the noun.

2. Inflection, in Latin grammar, signifies a change in the termination of a word. It is of three kinds—declension, conjugation, and comparison.

3. Nouns, adjectives, pronouns, participles, gerunds, and supines, are declined; verbs are conjugated, and adjectives and adverbs are compared.

NOUNS.

§ 26. 1. A substantive or noun is the name of an object.

2. A proper noun is the name of an individual object; as, Cæsar; Rōma, Rome; Tibēris, the Tiber.

3. A common or appellative noun is the name of a class of objects, to each of which it is alike applicable; as, hōmo, man or a man; avis, a bird; quercus, an oak; leo, a lion; mendacium, a falsehood.

4. A collective noun is one which, in the singular number, denotes a collection of individuals; as, exercitus, an army.

REM. 1. The following are examples of nouns used as collectives, viz. exercitus, gens, juventus, multitudo, nobilitas, plebs, populus, turba, vis, and vulgus.

5. An abstract noun is the name of a quality, action, or other attribute; as, bonitas, goodness; gāudium, joy; festinatio, haste.

REM. 2. A concrete, in distinction from an abstract noun, is one which denotes an object that has an actual and independent existence; as, Rōma, hōmo, populus, ferrum.

6. A material noun is the name of a substance considered in the gross; as, lignum, wood; ferrum, iron; cibus, food.

REM. 3. Proper, abstract, and material nouns become common, when employed to denote one or more of a class of objects. A verb in the infinitive mood is often used as an abstract noun.

7. To nouns belong gender, number, and case.

REM. 4. Adjectives and participles have likewise different genders, numbers, and cases, corresponding to those of nouns.

GENDER.

§ 27. 1. The gender of a noun is its distinction in regard to sex.

2. Nouns have three genders—the masculine, the feminine, and the neuter.

3. The gender of Latin nouns is either natural or grammatical.

4. Those nouns are naturally masculine or feminine, which are used to designate the sexes; as, vir, a man; mulier, a woman.

5. Those are grammatically masculine or feminine, which, though denoting objects that are neither male nor female, take adjectives of the form appropriated to nouns denoting the sexes.

Thus, dominus, a lord, is naturally masculine, because it denotes a male; but sermo, speech, is grammatically masculine, because, though not indicative of sex, it takes an adjective of that form which is appropriated to nouns denoting males.

6. The grammatical gender of Latin nouns depends either on their signification, or on their declension and termination. The following are the general rules of gender, in reference to signification. Many exceptions to them, on account of termination, occur: these will be specified under the several declensions.

§ 28. MASCULINES. 1. Names, proper and appellative, of all male beings are masculine; as, Homērus, Homer; pāter, a father; consul, a consul; ēquus, a horse.

As proper names usually follow the gender of the general name under which they are comprehended; hence,

2. Names of rivers, winds, and months, are masculine, because fluvius, ventus, and mensis, are masculine; as, Tibēris, the Tiber; Aquilo, the north wind; Aprilis, April.

Exc. Styx and some names of rivers in a and e are feminine. §§ 62, and 41, 1.

3. Names of mountains are sometimes masculine, because mons is masculine; as, Othrys, a mountain of Thessaly; but they usually follow the gender of their termination; as, hic Atlas*, hæc Ida, hoc Soracte.

§ 29. FEMININES. 1. Names, proper and appellative, of all female beings are feminine; as, Helēna, Helen; māter, a mother; juvenca, a heifer.

2. Names of countries, towns, trees, plants, ships, islands, poems, and gems, are feminine; because terra, urbs, arbor, planta, nāvis, insula, fabula, and gemma, are feminine; as,

Ægyptus, Egypt; Corinthus, Corinth; pīrus, a pear-tree; nardus, spikenard; Centaurus, the ship Centaur; Sāmos, the name of an island; Eunūchus, the Eunuch, a comedy of Terence; amethystus, an amethyst.

Exc. Names of countries and islands in um, i, and (plur.) a, trum, are neuter.—Names of towns in i, trum; four in o, nis, viz. Trusino, Hippo, Narbo, and Sulmo, with Tenes, Taras, and Canopus, are masculine. Names of towns in um or on, i, and (plur.) a, trum; those in e and ur of the third declension, indeclinable nouns in i and y, and some barbarous names, as Suthul, Hispul and Gadir are neuter.—Names of trees and plants in er of the third declension, (§ 60), with baccar and ribur are neuter. A few names in us, i, (§ 50), with oleaster, pinaster, Styrax and unedo are masculine.—A few names of gems in us, i, are also masculine.

* To distinguish the gender of Latin nouns, grammarians write hic before the masculine, hæc before the feminine, and hoc before the neuter.

§ 30. COMMON AND DOUBTFUL GENDER. Some words are either masculine or feminine. These, if they denote things animate, are said to be of the common gender; if things inanimate, of the doubtful gender.

Of the former are pārens, a parent; bos, an ox or cow: of the latter, fais, an end.

The following nouns are of the common gender:—

Adolescens, a youth.	Exsul, an exile.	Palumbes, a wood-pigeon.
Affinis, a relative by marriage.	Grus, a crane.	Pārens, a parent.
Ales, a bird.	Hospes, a guest, a host.	Par, a male.
Antistes, a chief priest.	Hostis, an enemy.	Præses, a president.
Auctor, an author.	Index, an informer.	Præsul, a chief priest.
Augur, an augur.	Infans, an infant.	Princeps, a prince or princess.
Bos, an ox or cow.	Interpres, an interpreter.	Serpens, a serpent.
Cānis, a dog.	Jūdex, a judge.	Sacerdos, a priest or priestess.
Civis, a citizen.	Juvēnis, a youth.	Satelles, a life-guard.
Cōmes, a companion.	Martyr, a martyr.	Sus, a swine.
Conjux, a spouse.	Miles, a soldier.	Testis, a witness.
Consort, a consort.	Municeps, a burgess.	Vātes, a prophet.
Conviva, a guest.	Mus, a mouse.	Verna, a slave.
Custos, a keeper.	Nēmo, nobody.	Vindex, an avenger.
Dux, a leader.	Obses, a hostage.
	Patruēlis, a cousin.

The following hexameters contain nearly all the above nouns:—

Conjux, atque pārens, princeps, patruēlis, et infans,
 Affinis, vindex, jūdex, dux, milēs, et hestis,
 Augūr, et antistes, juvēnis, conviva, sacerdos,
 Mūnī-que-cēpa, vātēs, adolescens, civis, et auctor,
 Custōs, nēmo, cōmes, testis, sus, bōs-que, cānis-que,
 Pro consorte tōri par, præsul, verna, sātelles,
 Mus-que obses, consors, interpres, et exsul, et hospes.

§ 31. 1. When nouns of the common gender denote males, they take a masculine adjective; when they denote females, a feminine.

2. The following are either masculine or feminine in sense, but masculine only in grammatical construction:—

Artifex, an artist.	Fur, a thief.	Lātro, a robber.
Auspex, a soothsayer.	Hēres, an heir.	Libēri, children.
Eques, a horseman.	Hōmo, a man or woman.	Pēdes, a footman.

To these may be added personal appellatives of the first declension; as, advēna, a stranger; and some gentile nouns; as, Persa, a Persian.

§ 32. 1. The following, though masculine or feminine in sense, are feminine only in construction:—

Copīæ, troops.	Opēræ, laborers.	Vigīlīæ, watchmen.
Custodiæ, guards.	Prōles, { offspring.
Excubiæ, sentinels.	Subōles, }

2. Some nouns, signifying persons, are neuter, both in their termination and construction; as,

Acroāma, a buffoon.	Mancipium, }	Seortum, }
Auxilia, auxiliaries.	Servitium, } a slave.	Prostibulum, } a prostitute.

3. (a.) In some personal appellatives masculines and feminines are distinguished by different terminations affixed to the same root. The masculines end in us, er, o, tor, etc.; the feminines in a or trix; as, cōquus, cōqua; magister, magistra; lēno, lēna; inventor, inventrix; tibicen, tibictna; āvus, avia; rex, regina; poēta, poētria.

(b.) So also in some names of animals; as, ēquus, ēqua; gallus, gallina; leo, lea and leona. Sometimes the words are wholly different; as, taurus, vacca.

4. Some names of animals are sometimes masculine and sometimes feminine without regard to difference of sex; as, anguis, serpens, dāma, talpa, tigris, colūber and colūbra, etc.

§ 33. EPICENES. Names of animals which include both sexes, but admit of an adjective of one gender only, are called epicene. These commonly follow the gender of their terminations.

Thus, passer, a sparrow, corvus, a raven, are masculine; aquila, an eagle, vulpes, a fox, are feminine; though each of them is used to denote both sexes.

NOTE. This class includes the names of animals, in which the distinction of sex is seldom attended to. When it is necessary to mark the sex, mas or femina is usually added.

§ 34. NEUTERS. Nouns which are neither masculine nor feminine, are said to be of the neuter gender; such are,

1. All indeclinable nouns; as, fas, nefas, nihil, gummi, pondo.

2. Names of letters; as, o longum, long o. But these are sometimes feminine, littera being understood.

3. Words used merely as such, without reference to their meaning; as, pater est dissyllabum; pater is dissyllabic.

4. All infinitives, imperatives, clauses of sentences, adverbs, and other particles, used substantively; as scire tuum, your knowledge; ultimum vale, the last farewell; hoc diu, this (word) diu.

REMARK. 1. Words derived from the Greek retain the gender which they have in that language.

REM. 2. Some nouns have different genders in the singular and plural, and are called heterogeneous nouns. See § 92.

NUMBER.

§ 35. 1. (a.) Number, in nouns, is the form by which they denote whether they represent one object or more than one.

(b.) Latin nouns have two numbers,—the singular and the plural,—which are distinguished by their terminations. The singular number denotes one object; the plural, more than one.

PERSON.

2. The person of a noun or pronoun is the character sustained by the object which it represents, as being the speaker, the person addressed, or the person or thing spoken of.

Hence there are three persons. The speaker is of the first person, the person addressed is of the second person, and the person or thing spoken of is of the third person.

CASES.

§ 36. Many of the relations of objects, which, in English, are denoted by prepositions, are, in Latin, expressed by a change of termination.

Cases are those terminations of nouns, which denote their relations to other words. Latin nouns have six cases; viz. Nominative, Genitive, Dative, Accusative, Vocative, and Ablative.

REMARK. Though there are six cases in each number, no noun has in each number so many different terminations.

§ 37. 1. The nominative denotes the relation of a subject to a finite verb; as, ego scribo, I write. Caius dicit, Caius says.

2. The genitive denotes origin, possession, and many other relations, which, in English, are expressed by the preposition of or by the possessive case; as, Vita Cæsaris, the life of Cæsar; or Cæsar's life.

3. The dative denotes that to or for which any thing is, or is done; as, Ille mihi librum dedit, He gave the book to me.

4. The accusative is either the object of an active verb, or of certain prepositions, or the subject of an infinitive.

5. The vocative is the form appropriated to the name of any object which is addressed.

6. The ablative denotes privation, and many other relations, especially those expressed in English by the prepositions with, from, in, or by.

REMARK. The nominative and vocative are sometimes called casus recti, i. e. the uninflected cases; and the others, casus obliqui; i. e. the oblique or inflected cases.

DECLENSIONS.

§ 38. The regular forming of the several cases in both numbers, by annexing the appropriate terminations to the root, is called declension.

The Latin language has five declensions or modes of declining nouns, distinguished by the termination of the genitive singular, which, in the first declension, ends in æ, in the second in i, in the third in is, in the fourth in us, and in the fifth in ei.

§ 39. The following table exhibits a comparative view of the terminations or case-endings of the five declensions

TERMINATIONS.

Singular.

	I.	II.	III.	IV.	V.
		M. N.	M. N.	M. N.
Nom.	ā,	ūs, ēr, ūm,	ōr, etc. ē, etc.	ūs,	ēs,
Gen.	ae,	ī,	is,	ūs,	ei,
Dat.	ae,	ō,	ī,	ui,	ei,
Acc.	ām,	ūm,	ēm, (īm), ē, etc.	ūm,	ēm,
Voc.	ā,	ē, ēr, ūm,	ōr, etc. ē, etc.	ūs,	ēs,
Abl.	ā,	ō.	ē, (ī.)	ū.	ē.

Plural.

Nom.	ae,	ī,	ā,	ēs, ā, (iā),	ūs,	uā,	ēs,
Gen.	ārūm,	ōrūm,	is,	ūm, (iūm),	uūm,		ērūm,
Dat.	is,	is,	is,	ībūs,	ībūs, (ūbūs),		ēbūs,
Acc.	ās,	ōs,	ā,	ēs, ā, (iā),	ūs,	uā,	ēs,
Voc.	ae,	ī,	ā,	ēs, ā, (iā),	ūs,	uā,	ēs,
Abl.	is,	is,	is,	ībūs.	ībūs, (ūbūs).		ēbūs.

Remarks.

§ 40. 1. The terminations of the nominative, in the third declension, are very numerous. See §§ 55, 58, 62, 66.

2. The accusative singular of masculines and feminines, always ends in m.

3. The vocative singular is like the nominative in all Latin nouns, except those in us of the second declension.

4. The nominative and vocative plural always end alike.

5. The genitive plural always ends in um.

6. The dative and ablative plural always end alike;—in the 1st and 2d declensions, in is; in the 3d, 4th, and 5th, in bus.

7. The accusative plural of masculines and feminines, always ends in s.

8. Nouns of the neuter gender have the accusative and vocative like the nominative, in both numbers; and these cases, in the plural, always end in a.

9. The 1st and 5th declensions contain no nouns of the neuter gender, and the 4th and 5th contain no proper names.

10. Every inflected word consists of two parts—a root, and a termination. The root or crude form, is the part which is not changed by inflection. The termination is the part annexed to the root. The root of a declined word may be found by removing the termination of any of its oblique cases. The case commonly selected for this purpose is the genitive singular.

11. The preceding table exhibits terminations only. In the fifth declension, the e of the final syllable, though unchanged, is considered as belonging to the termination.

FIRST DECLENSION.

§ 41. Nouns of the first declension end in ā, ē, ās, ēs. Those in a and e are feminine; those in as and es are masculine.

Latin nouns of the first declension end only in a. They are thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
Nom.	mū'-sā,	a muse;	Nom.	mu'-sae,	muses,
Gen.	mu'-sae,	of a muse;	Gen.	mu'-sā-rūm,	of muses,
Dat.	mu'-sae,	to a muse;	Dat.	mu'-sis,	to muses,
Acc.	mu'-sām,	a muse;	Acc.	mu'-sās,	muses,
Voc.	mu'-sā,	O muse;	Voc.	mu'-sae,	O muses;
Abl.	mu'-sā,	with a muse.	Abl.	mu'-sis,	with muses.

In like manner decline

An'-la, a hall.	Lit'-ē-ra, a letter.	Sa-git'-ta, an arrow.
Cu'-ra, care.	Lus-cin'-i-a, a nightingale.	Stel'-la, a star.
Ga'-le-a, a helmet.	Mach'-i-na, a machine.	Tō'-ga, a gown.
In'-sū-la, an island.	Pen'-na, a feather, a quill.	Vi'-a, a way.

NOTE. As the Latin language has no article, appellative nouns may be rendered either with or without the English articles a, an, or the, according to their connection.

EXCEPTIONS IN GENDER.

§ 42. 1. Names proper and appellative of men, as, Sulla, Anna; poëta, a poet; nauta, a sailor; and names of rivers, though ending in a, are masculine: § 28, 1 and 2. But the following names of rivers have been used as feminine: viz. Albēla, Allia, Druentia, Garumna, Himēra, Matrōna, Mosella, Trebia. Lēthe is always feminine.

Ossa and Cēta, names of mountains, are masculine or feminine.

2. Hadria, the Adriatic sea, dāma in Virgil and Statius, and talpa in Virgil, are masculine.

EXCEPTIONS IN DECLENSION.

§ 43. Genitive singular. 1. The poets sometimes formed the genitive singular in āi; as, aula, gen. aulāi.

2. Familia, after pāter, māter, filius, or filia, usually forms its genitive in as; as, mater-familias, the mistress of a family; gen. matris-familias; nom. plur. matres-familias or familiārum. Some other words anciently formed their genitive in the same manner.

Genitive plural. The genitive plural of patronymics in es, of several compounds in cōla and gēna, and of some names of nations, is sometimes, especially in poetry, formed in um instead of arum; as, Enēddum, Cœlicōlum, terrigēnum, Lapthum. So amphōrum, drachmārum, for amphōrārum, drachmārum.

Dative and Ablative plural. The following nouns have sometimes abus instead of is, in the dative and ablative plural, especially when it is necessary to distinguish them from the same cases of masculines in us of the second declension having the same root; as, filius et filiābus, to sons and daughters.

Dea, a goddess.
Filia, a daughter.

Equa, a mare.
Mula, a she mule.

The use of a similar termination in anima, actua, liberta, relia, conserua, and some other words, rests on inferior authority.

GREEK NOUNS.

§ 44. Nouns of the first declension in ē, ās, and ēs, and some also in ā, are Greek. Greek nouns in ā are declined like musa, except that they sometimes have ān in the accusative singular; as, Ossa; acc. Ossam, or Ossan.

Greek nouns in e, as, and es, are thus declined in the singular number:—

N. Pe-nel'-ō-pē,
G. Pe-nel'-ō-pēs,
D. Pe-nel'-ō-pē,
Ac. Pe-nel'-ō-pēn,
V. Pe-nel'-ō-pē,
Ab. Pe-nel'-ō-pē.

N. E-nē'-ās,
G. E-nē'-as,
D. E-nē'-as,
Ac. E-nē'-ām or ān,
V. E-nē'-ā,
Ab. E-nē'-ā.

N. An-chr'-ēs,
G. An-chr'-as,
D. An-chr'-as,
Ac. An-chr'-sēn,
V. An-chr'-ēs or ē,
Ab. An-chr'-ēs or ē.

§ 45. In like manner decline

Al'-o-e, aloes.
E-pit'-ō-me, an abridgment.
This'-be.
Bo'-rē-as, the north wind.
Mi'-das.

Ti'-ā'-ras, a turban.
Co-mē'-tes, a comet.
Dy-nas'-tes, a ruler.
Pri-am'-i-des, a son of Priam.
Py-rī'-tes, a kind of stone.

1. Most proper names in es, except patronymics, follow the third declension; but in the accusative they often have both em and en, and in the vocative both es and e. See §§ 80, iv, and 81.

2. Greek nouns of the first declension, which admit of a plural, are declined in that number like the plural of musa.

3. The Latins frequently change the terminations of Greek nouns in ēs and ās into ēs; as, Atrides, Atrida, a son of Atreus; Perses, Persa, a Persian; geō-mētres, geōmētra, a geometrician; Circe, Circa; epitōma, epitōma; grammatica, grammatica, grammar; rhetorice, rhetorica, oratory.—So also tiāras, tiāra.

SECOND DECLENSION.

§ 46. Nouns of the second declension end in ēr, ir, ūs, ūm, os, on. Those ending in um and on are neuter; the rest are masculine.

Nouns in er, us, and um, are thus declined:—

SINGULAR.

A lord.	A son-in-law.	A field.	A kingdom.
N. dōm'-i-nūs,	gē'-nēr,	ā'-gēr,	reg'-nūm,
G. dom'-i-ni,	gen'-ē-ri,	a'-grī,	reg'-ni,
D. dom'-i-nō,	gen'-ē-rō,	a'-grō,	reg'-nō,
Ac. dom'-i-nūm,	gen'-ē-rūm,	a'-grūm,	reg'-nūm,
V. dom'-i-nē,	ge'-nēr,	a'-gēr,	reg'-nūm,
Ab. dom'-i-nō.	gan'-ērō.	a'-grō.	reg'-nō.

PLURAL.

N. dom'-i-ni,	gen'-ē-ri,	a'-gri,	reg'-nā,
G. dom-i-nō-rūm,	gen-e-rō-rūm,	a-grō-rūm,	reg-nō-rūm,
D. dom'-i-nis,	gen'-ē-ri-s,	a'-grī-s,	reg'-ni-s,
Ac. dom'-i-nōs,	gen'-ē-rōs,	a'-grōs,	reg'-nā,
V. dom'-i-ni,	gen'-ē-ri,	a'-gri,	reg'-nā,
Ab. dom'-i-nis.	gen'-ē-ri-s.	a'-grī-s.	reg'-ni-s.

Like dominus decline

An'-i-mus, the mind.	Fō'-cus, a hearth.	Nu'-mē-rus, a number.
Clip'-e-us, a shield.	Gla'-di-us, a sword.	O-ce'-ā-nus, the ocean.
Cor'-vus, a raven.	Lū'-cus, a grove.	Trō'-chus, a trundling-hoop.

NOTE. Nouns in us of the second declension are the only Latin nouns, whose nominative and vocative singular differ in form. See § 40, R. 3.

§ 47. A few nouns in er, like gener, add the terminations to the nominative singular, as a root. They are the compounds of gēro and fēro; as, armiger, -ēri, an armor-bearer; Lucifer, -ēri, the morning star; and the following:—

A-dul'-ter, an adulterer.	Li'-ber, Bacchus.	Pu'-er, a boy.
Cel'-ti-bār, a Celtiberian.	Lib'-ē-ri, (plur.), children.	Sū'-cer, a father-in-law.
I'-ber, a Spaniard.	Pres'-bȳ-ter, an elder.	Ves'-per, the evening.

Mul'-ct-ber, Vulcan, sometimes has this form.

§ 48. 1. All other nouns in er reject the e in adding the terminations, (§ 322, 4), and are declined like ager; thus,

A'-per, a wild boar.	Li'-ber, a book.	Al-ex-an'-der.
Aus'-ter, the south wind.	Ma-gis'-ter, a master.	Is'-ter.
Fā'-ber, a workman.	On'-ā-ger, a wild ass.	Teu'-cer.

2. Vir, a man, with its compounds, and the patritial Trēvir, (the only nouns in ir), are declined like gener.

Like regnum decline

An'-trum, a cave.	Ex-em'-plum, an example.	Præ-sid'-i-um, a defence.
A'-tri-um, a hall.	Ne-go'-ti-um,* a business.	Sax'-um, a rock.
Bel'-lum, war.	Ni'-trum, natron.	Scep'-trum, a sceptre.

EXCEPTIONS IN GENDER.

§ 49. 1. The following nouns in us and os are feminine:—

Abyssus, a bottomless pit.	Dialectos, a dialect.	Miltos, vermilion.
Alvus, the belly.	Diphthongus, a diphthong.	Phārus(os), a light-house.
Antidōtus, an antidote.	Dōmus, a house, home.	Plinthus, the base of a column.
Arctos(us), the Northern Bear.	Erēmus, a desert.	Vannus, a corn-fan.
Carbāsus, a sail.	Hūmus, the ground.

2. Greek nouns in odus (§ 380c), and metros, are likewise feminine; as, synodus, an assembly; diamētros, a diameter.

* Pronounced ne-go'-sho-um. See § 12.

§ 50. Names of countries, towns, trees, plants, etc. are feminine. See § 29, 2.

Yet the following names of plants are masculine:—

Acanthus, bear's-foot .	Ebŭlus, an elder .	Rŭbus, a blackberry-bush .
Amarantus, amaranth .	Hellebŏrus, hellebore .	Tribŭlus, a caltrop .
Asparăgus, asparagus .	Intŭbus, endive .
Calămus, a reed .	Juncus, a bulrush .	And sometimes
Carduus, a thistle .	Raphănus, a radish .	Amarăcus, marjoram .
Dŭmus, a bramble .	Rhamnos, buck-thorn .	Cytisus, snail-clover .

Oleaster and pinaster, names of trees, are also masculine.

The following names of gems are also masculine:—

Beryllus, a beryl .	Chrysoprăsus, chrysoprase .	So also,
Carbuncŭlus, a carbuncle .	Opălus, opal .	Pyrŭpus, gold-bronze .

Chrysolithus, chrysolite, and smaragdus, an emerald, are doubtful.

Names of females in um are feminine: § 29, 1; as, mea Glycerium, Ter.

Names of trees and plants in um are generally neuter; as, apium, parsley; aconitum, wolf's bane.

Cintŭpus, Pontus, Hellespontus, Isthmus, and all plural names in i of countries and towns are masculine. Alŭdus(os) is doubtful.

Names of countries and towns ending in um, or, if plural, in a, are neuter as, Ilium or Iliŏn; Ecbătăna, ŏrum.

§ 51. The following are doubtful, but more frequently masculine:—

Balănus, a date .	Grossus, an unripe fig .	Phasŏlus, a light vessel .
Barbŏtos, a hute .	Pampinus, a vine-leaf .

Atŏmus, an atom, and cŏtus, a distaff, are doubtful, but more frequently feminine.

Pelăgus, the sea, and vŭrus, poison, are neuter.

Vŭlgus, the common people, is neuter, and rarely masculine.

EXCEPTIONS IN DECLENSION.

§ 52. Genitive singular. When the genitive singular ends in ii, the poets frequently contract it into i; as, ingĕni, for ingenii.

Vocative singular. The vocative of nouns in us is sometimes like the nominative, especially in poetry; as, fluvius, Latŭnus, in Virgil. So, audi tu, popŭlus Albănus. Liv.

Proper names in iŭs omit e in the vocative; as, Horatius, Horăti; Virgilius, Virgĭli.

Fĭlius, a son, and genius, a guardian angel, make also fĭli and geni. Other nouns in iŭs, including patricians and possessives derived from proper names, form their vocative regularly in e; as, Delius, Delie; Tirynthius, Tirynthie; Laertius, Laertie.

§ 53. Genitive plural. The genitive plural of some nouns of the second declension, especially of those which denote money, weight and measure, is commonly formed in um, instead of ŏrum: § 322, 4.

Such are particularly nummum, sestertium, denarium, medimnum, jugĕrum, modum, talentum. The same form occurs in other words, especially in poetry; as, deum, libĕrum, Danaum; etc., and sometimes om is found instead of um; as, Achivom. Virg. Cf. § 322, 8.

Deiis, a god, is thus declined :—

Singular.	Plural.
N. de'-us,	N. di'-i, di, or de'-i,
G. de'-i,	G. de-ō'-rum,
D. de'-o,	D. di'-ia, diis, or de'-ia,
Ac. de'-um,	Ac. de'-os,
V. de'-us,	V. di'-i, di, or de'-i,
Ab. de'-o.	Ab. di'-ia, diis, or de'-ia.

Jēsus, or Iēsus, the name of the Savior, has us in the accusative, and u in all the other oblique cases.

GREEK NOUNS.

§ 54. 1. Os and on, in the second declension, are Greek terminations, and are commonly changed, in Latin, into us and um; but sometimes both forms are in use; as, Alphēos, and Alphēus; Ilion and Ilium. Greek names in ros after a consonant commonly change ros into er; as, Alexandros, Alexander; Teucros, Teucer. In a few words ros is changed to rus; as, Codrus, hydrus, and once in Virgil, Teucrus.

Greek nouns are thus declined in the singular number :—

Singular.		Barblton, a lyre.
N. Dē'-lōs,	Andrō'-ge-ōs,	N. bar'-bi-tōn,
G. Dē'-li,	An-dro'-ge-ō, or i,	G. bar'-bi-ti,
D. Dē'-lō,	An-dro'-ge-ō,	D. bar'-bi-tō,
Ac. Dē'-lōn or ūm,	An-dro'-ge-ō, or ōn,	Ac. bar'-bi-tōn,
V. Dē'-lē,	An-dro'-ge-ōs,	V. bar'-bi-tōn,
Ab. Dē'-lō.	An-dro'-ge-ō.	Ab. bar'-bi-tō.

2. The plurals of Greek nouns in os and on are declined like those of dominus and regnum; but the nominative plural of nouns in os sometimes ends in es; as, canephōras.

3. In early writers some nouns in os have a genitive in ē (ov); as, Menandra. Ter.

4. A genitive plural in ōn, instead of ōrum, occurs in the titles of books and in some names of places; as, Georgicōn; Philōnōn aræ. Sall.

5. Greek proper names in eus (see § 9, R. 3), are declined like dominus, except that the vocative ends in eu; but sometimes in the genitive, dative, and accusative also, they retain the Greek form, viz. gen. ēos, dat. ēi (contracted ēi), acc. ēd or ēā, and are of the third declension. See §§ 86, and 806, (1.) So in Lucretius the neuter pelāgus (Greek πῆλαγος, us) has an accusative plural pelāgē for pelagea after the third declension. § 83, 1.—See also respecting a genitive in i of some proper nouns in es, § 73, Rem.—Panthās occurs in Virgil, A. 2, 822, as the vocative of Panthās. Cf. § 81.

THIRD DECLENSION.

§ 55. The number of final letters, in this declension, is twelve. Five are vowels—a, e, i, o, y; and seven are consonants—c, l, n, r, s, t, x. The number of its final syllables exceeds fifty.

REM. The following terminations belong exclusively to Greek nouns; viz. ma, i, y, ān, in, ōn, ūn, ēr, gr, ys, eus, yw, iax, ynx, and plurals in e.

Mode of declining Nouns of the Third Declension.

To decline a word properly, in this declension, it is necessary to know its gender, its nominative singular, and one of its oblique cases; since the root of the cases is not always found entire and unchanged in the nominative. The case usually selected for this purpose is the genitive singular. The formation of the accusative singular, and of the nominative, accusative, and vocative plural, depends upon the gender: if it is masculine or feminine, these cases have one form; if neuter, another.

§ 56. The student should first fix well in his memory the terminations of one of these forms. He should next learn the nominative and genitive singular of the word which is to be declined. If is be removed from the genitive, the remainder will always be the root of the oblique cases, and by annexing their terminations to this root, the word is declined; thus, rupes, genitive (found in the dictionary) rupis, root rup, dative rupi, etc.: so ars, gen. artis, root art, dat. arti, etc.; opus, gen. opëris, root opër, dat. opëri, etc.

RULES FOR FORMING THE NOMINATIVE SINGULAR OF THE THIRD DECLENSION FROM THE ROOT.

I. Roots ending in c, g; b, m, p; u, t, d, and some in r, add s to form the nominative; as, trābis, trabs; hiëmis, hiems; gruis, grus.

REMARK 1. T, d and r before s are dropped; as, nepôtis, nepos; laudis, laus; floris, flos. So bovis, bos, drops v.

REM. 2. C and g before s form x; as, vociis, vox; regis, rex. So vs forms x in nivis, nix. Cf. §§ 3, 2, and 171, 1.

REM. 3. Short t in the root before c, b, p, t, is commonly changed to ð; as, pollicis, pollex; calibis, calebs; principis, princeps; comitis, comes. So ð is changed to t in aucipis, auceps.

REM. 4. Short ð or ð before r in neuters is changed to ä; as, genëris, genüs; tempöris, tempüs.

REM. 5. Short ð before r is changed to t in the masculines cinëris, cinis; cucumëris, cucumis; pulvëris, pulvis; vomëris, vömis.

REM. 6. A few and those mostly monosyllabic roots of masculines and feminines, not increasing in the genitive, add es or is, instead of s alone; as, gen. rüpis, nom. rüpes; gen. auris, nom. auris.

REM. 7. A few neuters add ð to the root to form the nominative; as, rëlis, rëtð; mëris, märð.

II. To roots ending in l and n, to some in r and s, and to those of most neuters in t, no addition is made in forming the nominative; as, animälis, animal; canönis, cänon; honöris, hönor; assis, as.

REMARK 1. Final ön and ñn in the roots of masculines and feminines, become o in the nominative; as, sermönis, sermo; arundñis, arundo.

REM. 2. Final ñn in the roots of neuters becomes ñn in the nominative; as, flumñis, flümén. So also in the masculines, oscen, pecten, tibicen and tubicen.

REM. 3. Tr and br at the end of a root, take ð between them in the nominative; as, patris, pätter; imbris, imber. Cf. §§ 108, 48, and 106.

REM. 4. Short ð is changed to ä in eböris, ëbür; femöris, fëmür; jecöris, jëbür; and roböris, rëbür.

REM. 5. In the roots of neuters at drops t, and üt becomes ut in the nominative; as, poëmätis, poëma; capütis, caput.

REM. 6. Roots of this class ending in repeated consonants drop one of them in the nominative; as, fellis, fel; farris, far; assis, as; bessis, bes.

The following are the two forms of termination in this declension:—

Singular.		Plural
Masc. and Fem.	Neut.	Masc. and Fem.	Neut.

RULES FOR THE OBLIQUE CASES OF NOUNS OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

GENITIVE SINGULAR.

§ 68. 1. The genitive singular of the third declension of Latin nouns always ends in is, in Greek nouns it sometimes ends in os and us.

2. Nouns in a form their genitive in ātis; as, di-a-dē-ma, di-a-dem'-d-tis, a crown; dog-ma, dog-mā-tis, an opinion.

E.

3. Nouns in e change e into is; as, re-te, re'-tis, a net; se-dē-le, se-dē'-lis, a seat.

I.

4. Nouns in i are of Greek origin, and are generally indeclinable; but hydromēh, mead, has hyd-ro-mēh'-d-tis in the genitive.

O.

§ 69. Nouns in o form their genitive in ōnis; as, pe-ūo, pe-vō-nis, a peacock.

REMARK. Patials in o have ois; as, Macédo, -ois; but some have ois; as, Eburōnes, etc. See 3d exception to increments in O, § 267.

Exc. 1. Nouns in do and go form their genitive in ois; as, a-run'-do, a-run'-dō-nis, a reed; i-mā'-go, i-mag'-i-nis, an image.

But four dissyllables—cādo, ādo, ligo and mango; and three trisyllables—conēdo, unēdo, and harpāgo, have ois.

Exc. 2. The following nouns, also, have ois:—Apollo; hōmo, a man; nēmo, nobody; and turbo, a whirlwind.

Cīro, flesh, has, by syncope, carnis. Asio, the name of a river, has Asiōis; Neria, the wife of Mars, Neriōis; from the old nominatives, Anica, and Nerīones.

Exc. 3. Some Greek nouns in o form their genitive in as, and their other cases singular, in o; as, Dido, gen. Didus, dat. Dido, etc.; Argo, -as; but they are sometimes declined regularly; as, Dido, Didōis.

Greek nouns in y have their genitive in gos; as, misys, misjos, or, by contraction, misys.

C.

§ 70. The only nouns in c are d'-lec, e-l'-cis, fish-brine, and lac, lac'-sis, milk.

L. N. R.

Nouns in l, n, and r, form their genitive by adding is; as, con'-sul, con'-sū-lis, a consul; cā'-nen, can'-ē-nis, a rule; hō'-nor, ho'-nō-ris, honor.

So, An'-i-mal, an-i-mā'-lis, an animal.
Vi'-gil, vig'-i-lis, a watchman.
Ty'-tan, Ti-tā'-nis, Titan.
Si'-ren, Si-rē'-nis, a Siren.
Del'-phin, del-phī'-nis, a dolphin.

Cal'-car, cal-cā'-ris, a spur.
Car'-cer, car'-cē-ris, a prison.
A'-mor, a-mō'-ris, love.
Gut'-tur, gut'-tū-ris, the throat.
Mar'-tyr, mar'-tj-ris, a martyr.

Exceptions in

Fel, gall, and mel, honey, double l before l; as, fellis and mellis.

Except

... uters in en form ... in ois; as, flū'-men, flu'-men; glū'-ten, glū'-ten.

... lines, also, form ... a bird which fore-bo- ... a comb; the ... a trumpeter.

... nouns in on form ... outis; as, Leo-
on ... Leo- ... nis

... ter drop e ... as, pō'-t- ... ther.
 ... a shower ... months ... öber,

But crâter, a cup; ôtter, a savior; and lîter, a brick, retain e in the genitive.

2. Far, a kind of corn, has farris; hêpar, the liver, hepâtis; Lar or Lars, Lartis; îter, a journey, has itinêris from the old nominative itiner; Jupter, Jôvis; and cor, the heart, cordis.

3. These four in ur have ôris in the genitive:—îbur, ivory; fêmur, the thigh; jêcur, the liver; rêbur, strength.

Fêmur has also feminis, and jêcur, jecinôris, and jocinôris.

AS.

§ 72. Nouns in as form their genitive in âtis; as, æ'-las, æ-tâ'-tis, age; pi'-ê-tas, pi-e-tâ'-tis, piety.

Exc. 1. As has assis; mâs, a male, mâris; vas, a surety, vâdis; and vâs, a vessel, vâsis. Anas, a duck, has andtis.

Exc. 2. Greek nouns in as form their genitive according to their gender; the masculines in antis, the feminines in âdis or âdos, and the neuters in âtis; as, adâmas, -antis, adamant; lampas, -âdis, a lamp; Pallas, -âdis or -âdos; bucê-ras, -âtis, a species of herb. Arcas, an Arcadian, and Nômas, a Numidian, which are of the common gender, form their genitive in âdis. Mêlas, the name of a river, has Melânis.

ES.

§ 73. 1. Nouns in es form their genitive by changing es into is, îtis, êtis, or ëtis; as, ru'-pes, ru'-pis, a rock; mi'-les, mi'-t-tis, a soldier; sê'-ges, seg'-ê-tis, growing corn; qui-es, qui-ê-tis, rest.

REMARK. A few Greek proper names in es (gen. is) sometimes form their genitive in ei, or, by contraction, i, after the second declension; as, Achilles, is, ei or -i; and a few in æ after the first declension; as, Orestes, is or æ.

2. Those which make îtis are,

Ales, a bird.
Ames, a fowler's staff.
Antistes, a priest.
Cæspes, a turf.
Cômes, a companion.
Eques, a horseman.
Fômes, touchwood.

Gurges, a whirlpool.
Hospes, a guest.
Limes, a limit.
Merges, a sheaf of corn.
Miles, a soldier.
Palmes, a vine-branch.
Pêdes, a foot-soldier.

Poples, the ham.
Satelles, a lifeguard.
Stîpes, the stock of a tree.
Termes, an olive bough.
Trâmes, a by-path.
Vêles, a skirmisher.

3. The following have êtis:—abies, a fir-tree; aries, a ram; indîges, a man deified; interpretes, an interpreter; paries, a wall; sêges, a corn-field; and têges, a mat.

4. The following have êtis:—Obes; Ores, a Cretan; Ubes, a caldron; mag-næ, a loadstone; quies and requies, rest; inquiês, restlessness; and tîpes (used only in acc. and abl.), tapestry.—Some Greek proper names have either êtis or is in the genitive; as, Chrêmes, -êtis, or -is. Dâres, -êtis, or -is.

Exc. 1. Obes, a hostage, and prases, a president, have idâs. Hêres, an heir, and merces, a reward, have êdis; pes, a foot, and its compounds, have êdis.

Exc. 2. Ores has Cerêris; bes, bessis; pras, prâdis; and æs, æris.

IS.

§ 74. Nouns in is have their genitive the same as the nominative; as, au'-ris, au'-ris, the ear; â'-vis, â'-vis, a bird.

Exc. 1. The following have the genitive in ēris:—cinis, ashes; pubis, dust; vomer or vomer, a ploughshare. Cucumis, a cucumber, has ēris and rarely is.

Exc. 2. The following have idīs:—cāpis, a cup; cassis, a helmet; cupis, a point; lapis, a stone; and prēmulsis, an antepast.

Exc. 3. Two have inis:—pollis, fine flour, and sanguis or sanguen, blood.

Exc. 4. Four have is:—Dis, Pluto; lis, strife; Quiris, a Roman; and Samnis, a Samnite.

Exc. 5. Glīs, a dormouse, has gēris.

GREEK NOUNS.

1. Greek nouns in is, whose genitive ends in ios or eos, (ios or eos), form their genitive in Latin in is; as (a.) verbals in is; as, basis, mathēsis, etc. (b.) compounds of polis (πόλις); as, metropōlis, Neapōlis, etc.; and (c.) a few other proper names, as Cherybēdis, Lachēsis, Syr̄tis, etc. In some nouns of this class the Greek genitive is sometimes found; as, Nemēsis, Nemesios.

2. Greek nouns in is, whose Greek genitive is in idos (ἰδος), form their Latin genitive in idīs; as, agis, aspis, ephēmēris, pyrāmis, tyrannis, Ænēis, Iris, Nertis, etc. Tigris has both is and idīs; and in some other words of this class later writers use is instead of idīs.

3. Chēris has Char̄tis; Salām̄is, Salaminis, and Sim̄is, Simocentis.

OS.

§ 75. Nouns in os form their genitive in ōris or ōtis; as, flos, flo-ris, a flower; nē-pos, ne-pō-tis, a grandchild.

The following have ōris:—

Flos , a flower.	Lābos or lābor , labor.	Os , the mouth.
Glos , a husband's sister.	Lēpos or lēpor , wit.	Eos , dawn.
Hōnos or hōnor , honor.	Mos , a custom.

Arbos or arbor, a tree, has ōris.

The following have ōtis:—

Cos , a whetstone.	Monocēros , a unicorn.	Nēpos , a grandchild.
Dos , a dowry.	Rhinocēros , a rhinoceros.	Sacerdos , a priest.

Exc. 1. Custos, a keeper, has custōdis; bos, an ox, bōvis; and os, a bone, ossis.

Exc. 2. Some Greek nouns in os have ōis in the genitive; as, hēros, a hero; Mīnos; Tros, a Trojan; and some Greek neuters in os are used in the third declension in the nominative and accusative only; as, Argos, citos, ēpos, mīlos.

US.

§ 76. 1. Nouns in ūs form their genitive in ēris or ōris; as, gē-nus, gen'-ē-ris, a kind; tem'-pus, tem'-pō-ris, time.

2. Those which make ēris are, acus, (chaff), facus, fānus, gēnus, glōmus, lātus, mānus, ōlus, opus, ponchus, rūchus, scēlus, sidus, ulcus, vellus, vicus and uēnus. In early writers pignus has sometimes pignēris.

3. Those which make ōris are, corpus, dēcus, dedēcus, factus, fēnus, frigus, lēpus, litus, nēnus, pectus, pēcus, pēnus, pignus, stercus, tempus, and tergus.

Exc. 1. These three in ūs have ādis:—incūs, an anvil; pādis, a morass; and subēcūs, a dove-tail. Pēcūs, a brute animal, has pecūdīs.

Exc. 2. These five have ātis:—juventūs, youth; sālūs, safety; senectās, old age; servitūs, slavery; virtūs, virtue.

Exc. 3. Monosyllables in as have āris; as, crus, the leg; jus, right; jus, broth; mus, a mouse; pus, matter; rus, the country; tus, frankincense; except grus, and sus, which have gruis, and suis; and rhus, which has rhois or roris. Tellus, the earth, has tellūris; and Ligus or Ligur, a Ligurian, has Līgūris.

Exc. 4. Fraus, fraud, and laus, praise, have fraudis, laudis.

Exc. 5. Greek nouns in pūs (πύς) have ōdis; as, tripus, tripōdis, a tripod; Edipus, ēdis; but this is sometimes of the second declension.

Exc. 6. Some Greek names of cities in us have antis; as, Amāthūs, Amathuntis. So Trapēzus, Opus, Pessinus, and Selinus.

Exc. 7. Greek nouns ending in eus are all proper names, and have their genitive in eos; as, Orpheus, -eos. But these nouns are found also in the second declension; as, Orpheus, -ē or -i. Cf. § 64, 5.

YS.

§ 77. 1. Nouns in ys are Greek, and make their genitive in ŷis (contracted ŷs), or, as in Greek, yos (υς); as,

Cōtys, gen. Cōtŷis or Cōtys; Tēthys, -ŷis or ŷos. So Atys, Clŷps, Erinnys, Hālys, Olhrys. A few have ŷdis; as, chlāmŷs, chlāmŷdis.

S preceded by a consonant.

2. Nouns in s, with a consonant before it, form their genitive by changing s into is or tis; as, trabs, trā-bis, a beam; hī-ems, hī-ē-mis, winter; pars, par-tis, a part; frons, fron-tis, the forehead.

(1.) Those in bs, ms, and ps; as, scrobs, hiems, stirps, change s into is; except grŷps, a griffin, which has grŷphŷis.

REMARK. Compounds in ceps from cāpio have ipis; as, princeps, princtŷis, a prince. But auceps has aucŷpis.

(2.) Those in ls, ns, and rs, as, puls, gens, ars, change s into tis.

Exc. 1. The following in ns change s into dis:—frons, foliage: glans, an acorn; juglans, a walnut; lens, a nit; and libripens, a weigher.

Exc. 2. Tīryns, a town of Argolis, has Tīrynthis in the genitive.

T.

§ 78. 1. Nouns in t form their genitive in tis. They are, cāput, the head, gen. cap'-tis; and its compounds, occŷput and sincŷput.

X.

2. Nouns in x form their genitive by resolving x into cs or gs, and inserting i before s; as, vox (vocs) vō-cis, the voice; lex (legs) lē-gis, a law.

(1.) Latin nouns in ax have ācis; as, fornax, forndācis, except fax, fācis. Most Greek nouns in ax have ācis; as, thōrax, thorācis; a few have ācis; as, cōrax, cordācis; and Greek names of men in nax have nactis; as, Astyanax, Astyanactis.

(2.) Nouns in ex have ēcis; as, jūdex, judācis: ōdex has ōbticis or objicis; and vibex, vibicis. Nex, prex, (nom. obs.), rēsex and fenīsex have ēcis; ālex, narthex, and vervex have ēcis, and fax, fācis. Lex and rex have ēgis; aquilēx and grex have ēgis; rēmex has remigis; sēnex, sēnis; and supellex, supellectilīa.

(2.) Nouns in is have icis; as, cervix, cervicis; and less frequently icis; as, calix, calicis. But nix has nivis; strix, foreign names of men, and gentile nouns in rix have igis; as, Bitrix, Dumadrix, etc.

(4.) Nouns in ox have ocis; as, vox, vocis; but Cappadox has Cappadocis; Allobrox, Allobrogis; and nox, noctis.

(5.) Of nouns in ux, cruz, dux, trādux, and sux have ducis; lux and Pollex, acis.—Conjux has conjūgis, frux (nom. obs.) frūgis, and fauz, faucis.

(6.) Yz, a Greek termination, has ycis, gcis, or ggis, ggis. Oxyz and oxydnyz, in which x is equivalent to chs (§ 2, 3) have ychis; as, oxyz, onychis.

DATIVE SINGULAR.

§ 79. The dative singular ends in i; as, sermo, dat. sermōni.

Anciently it also ended in e; as, morte dītus. Varro in Gellius. So are for eri, Cic. and Liv.; and jare for jāri. Liv.

ACCUSATIVE SINGULAR.

(a.) The accusative singular of all neuter nouns is like the nominative.

(b.) The accusative singular of masculines and feminines, ends in em. Yet some Latin nouns in is, which do not increase in the genitive, have im, and some Greek nouns have im, in, or a.

1. Many proper names in is, denoting places, rivers, or gods, have the accusative singular in im; as, Hispidis, Tibēris, Anābis; so also Albis, Athēsis, Batis, Arar or Arāris, Bīlītis, Apis, Osiris, Syrtis, etc. These sometimes, also, make the accusative in in; as, Albin. Scaldis has in and em, and Lāris, im, in, and em. Liger has Ligērim.

2. The following also have the accusative in im:—

Amussis, a mason's rule.	Mephitis, foul air.	Sināpis, mustard.
Būris, a plough-tail.	Pelvis, a basin.	Sitis, thirst.
Cannābis, hemp.	Rāvis, hoarseness.	Tussis, a cough.
Cucūmis, (gen. -is), a cucumber.	Secūris, an axe.	Vis, strength.

3. These have im, and sometimes em:—

Febris, a fever. Puppis, the stern. Restis, a rope. Turris, a tower.

But these have em, and rarely im:—

Bipennis, a battle-axe.	Nāvis, a ship.	Sementis, a sowing.
Clāvis, a key.	Præsepis, a stall.	Strigilis, a flesh-brush.
Messis, a harvest.

4. Lens and pars have rarely lentim and partim; and crātim from crates, is found in Plautus.

5. Early writers formed the accusative of some other nouns in im.

Accusative of Greek Nouns.

§ 80. The accusative singular of masculine and feminine Greek nouns sometimes retains the Greek terminations in and a, but often ends, as in Latin, in em or im.

1. Masculine and feminine Greek nouns, whose genitive increases in is or os, impure, that is, with a consonant going before, have their accusative in em or a; as, lampas, lampādis (Greek -δος), lampāda; chlāmya, chlāmgydis, chlāmgydem, or -gda; Helicon, Helicōnis, Helicōna.

REMARK. In like manner these three, which have is pure in the genitive—Trōs, Trōis, Trōem, and Trōa, a Trojan; hēros, a hero; and Minos, a king of Crete.—Āēr, the air; āether, the sky; delphin, a dolphin; and paean, a hymn, have usually a; as, aēra, athēra, delphina, paēna. Pan, a god, has only a.

Exc. 1. Masculines in is, whose genitive increases in is or os impure, have their accusative in im or in; sometimes in idem; Pāris, Parīdis; Parim, or Paridem.

Exc. 2. Feminines in is, increasing impurely in the genitive, though they usually follow the rule, have sometimes im or in; as, Elis, Elīdis; Elin or Elīdem. So tigris, gen. is or īdis; acc. tigrim or tigrin.

II. Masculine and feminine Greek nouns in is not increasing, and in ys, gen. os, form their accusative by changing the s of the nominative into m or n; as, Charybdīs, (gen. Lat. -is, Gr. acc), acc. Charybdīm or -in; Hālys, -yis or -yos, Hālym or -yn. So rhus, gen. rhois, has rhum or rhum.

III. Proper names ending in the diphthong eus, gen. ēi and ēos, have the accusative in ea; as, Thēseus, Thēsea; Tydeus, Tydea. See § 54, 5.

IV. Some Greek proper names in es, whose genitive is in is, have in Latin, along with the accusative in em, the termination en, as if of the first declension; as, Achilles, Achillen; Xerxes, Xerxen; Sophōcles, Sophōclen. Cf. § 45, 1. Some also, which have either ēis or is in the genitive, have, besides ēem, ēta, or em, the termination en; as, Chrēmes, Thāles.

VOCATIVE SINGULAR.

§ 81. The vocative is like the nominative.

REMARK. Many Greek nouns, however, particularly proper names, drop s of the nominative to form the vocative; as, Daphnis, Daphni; Tēthys, Tēthy; Melampus, Melampu; Orpheus, Orpheu. Proper names in es (gen. is) sometimes have a vocative in s, after the first declension; as, Socrātes, Socrāte. § 45, 1.

ABLATIVE SINGULAR.

§ 82. The ablative singular commonly ends in e.

Exc. 1. (a.) Neuters in e, al, and ar, have the ablative in i; as, sedīle, sedīli; animāl, animāli; calcar, calcāri.

(b.) But names of towns in e, and the following neuters in ar, have e in the ablative; viz. baccar, an herb; fur, corn; hēpar, the liver; jūbar, a sunbeam; nectar, nectar; par, a pair; sal, salt. Rēte, a net, has either e or i; and mare, the sea, has sometimes in poetry mare in the ablative.

Exc. 2. (a.) Nouns which have im alone, or both im and in in the accusative, and names of months in er or is, have i in the ablative; as, vis, vim, vi; Tibēris, -im, i; December, Decembri; Aprīlis, Aprīli.

(b.) But Bātis, cannābis, and sināpis, have e or i. Tigris, the tiger, has tigrīde; as a river it has both Tigrīde and Tigri.

Exc. 3. (a.) Nouns which have em or im in the accusative, have their ablative in e or i; as, turris, turre or turri.

(b.) So Elis, acc. Elīdem and Elin, has Elīde or Elī. But restis, and most Greek nouns with īdis in the genitive, have e only; as, Pāris, -īdis, -īde.

Exc. 4. (a.) Adjectives in is, used as nouns, have commonly i in the ablative, but sometimes e; as, familiāris, a friend; natālis, a birthday; sodālis, a companion; trirēmīs, a trireme.—Participles in as, used as nouns, have commonly e in the ablative, but contīnens has i.

(b.) When adjectives in is become proper names, they always have e; as, Jurenātis, Jurenāle. Affinis and cedilis have generally e; as have always jūctis, a youth; rūlis, a rod; and volūcris, a bird.

Exc. 5. (a.) The following, though they have only em in the accusative, have e or i in the ablative, but most of them have oftener e than i:—

Amnis,	Collis,	Ignis,	Pars,	Suppellex,
Anguis,	Convallis,	Imber,	Postis,	Tridens,
Avis,	Corbis,	Mugilis,	Pūgil,	Unguis,
Billis,	Finis,	Orbis,	Sordes,	Vectis,
Civis,	Fustis,	Ovis,	Sors,	Vesper.
Classis,

(b.) Occiput has only i, and rus has either e or i; but rure commonly signifies from the country, and ruri, in the country. Mel has rarely i.

(c.) So also names of towns, when denoting the place where any thing is said to be, or to be done, have the ablative in i; as, Carthagīni, at Carthage; so, Anzūrī and Lacedemōni, and, in the most ancient writers, many other nouns occur with this termination in the ablative. Amālis has i, and very rarely e.

Exc. 6. Nouns in ys, which have ym or yn in the accusative, have their ablative in ye or y; as, Atys, Atye, or Aty.

NOMINATIVE PLURAL.

§ 83. I. The nominative plural of masculines and feminines ends in es; as, sermōnes, rūpes:—but neuters have a, and those whose ablative singular ends in i only, or in e and i, have ia; as, cūpit, capita; sedīle, sedilia; rēte, retia. Aplustre has both a and ia.

1. Some Greek neuters in os have ē in the nominative plural; as, mēlos; nom. plural, mele; (in Greek μέλας, by contraction μέλα).

GENITIVE PLURAL.

II. The genitive plural commonly ends in um; sometimes in ium.

1. Nouns which, in the ablative singular, have i only, or both e and i, make the genitive plural in ium; as, sedīle, sedilī, sedilium; turris, turre or turri, turrium.

2. Nouns in es and is, which do not increase in the genitive singular, have ium; as, nūbes, nubium; hostis, hostium.

Exc. Cinis, jūvénis, fōris, mugilis, prōles, strues, and vātes, have um; so oftener have ōpis, strigilis, and volūcris; less frequently mensis, sēdes, and, in the poets only, ambāges, cādes, clādes, vepres, and celestis.

3. Monosyllables ending in two consonants have ium in the genitive plural; as, urbs, urbium; gens, gentium; arx, arcium.

Exc. Lynx, sphinx, and ops (nom. obsolete) have um.

Most monosyllables in s and x pure have um, but the following have ium; dos, mas, glis, lis, os (ossis), fauz, (nom. obs.) niz, nox, strix, vis, generally fraus and mus; so also fur and ren, and sometimes lar.

4. Nouns of two or more syllables, in ns or rs, and names of nations in as, have commonly ium, but sometimes um; as, cliens, clen-tium or clientum; Arpinas, Arpinatium.

(1.) Other nouns in as generally have um, but sometimes ium; as, atlas, collum or clatium. Pendites and optimates have usually ium.

5. The following have ium:—cáro, compes, linter, imber, üter, venter, Samnis, Quiris, and usually Insüber. Fornax and pálus have sometimes ium.

6. Greek nouns have generally um; as, gigas, gigantum; Arabs, Arábium; Thraz, Thrácum;—but a few, used as titles of books, have sometimes on; as, Epigramma, epigrammáon; Metamorphósis, -eón. The patricial Maleón also is found in Curtius, 4, 13.

REMARK 1. Bos has bowm in the genitive plural.

REM. 2. Nouns which want the singular, form the genitive plural as if they were complete; as, mānes, manium; calites, calitum; ilia, itium; as if from mānis, cales, and ile. So also names of feasts in alia; as, Saturnalia, Saturnaliūm; but these have sometimes orum after the second declension. Ales has sometimes, by epenthesis, alitum. See § 322, 3.

DATIVE AND ABLATIVE PLURAL.

§ 84. The dative and ablative plural end in ibus.

Exc. 1. Bos has obtus and obus, by contraction, for obtibus; sus has sibus by syncope, for sutibus. § 322, 5, and 4.

Exc. 2. Greek nouns in ma have the dative and ablative plural more frequently in is than in ibus; as, poēma, poemāis, or poematibus.

Exc. 3. The poets sometimes form the dative plural of Greek nouns, that increase in the genitive, in si, and, before a vowel, in sin; as, herōis, heroidis; herotsi, or herotsin. Ovid. So in Quintilian, Metamorphosēsi.

ACCUSATIVE PLURAL.

§ 85. The accusative plural ends, like the nominative, in es, ā, ia.

Exc. 1. The accusative plural of masculines and feminines, whose genitive plural ends in ium, anciently ended in is or eis, instead of es; as, partes, gen. partium, acc. pariēs or partēs.

Exc. 2. Greek masculines and feminines, whose genitive increases in is or as impure, have their accusative in as; as, lampas, lampādis, lampādas. So also hēros, herōis, herōas, and some barbarian names of nations have a similar form; as, Brigantias, Allobrogas.

Juplter, and vis, strength, are thus declined:—

Singular.	Singular.	Plural.
N. Ju'-pl-ter,	N. vis,	vi'-res,
G. Jō'-vis,	G. vis,	vir'-i-um,
D. Jō'-vi,	D. —	vir'-i-bus,
Ac. Jō'-vem,	Ac. vim,	vi'-res,
V. Ju'-pl-ter,	V. vis,	vi'-res,
Ab. Jō'-ve.	Ab. vi.	vir'-i-bus.

§ 86. The following table exhibits the principal forms of Greek nouns of the third declension :—

	Nom.	Gen.	Dat.	Acc.	Voc.	Abl.
S.	Lampas,	{ -ādis, -ādos, }	-ādi,	{ -ādem, -āda, }	-as,	-āde.
Pl.	-ādes,	-ādum,	-adībus,	{ -ādes, -ādas, }	-ādes,	-adībus.
S.	Hēros,	-ōis,	-ōi,	{ -ōem, -ōa, }	-os,	-ōe.
Pl.	-ōes,	-ōum,	-oībus,	{ -ōes, -ōas, }	-ōes,	-oībus.
	Chēlys,	{ -ŷis, -ŷos, }	-ŷi,	{ -ym, -yn, }	-y,	-ŷe or y.
	Poēsis,	{ -is, -īos, -ēos, }	-i,	{ -im, -in, }	-i,	-i.
	Achilles,	{ -is, -ei, -i, -ēos, }	-i,	{ -em, -ēa, -ēn, }	-es, -ē,	-e or -i.
	Orpheus,	-ēos,	-ēi,	-ēa,	-eu,	See § 54.
	Aēr,	-ēris,	-ēri,	-ēra,	-er,	-ēre.
	Didō,	-ūs,	-ō,	-ō,	-ō,	-ō.

FOURTH DECLENSION.

§ 87. Nouns of the fourth declension end in us and u. Those in us are masculine; those in u are neuter, and, except in the genitive, are indeclinable in the singular.

Nouns of this declension are thus declined :—

Fructus, fruit .		Cornu, a horn .
Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
N. fruc'-tūs,	fruc'-tūs,	N. cor'-nū,	cor'-nu-ā,
G. fruc'-tūs,	fruc'-tu-ūm,	G. cor'-nūs,	cor'-nu-ūm,
D. fruc'-tu-i,	fruc'-ti-būs,	D. cor'-nū,	cor'-ni-būs,
Ac. fruc'-tūm,	fruc'-tūs,	Ac. cor'-nū,	cor'-nu-ā,
V. fruc'-tūs,	fruc'-tūs,	V. cor'-nū,	cor'-nu-ā,
Ab. fruc'-tū.	fruc'-ti-būs.	Ab. cor'-nū.	cor'-ni-būs.

In like manner decline

Can'-tus, a song .	Fluc'-tus, a wave .	Se-nā'-tus, the senate .
Cur'-rus, a chariot .	Luc'-tus, grief .	Gē'-lu, ice . (in sing.)
Ex-er'-ci-tus, an army .	Mō'-tus, motion .	Vē'-ru, a spit .

EXCEPTIONS IN GENDER.

§ 88. 1. The following are feminine :—

Acus, a needle .	Ficus, a fig .	Porticus, a gallery .
Dōmus, a house .	Mānus, a hand .	Tribus, a tribe .

Obus, a distaff, and the plurals Quinquātrus, a feast of Minerva, and Idus, the Ides, are also feminine. So noctu, by night, found only in the ablative singular.

Pēnus, a store of provisions, when of the fourth declension, is masculine or feminine. Sēcus, sex, is neuter; see § 94. Spēcus, a den, is masculine and rarely feminine or neuter.

2. Some personal appellatives, and names of trees, are feminine by signification; as,

Anus, nūrus, socrus;—cornus, laurus, and quercus. Myrtus also is feminine and rarely masculine. See § 29, 1 and 2.

EXCEPTIONS IN DECLENSION.

§ 89. Dōmus, a house, is partly of the fourth declension, and partly of the second. It is thus declined:—

Singular.	Plural.
N. dō'-mūs,	dō'-mūs,
G. dō'-mūs, or dō'-mī,	dom'-u-ūm, or do-mō'-rūm,
D. dom'-u-i, or dō'-mō,	dom'-i-būs,
Ac. dō'-mūm,	dō'-mūs, or dō'-mōs,
V. dō'-mūs,	dō'-mūs,
Ab. dō'-mō.	dom'-i-būs.

(a.) Domūs, in the genitive, signifies, of a house; domī commonly signifies, at home. The ablative domu is found in Plautus, and in ancient inscriptions. In the genitive and accusative plural the forms of the second declension are more used than those of the fourth.

(b.) Cornus, a cornel-tree; figus, a fig, or a fig-tree; laurus, a laurel; and myrtus, a myrtle, are sometimes of the second declension. Pēnus is of the second, third or fourth declension.

(c.) Some nouns in u have also forms in us and um; as, cornu, cornus, or cornum. Adjectives, compounds of manus, are of the first and second declensions.

REMARK 1. Nouns of this declension anciently belonged to the third, and were formed by contraction, thus:—

Singular.	Plural.
N. fructūs,	frutuēs, ūs,
G. fructūs, -ūs,	fructuūm, -ūm,
D. fructui, -ū,	fructuibūs, -ūbūs, or -ībūs,
Ac. fructuē, -ūm,	fructuēs, ūs,
V. fructūs,	fructuēs, -ūs,
Ab. fructuē, -ū.	fructuibūs, -ūbūs, or -ībūs.

2. The genitive singular in is is sometimes found in ancient authors; as, amīs, Ter. A genitive in i, after the second declension, also occurs; as, senātis, senāti; tumultus, tumultī. Sall.

3. The contracted form of the dative in u is not often used; yet it sometimes occurs, especially in Cæsar, and in the poets.

4. The contracted form of the genitive plural in um rarely occurs.

5. The following nouns have ūbus in the dative and ablative plural:—

Acus , a needle.	Artus , a joint.	Partus , a birth.	Spēcus , a den.
Arcus , a bow.	Lacus , a lake.	Pēcu , a flock.	Tribus , a tribe.

Gēnu, a knee; portus, a harbor; tonitrus, thunder; and vēru, a spit, have ibus or ūbus.

FIFTH DECLENSION.

§ 90. Nouns of the fifth declension end in ēs, and are of the feminine gender.

They are thus declined:—

Res, a thing.		Dies, a day.
Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
N. rēs ,	rēs ,	N. di'-ēs ,	di'-ēs ,
G. rē'-ī ,	rē'-rūm ,	G. di-ē'-ī ,	di-ē'-rūm ,
D. rē'-ī ,	rē'-būs ,	D. di-ē'-ī ,	di-ē'-būs ,
Ac. rēm ,	rēs ,	Ac. di'-ēm ,	di'-ēs ,
V. rēs ,	rēs ,	V. di'-ēs ,	di'-ēs ,
Ab. rē .	rē'-būs .	Ab. di'-ē .	di-ē'-būs .

REMARK. Nouns of this declension, like those of the fourth, seem to have belonged originally to the third declension.

EXCEPTIONS IN GENDER.

1. Dies, a day, is masculine or feminine in the singular, and always masculine in the plural; meridies, mid-day, is masculine only.

NOTE. Dies is seldom feminine, in good prose writers, except when it denotes duration of time, or a day fixed and determined.

EXCEPTIONS IN DECLENSION.

2. The genitive and dative singular sometimes end in ē or in i, instead of ei; as, gen. diē for diēi, Virg.; fide for fidei, Hor.; acie for aciēi, Cæs.—gen. plēbi for plēbi, Liv.—dat. fide for fidei, Hor., perniciē, Liv., and pernicii, Nep., for perniciēi. The genitive rabiēs contracted for rabiēis, after the third declension, is found in Lucretius.

REMARK 1. There are only about eighty nouns of this declension, and of these only two, res and dies, are complete in the plural. Acies, effigies, cluvies, facies, glacies, progenies, series, species, spes, want the genitive, dative, and ablative plural, and the rest want the plural altogether.

REM. 2. All nouns of this declension end in ies, except four—fides, faith; res, a thing; spes, hope; and plēbes, the common people;—and all nouns in ies are of this declension, except abies, aries, paries, quies, and requies, which are of the third declension.

DECLENSION OF COMPOUND NOUNS.

§ 91. When a compound noun consists of two nominatives, both parts are declined; but when one part is a nominative, and the other an oblique case, the nominative only is declined. Of the former kind are respublica, a commonwealth, and jusjurandum, an oath; of the latter, mater-familias, a mistress of a family. Cf. § 43, 2.

Singular.	Plural.
N. V. res-pūb'-li-ca ,	N. V. res-pūb'-li-cae ,
G. D. re-i-pūb'-li-cae ,	G. re-rum-pūb'-li-cā'-rum ,
Ac. rem-pūb'-li-cam ,	D. Ab. re-bus-pūb'-li-cis ,
Ab. re-pūb'-li-cā .	Ac. res-pūb'-li-cae .

Singular.	Plural.	Singular.
N. jus-ju-ran'-dum,	ju-ra-ju-ran'-da,	N. ma-ter-fa-mil'-i-as,
G. ju-ris-ju-ran'-di,		G. ma-tris-fa-mil'-i-as,
D. ju-ri-ju-ran'-do,		D. ma-tri-fa-mil'-i-as,
Ac. jus-ju-ran'-dum,	ju-ra-ju-ran'-da,	Ac. ma-trem-fa-mil'-i-as,
V. jus-ju-ran'-dum,	ju-ra-ju-ran'-da.	V. ma-ter-fa-mil'-i-as,
Ab. ju-re-ju-ran'-do.		Ab. ma-tre-fa-mil'-i-as, etc.

NOTE. The preceding compounds are divided and pronounced like the simple words of which they are compounded.

IRREGULAR NOUNS.

§ 92. Irregular nouns are divided into three classes—Variable, Defective, and Redundant.

I. VARIABLE NOUNS.

A noun is variable, which, in some of its parts, changes either its gender or declension or both.

Nouns which vary in gender are called heterogeneous; those which vary in declension are called heteroclites.

Heterogeneous Nouns.

1. Masculine in the singular, and neuter in the plural; as, Avernus, Dindymus, Ismärus, Massicus, Manälus, Pangæus, Tartärus, Taygētus; plur. Averna, etc.
2. Masculine in the singular, and masculine or neuter in the plural; as, jocus, a jest; plur. jōci, or jōca;—lōcus, a place; plur. lōci, passages in books, topics, places; lōca, places;—sibilus, a hissing; plur. sibila, rarely sibilia;—intābus, endive; plur. intābi or intāba.
3. Feminine in the singular, and neuter in the plural; as, carbāsus, a species of flax; plur. carbāsa, very rarely carbāsi, sails, etc., made of it;—Hierosolyma, -a, Jerusalem; plur. Hierosolyma, -ōrum.
4. Neuter in the singular, and masculine in the plural; as, cælum, heaven; plur. cæli;—Elysium; plur. Elysii;—Argos; plur. Argi. So siser, neut., plur. sisēres, masc.
5. Neuter in the singular, and masculine or neuter in the plural; as, frēnum, a bridle; plur. frēni or frēna;—rastrum, a rake; plur. rastri, or, more rarely, rastra;—pugillar, a writing tablet; plur. pugillares or pugillaria.
6. Neuter in the singular, and feminine in the plural; as, epūlum, a feast; plur. epūlōs;—balneum, a bath; plur. balneæ or balneæ;—nundinūm, a market-day; plur. nundinæ, a fair.
7. Feminine or neuter in the singular, and feminine in the plural; as, delicia or delicium, delight; plur. deliciæ.

Heteroclites.

§ 93. 1. Second or third declension in the singular, and third in the plural; as, nom. and acc. jugĕrum, an acre; gen. jugĕri or jugĕris; abl. jugĕro and jugĕre; plur., nom., and acc. jugĕra; gen. jugĕrum; abl. jugĕris and jugeribus.

2. Third declension in the singular, and second in the plural; as, vās, a vessel; plur. vāsa, ōrum. Ancile, a shield, has sometimes ancilōrum, in the genitive plural.

NOTE. Variable nouns seem anciently to have been redundant, and to have retained a part of each of their original forms. Thus. vāsa. -ōrum, properly comes from vāsum, -i, but the latter, together with the plural of vas, vāsis, became obsolete.

II. DEFECTIVE NOUNS.

§ 94. Nouns are defective either in case or in number.

1. Nouns defective in case may want either one or more cases. Some are altogether indeclinable, and are called aplotes.

Such are pondo, a pound; most nouns in i; as, gummi, gum; foreign words; as, Aaron, Jacob: sēmis, a half; gil, a kind of plant; the singular of mille, a thousand; words put for nouns; as, velle suum, for sua voluntas, his own inclination; and names of the letters of the alphabet.

A noun which is found in one case only, is called a Monoptote; if found in two cases, a Diptote; if in three, a Triptote; if in four, a Tetraptote; and if in five, a Pentaptote.

The following list contains most nouns defective in case. Those which occur but once in Latin authors are distinguished by an asterisk:—

Abactus*, acc. pl.; a driving away.
Accitu, abl.; a calling for.
Admissu, abl.; admission.
Admonitu, abl.; admonition.
Æs, not used in gen. pl.

REMARK 1. To these may be added nouns of the fifth declension, which either want the plural, as most of them are abstract nouns, or have in that number only the nominative, accusative, and vocative. Res and dies, however, have the plural entire. Cf. § 90, R. 1.

REM. 2. For the use of the vocative, also, of many nouns, no classical authority can be found.

§ 95. 2. Nouns defective in number, want either the plural or the singular.

(a) Many nouns want the plural from the nature of the things which they express. Such are generally names of persons, most names of places (except those which have only the plural), the names of herbs, of the arts, most material and abstract nouns; but these may have a plural when used as common nouns, (§ 26, R. 3.), and many others.

REM. In Latin the plural of abstract nouns is often used to denote the existence of the quality, attribute, etc. in different objects, or the repetition of an action; and in poetry such plurals are used for the sake of emphasis or metre. See § 98.

The following list contains many of the nouns which want the plural, and also some, marked p, which are included in the above classes, but are sometimes used in the plural.

 Trābes, and trabs, a beam.
 Tribūla, and -um, a threshing sledge.
 Vespēra, -per, ēri and ēris, the evening.
 Vinacēus, and -a, ōrum, a grape-stone.
 Viscus, and -um, the mistletoe.
 Vulgus, masc. and neut., the common people.

REMARK 1. To these may be added some other verbals in us and io, and Greek nouns in o and on; as, Dio and Dion; also some Greek nouns in es and e, which have Latin forms in a; as, Atrides and Atrida. See § 45.

REM. 2. Some proper names of places also are redundant in number; as, Argos and Argi; Fidēna and Fidēnas; Thēbe and Thēbeæ.

NOTE. The different forms of most words in the above list are not equally common, and some are rarely used, or only in particular cases.

DERIVATION OF NOUNS.

§ 100. Nouns are derived from other nouns, from adjectives, and from verbs.

I. FROM NOUNS.

From nouns are derived the following classes:—

1. A patronymic is the name of a person, derived from that of his father or other ancestor, or of the founder of his nation.

NOTE 1. Patronymics are properly Greek nouns, and have been borrowed from that language by the Latin poets.

(a.) Masculine patronymics end in ides, ides, ādes, and īdes.

(1.) Nouns in us of the second declension, and those nouns of the third declension, whose root ends in a short syllable, form their patronymics in ides; as, Priāmus, Priamides; Agamemnōn, gen. ōnis, Agamemnōnides.

(2.) Nouns in ēs and cles form their patronymics in ides; as, A-trēs, Atrides; Herōcles (i. e. Hercules,) Heracides.

REM. 1. Enides, in Virg. A. 9, 658, is formed in like manner, as if from Enēs, instead of Enēas.

(3.) Nouns in ās and ēs of the first declension form their patronymics in ādes, as Enēas, Enēādes; Hippōtes, Hippōtādes.

(4.) Nouns in ius of the second declension, and those nouns of the third declension, whose root ends in a long vowel, form their patronymics in īdes; as, Thestius, Thestīdes; Amphitryō (gen. ōnis), Amphitryoniādes.

REM. 2. A few nouns also of the first declension have patronymics in īdes; as, Anchises, Anchisiādes.

(b.) Feminine patronymics end in is, ēs, and ias, and correspond in termination to the masculines, viz. is to ides, ēs to ides, and ias to īdes; as, Tyndārus, masc. Tyndarides, fem. Tyndāris; Nereus, masc. Nerēides, fem. Nerēs; Thestius, masc. Thestīdes, fem. Thestias.

REM. 3. A few feminines are found in ine, or ione; as, Nerine, Acrisīone, from Nereus and Acrisius.

NOTE 2. Patronymics in des and ne are of the first declension; those in is and as, of the third.

2. A patrial or gentile noun is derived from the name of a country; and denotes an inhabitant of that country; as,

Trōs, a Trojan man; Trōas, a Trojan woman; Macedō, a Macedonian; Samnis, a Samnite; from Trōja, Macedonia, and Samnium.

NOTE 3. Most patrials are properly adjectives, relating to a noun understood; as, hōmo, civis, etc. See § 128, 6.

3. A diminutive signifies a small thing of the kind denoted by the primitive; as, liber, a book; libellus, a little book.

Diminutives generally end in ulus, ula, ulum, or cūlus, cūla, cūlum, according as the primitive is masculine, feminine, or neuter.

A. 1. If the primitive is of the first or second declension, or its root ends in c, g, d, or t after a vowel, the diminutive is formed by annexing ulus, a, um to the root; as, arula, servulus, puerulus, scutulum, cornicula, regulus, capitulum, mercedula; from ara, servus, puer, scutum, cornix, (-icis), rex, (rēgis), caput, (-itis), merces, (-ēdis).

2. Primitives of the first or second declension whose root ends in e or i, instead of ulus, a, um, add olus, a, um; as, filioles, gloriola, horreolum; from filius, gloria, horreum.

3. Primitives of the first or second declension whose root ends in l, n, or r, form diminutives by contraction in ellus, a, um, and some in illus, a, um; as, ocellus, asellus, libellus, lucellum; from oculus, asina, liber, lucrum; and sigillum, from signum, tignum.

B. 1. If the primitive is of the third, fourth, or fifth declension, the diminutive is formed in cūlus, (or icūlus), a, um.

2. Primitives of the third declension whose nominative ends in r, or in os or us from roots ending in r, annex cūlus to the nominative; as, fraterculus, soror- cūla, osculum, corpusculum; from frāter, sōror, ōs, (ōris), corpus, (-ōris).—So also primitives in es and is, but these drop the s of the nominative; as, igniculus, nūbecula, diecula; from ignis, nubes, dies.

3. Primitives of other terminations of the third declension, and those of the fourth, add iculus to the root; as, ponticulus, coticula, ossiculum, versiculus, corniculum; from pons, cos, ōs, (ossis), versus, cornu.

4. Primitives in o, (inis or ōnis), in adding culus, a, um, change the final vowel of the root (i or o) into u; as, homunculus, sermunculus; from homo and sermo; and a few primitives of other terminations form similar diminutives; as, avunculus, domuncula; from avus and dōmus.

C. 1. A few diminutives end in ulus, as, equulus, aculeus; from equus and acus; and a few also in io; as, homuncio, senecio, from homo and senex.

2. Diminutives are sometimes formed from other diminutives; as, asellulus, from asellus; sometimes two or more diminutives with different terminations are formed from the same primitive, as, homunculus, homullus, and homuncio; from homo; and sometimes the primitive undergoes euphonic changes; as rumsculus, from rūmor.

REM. Some diminutives differ in gender from their primitives; as ramunculus, scamillus, from rāna and scamnum.

4. (a.) An amplificative is a personal appellation denoting an excess of that which is expressed by its primitive; as,

Capito, one who has a large head: so nāso, labeo, bucco, fronto, mento, one who has a large nose, lips, or cheeks, a broad forehead or long chin; from cāpus, nāsus, labia, bucca, frons, and mentum.

(b.) A few personal appellatives in io denote the trade or profession to which a person belongs; as, ludio, an actor; pellio, a furrier; from ludus, and pellis.

5. The termination ium added to the root of a noun, indicates the office or condition, and often, derivatively, an assemblage of the individuals denoted by the primitive; as, collegium, colleagueship, and thence an assembly of colleagues; servitium, servitude, and collectively the servants; so sacerdotium, and ministerium; from collēga, servus, sacerdos, and minister.

6. The termination imonium is added to the root of a few nouns, denoting something derived from the primitives, or imparting to it its peculiar character; as, testimonium, testimony; so vadimonium, patrimonium, matrimonium; from testis, vās (vadis), pater, and māter.

7. The termination etum, added to the root of names of plants, denotes a place where they grow in abundance; as, quercetum, laurētum, olivētum, from quercus, laurus, and oliva.

So, also, asculetum, dumetum, myrtetum, and by analogy saxetum. But some drop e; as, carectum, salictum, virgultum, and arbutum.

8. The termination arium, added to the root of a noun, denotes a receptacle of the things signified by the primitive; as, aviarium, an aviary; plantarium, a nursery; from avis, a bird, and planta, a plant.

9. The termination ile, added to the root of names of animals, marks the place where they are kept; as, bovile, a stall for oxen; so caprile, ovile; from bos, an ox, caprē, a goat, and ovis, a sheep.

NOTE 1. This class and the preceding are properly neuter adjectives.

NOTE 2. Abstract nouns are derived either from adjectives or from verbs. See § 26, 5. ↓

II. FROM ADJECTIVES.

§ 101. 1. Abstract nouns are formed by adding the termination itas, itudo, ia, itia or ities, edo, and imonia to the root of the primitive.

2. Abstracts in itas, (equivalent to the English ty or ity), are formed from adjectives of each declension ; as, cupiditas, teneritas, celeritas, crudelitas, señictas ; from cupidus, tener, cēler, crudēlis, and fēlix.

(1.) When the root ends in i, the abstract is formed in itas ; as, pītas, from pīus ; and when it ends in t, as only is added ; as, honestas from honestus.

(2.) In a few abstracts i before tas is dropped ; as, libertas, juventas, from liber, juvénis. In facultas and difficultas, from facilis, difficilis, there is a change also in the root-vowel from i to u.

(3.) A few abstracts are formed in itus or tus, instead of itas ; as, servitus, juventus, from servus and juvénis. See § 76, Exc. 2.

3. Abstracts in itudo are formed from adjectives in us, and some from adjectives of the third declension of two or three terminations ; as, magnitudo, alutitudo, fortitudo, acritudo, from magnus, altus, fortis, acer. Polysyllabic adjectives in tus, generally form their abstracts by adding itudo instead of itudo to their root ; as, consuetudo, from consuetus.

4. Abstracts in ia (equivalent to the English ce or cy) are for the most part formed from adjectives of one termination ; as, clementia, constantia, impudentia, from clemens, constans, impudens. But some adjectives in us and er, including verbals in cundus, likewise form their verbals in ia ; as, miseria, angustia, facundia, from miser, angustus, facundus.

5. Abstracts in itia and ities are formed from adjectives in us and is ; as, justitia, tristitia, duritia, and durities, segnitia and segnities, from justus, tristis, durus, and segnis.

6. A few abstracts are formed in edo, and a few in imonia ; and sometimes two or more abstracts of different terminations are formed from the same adjective ; as, acritas, acritudo, acredo, and acrimonia, from acer. In such case those in itudo and imonia seem to be more intensive in signification than those in itas.

REMARK. Adjectives, as distinguished from the abstracts which are formed from them, are called concretes.

III. FROM VERBS.

§ 102. Nouns derived from verbs are called verbal nouns.

The following are the principal classes :—

1. Abstract nouns expressing the action or condition denoted by a verb, especially by a neuter verb, are formed by annexing or to their first root ; as, amor, love ; fāvor, favor ; māror, grief ; splendor, brightness ; from āmo, fāveo, māreo, and splendeo.

2. (a.) Abstracts are also formed from many verbs by annexing ium to the first or to the third root ; as, colloquium, a conference ; gaudium, joy ; exordium, a beginning ; exitium, destruction ; solatium, consolation ; from colloquor, gaudeo, exordior, eaeo and solor.

3. Some verbal abstracts are formed by annexing ēla, imōnia, or imōnium, to the first root of the verb ; as, querēla and querimonia, a complaint ; suadēla, persuasion ; from quēror and suadeo.

4. (a.) The terminations men and mentum, added to the first root of the verb, generally with a connecting vowel, denote the thing to which the action belongs, both actively and passively, or a means for the performance of the action ; as, fulmen from fulgeo, flumen from fluo, agmen from āgo, solāmen from solor, documentum from dōceo, blandimentum from blandior.

(b.) The final consonant of the root is often dropped, and the preceding and connecting vowels contracted into one syllable ; as, āgo, (āgimen), agmen ; fōveo, (fōvimentum), fōmentum.

(c.) Some words of this class have no primitive verb in use ; as, atramentum, ink ; but, in this case, the connecting vowel seems to imply its reference to such a verb as atrare, to blacken.

5. (a.) The terminations ilum, bilum, cilum ; brum, crum, trum, annexed to the first root of a verb, denote an instrument for performing the act expressed by the verb, or a place for its performance ; as, cingulum, operculum, venabulum, ventilabrum, fulcrum, spectrum, from cingo, opërio, vënor, ventilo, fulcio, spëcio.

(b.) Sometimes cilum is contracted into clum ; as, vincium for vincilum. Sometimes, also, s is inserted before trum ; as, rostrum, from rôdo, and a connecting vowel is placed before this and some of the other terminations ; as, ardrum, stabulum, cubiculum, from âro, sto, and cûbo.

(c.) Some words of this kind are formed from nouns ; as, acetabulum, a vinegar cruet ; turibulum, a censer ; from acëtum and tus.

6. (a.) Nouns formed by adding or and rix to the third root of the verb, denote respectively the male and female agent of the action expressed by the verb ; as, adjutor, adjutrix, an assistant ; fautor, fautrix, a favorer ; victor, victrix, a conqueror ; from adjûvo (adjût-), faveo (faut-), vinco (vict-). They are often likewise used as adjectives. The feminine form is less common than the masculine, and when the third root of the verb ends in s, the feminine is sometimes formed in trix ; as, tondeo (tons-) tonstrix.

(b.) Some nouns in tor are formed immediately from other nouns ; as, viator, a traveller ; janitor, a door-keeper ; from via and janua. In meretrix from mereo, i of the third root becomes e.

(c.) The agent of a few verbs is denoted by the terminations a and o annexed to the first root ; as, conviva, a guest ; advëna, a stranger ; scriba, a scribe ; erro, a vagrant ; bibo, a drunkard ; comedo, a glutton, from convivo, advënio, etc.

7. Many abstract nouns are formed by annexing io and us (gen. ûs) to the third root of a verb ; as, actio, an action ; lectio, reading ; from âgo (act-), lëgo (lect-) ; — cantus, singing ; visus, sight ; ûsus, use ; from cânô (cant-), video (vis-), ûtor (ûs-).

REMARK 1. Nouns of both forms, and of like signification, are frequently derived from the same verb ; as, concurso and conkursus, a running together ; môtio and môtus, etc.

REM. 2. Nouns formed by adding the termination ura to the third root of a verb, sometimes have the same signification as those in io and us, and sometimes denote the result of an action ; as, positura, position ; vincitura, a binding together ; from pônô, and vincio ; and the termination ela has sometimes the same meaning ; as, querela, complaint ; loquela, speech, from queror and loquor.

NOTE. One of these forms is generally used to the exclusion of the others, and when two or more are found, they are usually employed in somewhat different senses.

8. The termination rium, added to the third root of a verb, denotes the place where the action of the verb is performed ; as, auditorium, a lecture-room ; conditorium, a repository ; from audio and condô.

COMPOSITION OF NOUNS.

§ 103. Compound nouns are formed variously :—

1. Of two nouns ; as, rupicapra, a wild goat, of rûpes and capra. In some words, compounded of two nouns, the former is a genitive ; as, senatûsconsultum, a decree of the senate ; jurisconsultus, a lawyer ; in others, both parts are declined ; as, respublica, jusjurandum. See § 91.

2. Of a noun and a verb ; as, artifex, an artist, of ars and fâcio ; fidicen, a harper, of fides and cânô ; agricola, a husbandman, of âger and côlo.

3. Of an adjective and a noun; as, æquinoctium, the equinox, of æquus and nox; millepēda, a millepede, of mille and pes.

In duumvir, triumvir, decemvir, centumvir, the numeral adjective is in the genitive plural.

REMARK 1. When the former part of a compound word is a noun or an adjective, it usually ends in i; as, artifex, rupticapra, agricola, etc. If the second word begins with a vowel, an elision takes place; as, quingennium, of quinque and annus; magnanimus, of magnus and animus.

4. Of an adverb and a noun; as, nēfas, wickedness; nēmo, nobody; of ne, fas, and hōmo. So biduum, of bis and dies.

5. Of a preposition and a noun: as, incuria, want of care, of in and cūra. So intervallum, an interval; præcordia, the diaphragm; proverbium, a proverb; subsellium, a low seat; superficies, a surface.

REM. 2. When the former part is a preposition, its final consonant is sometimes changed, to adapt it to that which follows it: as, ignobilis, illepidus, imprudentia, irrumpe, of in and nobilis, lepidus, etc. See § 196.

ADJECTIVES.

§ 104. An adjective is a word which qualifies or limits the meaning of a substantive.

Adjectives may be divided, according to their signification, into various classes; as denoting,

1. Character or quality; as, bōnus, good; albus, white; amicus, friendly.
2. State or condition; as, fēlix, happy; dices, rich.
3. Possession; as, herilis, a master's; patrius, a father's.
4. Quantity; as, magnus, great; tōtus, entire; parvus, small.
5. Number; as, ūnus, one; secundus, second; tot, so many; quot, as many. These are called numerals.
6. Time; as, annuus, yearly; hesternus, of yesterday; bimus, of two years; trimestris, of three months.
7. Place; as, altus, high; vicinus, near; aërius, aerial; terrestris, terrestrial.
8. Material; as, aureus, golden; fagineus, beechen; terrēnus, earthen.
9. Part; as, nullus, no one; aliquis, some one. These are called partitives.
10. Country; as, Romānus, Roman; Arpinas of Arpinum. These are called patrials.
11. Diminution; as, parvulus, from parvus, small; misellus, from miser, miserable. These are called diminutives.
12. Amplification; as, vinosus and vinolentus, much given to wine; auritus, having long ears. These are called amplificatives.
13. Relation; as, avidus, desirous of; mēmor, mindful of; insuētus. These are called relatives.
14. Interrogation; as, quantus? how great; qualis? of what kind; quot? how many? quotus? of what number? These are called interrogatives; and, when not used interrogatively, they are called correlatives.
15. Specification; as, tālis, such; tantus, so great; tot, so many. These are called demonstratives.

DECLENSION OF ADJECTIVES.

§ 105. 1. Adjectives are declined like substantives, and are either of the first and second declensions, or of the third only.

ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS.

2. The masculine of adjectives belonging to the first and second declensions, ends either in us or in er. The feminine and neuter are formed respectively by annexing a and um to the root of the masculine. The masculine in us is declined like dominus; that in er like gēner or āger; the feminine always like mūsa; and the neuter like regnum.

REMARK 1. The masculine of one adjective, sdtur, -āra, -ārum, full, ends in ur, and is declined like gēner.

Bōnūs, good.

Singular.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
N.	bo'-nūa,	bo'-nā,	bo'-nūm,
G.	bo'-nī,	bo'-næ,	bo'-nī,
D.	bo'-nō,	bo'-næ,	bo'-nō,
Ac.	bo'-nūm,	bo'-nām,	bo'-nūm,
V.	bo'-nē,	bo'-nā,	bo'-nūm,
Ab.	bo'-nō.	bo'-nā.	bo'-nō.

Plural.

N.	bo'-nī,	bo'-næ,	bo'-nā,
G.	bo'-nō-rūm,	bo'-nā-rūm,	bo'-nō-rūm,
D.	bo'-nis,	bo'-nis,	bo'-nis,
Ac.	bo'-nōs,	bo'-nās,	bo'-nā,
V.	bo'-nī,	bo'-næ,	bo'-nā,
Ab.	bo'-nis.	bo'-nis.	bo'-nis.

In like manner decline

Al'-tus, high.	Fī'-dus, faithful.	Lon'-gus, long.
A-vā'-rus, covetous.	Im'-prō-bus, wicked.	Plē'-nus, full.
Be-nig'-nus, kind.	In-ī'-quus, unjust.	Tac'-i-tus, silent.

REM. 2. Like bōnus are also declined all participles in us; as,
A-mā'-tus. Am-a-tū'-rus. A-man'-dus.

Rem. 3. The masculine of the vocative singular of adjectives in us is sometimes like the nominative; as, O vir fortis atque amicus. Hor. Meus has both mi and meus.

REM. 4. The genitive plural of distributive numerals ends commonly in um instead of orum; as, crassitudo binūm digitorūm. Plin.

3. Tëner, tender.

Singular.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
N.	te'-nër,	ten'-ë-ră,	ten'-ë-rüm,
G.	ten'-ë-rî,	ten'-ë-ræ,	ten'-ë-rî,

Ac.	ten'-ë-rüm,	ten'-ë-räm,	ten'-ë-rüm,
V.	te'-nër,	ten'-ë-ră,	ten'-ë-rüm,
Ab.	ten'-ë-rō.	ten'-ë-ră.	ten'-ë-rō.

Plural.

N.	ten'-ë-rî,	ten'-ë-ræ,	ten'-ë-ră,
G.	ten-e-rō'-rüm,	ten-e-ră'-rüm,	ten-e-rō'-rüm,
D.	ten'-ë-ris,	ten'-ë-ris,	ten'-ë-ris,
Ac.	ten'-ë-rōs,	ten'-ë-rās,	ten'-ë-ră,
V.	ten'-ë-rî,	ten'-ë-ræ,	ten'-ë-ră,
Ab.	ten'-ë-ris.	ten'-ë-ris.	ten'-ë-ris.

In like manner are declined

As'-per, rough .	Lă'-cer, torn .	Pros'-per, prosperous .
Ex'-ter, foreign .	Lî'-ber, free .	Să'-tur, full .
Gib'-ber, crook-backed .	Mî'-ser, wretched .

So also alter, except in the genitive and dative singular (see § 107), semtser, and the compounds of gëro and fëro; as, laniger, opifer.

NOTE. Prosper is less frequent than prospërus, and exter is scarcely used in the nominative singular masculine.

§ 106. The other adjectives in er drop e in declension; as,

Piger, slothful.

Singular.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
N.	pi'-gër,	pi'-gră,	pi'-grüm,
G.	pi'-grî,	pi'-græ,	pi'-grî,

In like manner decline

Æ'-ger, sick.	Mā'-cer, lean.	Scā'-ber, rough.
A'-ter, black.	Nī'-ger, black.	Si-nis'-ter, left.
Crā'-ber, frequent.	Pul'-cher, fair.	Tā'-ter, foul.
Glā'-ber, smooth.	Rū'-ber, red.	Vā'-fer, crafty.
In-tē'-ger, entire.	Sā'-cer, sacred.

Dezter, right, has -tra, -trum, and less frequently -tēra, -tērum.

§ 107. Six adjectives in us, and three in er, have their genitive singular in ius, and their dative in i, in all the genders:—

Alius, another.	Tōtus, whole.	Alter, -tēra, -tērum, the other.
Nullus, no one.	Ullus, any.	Uter, -tra, -trum, which of the two.
Sōlus, alone.	Unus, one.	Neuter, -tra, -trum, neither.

To these may be added the other compounds of ūter,—namely, uterque, each of two; utercumque, uterlibet, and utervis, which of the two you please; gen. utriusque, etc.—also, alterūter, one of two; gen. alterutrius, and sometimes alterius utrius; dat. alterutri. So alteruterque, and unusquisque. See § 138, 4.

Nullus, sōlus, tōtus, ullus, and ūnus are thus declined:—

	Singular.
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
N.	ū-nūs,	ū-nā,	ū-nūm,
G.	u-nī'-ūs,*	u-nī'-ūs,	u-nī'-ūs,
D.	u-nī,	u-nī,	u-nī,
Ac.	u-nūm,	u-nūm,	u-nūm,
V.	u-nē,	u-nā,	u-nūm,
Ab.	u-nō.	u-nā.	u-nō.

The plural is regular, like that of bōnus.

REMARK 1. Alius has aliud in the nominative and accusative singular neuter, and in the genitive alius, contracted for alius.

REM. 2. Except in the genitive and dative singular, alter is declined like tēner, and ūter and neuter like piger.

REM. 3. Some of these adjectives, in early writers, and occasionally even in Cicero, Cæsar, and Nepos, form their genitive and dative regularly, like bōnus, tēner, or piger.

ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

§ 108. Some adjectives of the third declension have three terminations in the nominative singular; some two; and others only one.

I. Those of three terminations end in er, masc.; is, fem.; and e, neut.; and are thus declined:—

Acer, sharp.

Singular.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
N.	ā'-cēr,	ā'-crīs,	ā'-crē,
G.	a'-crīs,	a'-crīs,	a'-crīs,
D.	a'-crī,	a'-crī,	a'-crī,
Ac.	a'-crēm,	a'-crēm,	a'-crē,
V.	a'-cēr,	a'-crīs,	a'-crē,
Ab.	a'-crī.	a'-crī.	a'-crī.

* See § 15.

Plural.

N.	a'-crēs,	a'-crēs,	a'-cri-ā,
G.	a'-cri-ūm,	a'-cri-um,	a'-cri-ūm,
D.	ac'-rī-būs,	ac'-rī-būs,	ac'-rī-būs,
Ac.	a'-crēs,	a'-crēs,	a'-cri-ā,
V.	a'-crēs,	a'-crēs,	a'-cri-ā,
Ab.	ac'-rī-būs.	ac'-rī-būs.	ac'-rī-būs.

In like manner are declined the following;—

Al'-acer, cheerful.	Pa-lus'-ter, marshy.	Sil-ves'-ter, woody.
Cam-pes'-ter, champaign.	Pe-des'-ter, on foot.	Ter-res'-ter, terrestrial.
Cel'-ē-ber, famous.	Pū'-ter, rotten.	Vol'-ū-er, winged.
E-ques'-ter, equestrian.	Sa-lū'-ber, wholesome.

To these add names of months in -ber, used as adjectives; as, Octōber, etc. (cf. § 71), and cēler, swift, which has celēris, celēre; gen. celēris, etc.

REMARK 1. The termination er was anciently sometimes feminine; as, volūcer fama. Petr.: and, on the other hand, the masculine often ends in is; as, collis silvestris, Cæs.

REM. 2. Volūcer has um in the genitive plural.

§ 109. II. Adjectives of two terminations end in is for the masculine and feminine, and e for the neuter, except comparatives, which end in or and us.

Those in is, e, are thus declined:—

Mitis mild.

	M. & F.	Singular.		Plural.
N.	mī'-tis,	mī'-tēs,	N.	mī'-tēs,	mī'-i-ā,*
G.	mī'-tis,	mī'-tis,	G.	mī'-i-ūm,*	mī'-i-ūm,
D.	mī'-ti,	mī'-ti,	D.	mī'-i-būs,	mī'-i-būs,
Ac.	mī'-tēm,	mī'-tēs,	Ac.	mī'-tēs,	mī'-i-ā,
V.	mī'-tis,	mī'-tēs,	V.	mī'-tēs,	mī'-i-ā,
Ab.	mī'-ti.	mī'-ti.	Ab.	mī'-i-būs.	mī'-i-būs.

In like manner decline

Ag'-i-lis, active.	Dul'-cis, sweet.	In-col'-ū-mis, safe.
Brē'-vis, short.	For'-tis, brave.	Mi-rab'-i-lis, wonderful.
Cru-dē'-lis, cruel.	Grā'-vis, heavy.	Om'-nis, all.

Tres, three, is declined like the plural of mitis.

NOTE. Several adjectives of this class have forms also in us, a, um. See § 116.

§ 110. (a.) All comparatives, except plus, more, are thus declined:—

* Pronounced mish'-e-a, etc. See § 12.

Mitior,* milder.

Singular.

	M. & F.	N.
N.	mit'-i-ōr,	mit'-i-ūs,
G.	mit-i-ō'-rīs,	mit-i-ō'-r s,
D.	mit-i-ō'-rī,	mit-i-ō'-rī,
Ac.	mit-i-ō'-rēm,	mit'-i-ūs,
V.	mit'-i-ōr,	mit'-i-ūs,
Ab.	mit-i-ō'-rē, or -rī.	mit-i-ō'-rē, or -rī.

Plural.

	M. & F.	N.
N.	mit-i-ō'-rēs,	mit-i-ō'-rā,
G.	mit-i-ō'-rūm,	mit-i-ō'-rūm,
D.	mit-i-or'-i-būs,	mit-i-or'-i-būs,
Ac.	mit-i-ō'-rēs,	mit-i-ō'-rā,
V.	mit-i-ō'-rēs,	mit-i-ō'-rā,
Ab.	mit-i-or'-i-būs.	mit-i-or'-i-būs.

In like manner decline

AY-ti-or, higher.	Dul'-ci-or, sweeter.	Gra'-vi-or, heavier.
Au-da'-ci-or, bolder.	Fe-lic'-i-or, happier.	Pru-den'-ti-or, more prudent.
Bre'-vi-or, shorter.	Fe-ro'-ci-or, fiercer.	U-be'-ri-or, more fertile.
Cru-de'-li-or, more cruel.	For'-ti-or, braver.

Plūs, more, is thus declined:—

Singular.		Plural.
N.	M. & F.	N.
N. plus,	N. plū'-rēs,	plū'-rā, rarely plu'-rī-ā,
G. plū'-rīs,	G. plū'-rī-ūm,	plū'-rī-ūm,
D. _____,	D. plū'-rī-būs,	plū'-rī-būs,
Ac. plus,	Ac. plū'-rēs,	plū'-rā,
V. _____,	V. _____,	plū'-rī-būs.
Ab. (plū'-rē, obs.)	Ab. plū'-rī-būs.

So, but in the plural number only, complēres, a great many.

§ 111. III. Other adjectives of the third declension have but one termination in the nominative singular for all genders. They all end in l, r, s, or x, and increase in the genitive.

They are thus declined:—

Fēlix, happy.

Singular.

M. & F.	N.
N. fe'-lix,	fe'-lix,
G. fe-li'-cīs,	fe-li'-cīs,

N.	præ-sen'-tēs,	præ-sen'-ti-ā,†
G.	præ-sen'-ti-ūm,	præ-sen'-ti-ūm,
D.	præ-sen'-ti-būs,	præ-sen'-ti-būs,
Ac.	præ-sen'-tēs,	præ-sen'-ti-ā,
V.	præ-sen'-tēs,	præ-sen'-ti-ā,
Ab.	præ-sen'-ti-būs.	præ-sen'-ti-būs.

In like manner decline

Au'-dax, -ācis, bold.	Par'-ti-ceps, -ipis, participant.	Sol'-lers, -tis, shrewd.
Com'-pos, -ōtis, master of.	Præ'-pes, -ētis, swift.	Sos'-pes, -itis, safe.
Fē'-rox, -ōcis, fierce.	Prū'-dens, -tis, prudent.	Sup'-plex, -icis, suppliant.
In'-gens, -tis, huge.

REMARK. All present participles are declined like præsens; as, A'-mans. Mō'-nens. Rē'-gens. Ca'-pi-ens. Au'-di-ens.

NOTE. A few adjectives of one termination have redundant forms in us, a, um; see § 116.

RULES FOR THE OBLIQUE CASES OF ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

GENITIVE SINGULAR.

§ 112. Most adjectives of the third declension form their genitive singular like nouns of the same termination.

The following may here be specified:—

1. Of those in es (cf. § 73) some have -ētis; as, hēbes, perpes, præpes, and lres; inquires and locuples have -ētis;—some have -itis; as, dives, sospes, and superstes;—some have -idis; as, dēses, and rēsea;—bipes, and tripes have -pēdis;—pūbes has pubēris, and impūbes, impubēris and impūbis.

* Pronounced fe-lic'h-s-um, etc. See § 10, Exo., and § 7, 2, (b.)

† Pronounced præ-sen'-tē-a, etc.

2. Compos and impos have -dis, and exos, exosis.—Exlex has exlēgis, pernox has pernoctis (§ 78), præcox, præcōcis, and redux, reducis.—Cælebs has cælibis, (§ 77); intercus, intercūtis, and vētus, vetēris. Those in ceps which are compounds of cāput, have -cipitis; as, anceps, præceps (§ 78, 1); but the compounds of ceps from cāpio have -apis; as, particeps, participis.—Those in cor, compounds of cor, have -cordis; as, concor, concordis (§ 71, Exc. 2).—Mēmor and immēmor have -dis.

ABLATIVE SINGULAR.

§ 113. 1. Adjectives which have e in the nominative singular neuter have only i in the ablative.

Exc. 1. The ablatives bimestre, caeleste, and perenne are found in Ovid, and eognomine in Virgil.

2. Comparatives and participles in ns, when used as participles, especially in the ablative absolute, have rather e than i; but participial adjectives in ns have rather i than e.

3. Adjectives of one termination have either e or i in the ablative.

Exc. 2. The following adjectives of one termination have only e in the ablative:—

Bicorpor, bipes, cælebs, compos, dæses, discolor, hospes, impos, impubes, juvenis, locuples, pauper, princeps, pūber or pūbes, sēnex, sospes, superstes, tricorpor, tricuspis, and tripes.

Exc. 3. The following adjectives of one termination have only i in the ablative:—

Anceps, concors, discors, hēbes, immēmor, iners, ingens, inops, mēmor, par, præceps, rēcens, rēpens, vigil, and most adjectives in x, especially those in plex.

REM. 1. Inerte occurs in Ovid, recente in Ovid and Catullus, and præcipe in Ennius.

REM. 2. Præsens, when used of things, makes the ablative in i; when used of persons, it has e.

NOMINATIVE, ACCUSATIVE, AND GENITIVE PLURAL.

§ 114. 1. The neuter of the nominative and accusative plural ends in ia, and the genitive plural of all genders in ium; but comparatives in or, with vētus, old, and uber, fertile, have a, and um.

2. The accusative plural of masculine and feminine adjectives, whose genitive plural ends in ium, anciently ended in is or ās, instead of ēs. Cf. § 85, Exc. 1.

Exc. 1. Those adjectives that have only e in the ablative singular, have um in the genitive plural.

Exc. 2. Compounds of fācio, cāpio, and of such nouns as make um in their genitive plural, with cēler, compar, cicur, dives, mēmor, immēmor, præpes, supplex, and vigil, make their genitive plural in um.

Exc. 3. Dis, locuples, sons, and insons have either um or ium. The poets and the later prose writers sometimes form the genitive plural of other adjectives and of participles in ns, by syncope, in um, instead of ium; as, caelestum, Virg Ovid, etc.

IRREGULAR ADJECTIVES.

§ 115. Some adjectives are defective, others redundant.

DEFECTIVE ADJECTIVES.

1. (a.) Many adjectives denoting personal qualities or attributes want the neuter gender, unless when occasionally joined to a neuter substantive used figuratively. Such are the following :—

Bicorpor, bipes, cælebs, compos, consors, degēner, dives, impos, impubes, industrius, inops, insons, invitus, juvenis, locupies, mēmor, pauper, particeps, princeps, pūber, or pūbes, rēdux, sēnex, sons, sospes, superstes, supplex, tricorpor, vigil.

(b.) Victrix and ultrix are feminine in the singular, seldom neuter; in the plural, they are feminine and neuter. Such verbals partake of the nature both of substantives and adjectives, and correspond to masculines in tor. See § 102, 6, (a.)

2. The following want the genitive plural, and are rarely used in the neuter gender :—

Concōlor, dēses, hēbes, perpes, rēses, tēres, versicōlor.

3. The names of months, which are properly adjectives, have only the masculine and feminine genders.

4. Some adjectives are wholly indeclinable.

Such are frāgi, temperate; nēquam, worthless; sūt or sūtis, sufficient; the plurals aliquot, tōt, quōt, totidem, quotquot; and the cardinal numbers from quatuor to centum inclusive, and also mille. Cf. § 118, 1, and 6, (b.)

5. The following adjectives are used only in certain cases :—

Bilicem, acc.; doubly-tissued. Cetēra, cetērum, the rest, wants the nom. sing. masc. Decemplicem, acc.; tenfold. Exspes, nom.; hopeless. Inquies, nom.; -ātem, acc.; -ēte, abl.; restless. Mactus, and macte, nom.; macte, acc.; honored; -inacti, nom. plur. Necessē, and necessum, nom., acc.; necessary. Plus, nom., acc.; pluris, gen.; more;—pl. plūres, -a, nom. acc.; -ium gen.; ibus, dat., abl. Cf. § 110. Postēra, postērū, coming after, wants the nom. sing. masc. Pōtis, nom. sing. and pl., all genders; able. Pōte, nom. sing., for potest; possible. Sep-templīcis, gen.; -ce, abl.; seven-fold. Siremps, and sirempse, nom. and acc.; alike. Tantundem, nom. acc.; tantidem, gen.; tantandem, acc.; so much. Trilicem, acc.; trebly-tissued; trilices, nom. and acc. pl.

REDUNDANT ADJECTIVES.

§ 116. The following adjectives are redundant in termination and declension. Those marked r are more rarely used.

Acclivis, and -us, r, ascending.

Auxiliāris, and -ius, auxiliary.

Bijūgis, and -us, yoked two together.

Declivis, and -us, r, descending.

Exanimis, and -us, r, lifeless.

Hilāris, and -us, cheerful.

Imbecillis, r, and -us, weak.

Impubes, and -is, r, -is or -ēris, not grown up.

Inermis, and -us, r, unarmed.

Infrēnis, and -us, unbridled.

Inquies, and -ētus, restless.

Joculāris, and -ius, r, laughable.

Multijūgis, r, and -us, yoked many together.

Opulens, and -lentus, rich.

Præcox, -cōquis, and -cōquus, early ripe.

Proclivis, and -us, r, sloping.

Quadrījūgis, and -us, yoked four together.

Semianimis, and -us, half alive

Semiermis, and -us, half armed.
 Semisomnis, and -us, r, half asleep.
 Singularis, and -ius, single.

Sublimis, and -us, r, high.
 Unanimis, r, and -us, unanimous.
 Violens, r, and -lentus, violent.

To these may be added some adjectives in er and is; as, saluber and -bris, celeber and -bris. Cf. § 108, R. 1.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

§ 117. Numeral adjectives are divided into three principal classes—Cardinal, Ordinal, and Distributive.

I. Cardinal numbers are those which simply denote the number of things, in answer to the question Quot? 'How many?' They are,

1. Unus,	one.	I.
2. Duo,	two.	II.
3. Tres,	three.	III.
4. Quatuor,	four.	III. or IV.
5. Quinque,	five.	V.
6. Sex,	six.	VI.
7. Septem,	seven.	VII.
8. Octo,	eight	VIII.
9. Nōvem,	nine.	VIII. or IX.
10. Dēcem,	ten.	X.
11. Undēcim,	eleven.	XI.
12. Duodēcim,	twelve.	XII.
13. Tredēcim,	thirteen.	XIII.
14. Quatuordēcim,	fourteen.	XIII. or XIV.
15. Quindēcim,	fifteen.	XV.
16. Sedēcim, or sexdēcim,	sixteen.	XVI.
17. Septendēcim,	seventeen.	XVII.
18. Octodēcim,	eighteen.	XVIII.
19. Novendēcim,	nineteen.	XVIII. or XIX.
20. Viginti,	twenty.	XX.
21. Viginti unus, or unus et viginti, }	twenty-one.	XXI.
22. Viginti duo, or duo et viginti, etc., }	twenty-two.	XXII.
30. Triginta,	thirty.	XXX.
40. Quādrāginta,	forty.	XXXX. or XL.
50. Quinquaginta,	fifty.	L.
60. Sexaginta,	sixty.	LX.
70. Septuaginta,	seventy.	LXX.
80. Octoginta, or octuaginta,	eighty.	LXXX.
90. Nōnaginta,	ninety.	LXXX. or XC.
100. Centum,	a hundred.	C.
101. Centum unus, or centum et unus, etc., }	a hundred and one.	CI.
200. Dūcenti, -ae, a,	two hundred.	CC.
300. Trēcenti, etc.,	three hundred.	CCC.
400. Quādringenti,	four hundred.	CCCC, or CD.
500. Quingenti,	five hundred.	IC, or D.
600. Sexcenti,	six hundred.	ICC, or DC.
700. Septingenti,	seven hundred.	IDCC, or DCC.
800. Octingenti,	eight hundred.	IDCCC, or DCCC.
900. Nongenti,	nine hundred.	IDCCCC, or DCCCC.
1000. Mille,	a thousand.	CM, or M.
2000. Duo millia, or bis mille, }	two thousand.	CMCM, or MM.

5000.	Quinque millia, or quingies mille, }	five thousand.	IDC.
10000.	Decem millia, or decies mille, }	ten thousand.	CCIDC.
50000.	Quinquaginta millia, or quingies mille, }	fifty thousand.	IDCC.
100000.	Centum millia, or centies mille, }	a hundred thousand.	CCCIDCC.

§ 118. 1. The first three cardinal numbers are declined; from four to a hundred inclusive they are indeclinable; those denoting hundreds are declined like the plural of bōnus.

For the declension of unus and tres, see §§ 107 and 109.

Duo is thus declined:—

Plural.

M.	F.	N.
N. dū'-o,	du'-æ,	du'-o,
G. du'-ŏ'-rum,	du'-ŏ'-rum,	du'-ŏ'-rum,
D. du'-ŏ'-bus,	du'-ŏ'-bus,	du'-ŏ'-bus,
Ac. du'-os, or du'-o,	du'-as,	du'-o,
V. du'-o,	du'-æ,	du'-o,
Ab. du'-ŏ'-bus.	du'-ŏ'-bus.	du'-ŏ'-bus.

REMARK 1. Duōrum, duōrum, are often contracted into duōm, especially in compounds; as, duōmōis, and when joined with millium.—Ambo, both, which partakes of the nature of a numeral and of a pronoun, is declined like duo.

2. The cardinal numbers, except unus and mille, are used in the plural only.

REM. 2. The plural of unus is used with nouns which have no singular, or whose singular has a different sense from the plural; as, unæ nuptiæ, one marriage; unæ castra, one camp. It is used also with nouns denoting several things considered as one whole; as, unæ vestimenta, one suit of clothes. So, also, when it takes the signification of "alone" or "the same"; as, uni Ubii, the Ubians alone; unis moribus vivere,—with the same manners.

3. (a.) Thirteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, and nineteen, are often expressed by two numbers, the greater of which usually precedes, united by et; thus, decem et tres, decem et novem, or, omitting et, decem novem. Octodécim has no good authority. See infra, 4.

(b.) From twenty to a hundred, the smaller number with et is put first, or the greater without et; as, unus et viginti, or viginti unus. Above one hundred, the greater precedes, with or without et; as, centum et unus, or centum unus; trecenti sexaginta sex, or trecenti et sexaginta sex. Et is never twice used, but the poets sometimes take ac, atque, or que, instead of et.

4. For eighteen, twenty-eight, etc., and for nineteen, twenty-nine, etc. (excepting sixty-eight, sixty-nine, and ninety-eight), a subtractive expression is more frequent than the additive form; as, duodeviginti, two from twenty; undeviginti, one from twenty; duodeviginti, undeviginti, etc. Neither un (unus) nor duo can be declined in these combinations. The additive forms for thirty-eight, etc. to ninety-eight, and for forty-nine, etc. to ninety-nine, except those for sixty-nine, seem not to occur.

5. (a.) Thousands are generally expressed by prefixing the smaller cardinal numbers to millia; as, decem millia, ten thousand; ducenta millia, two hundred thousand. As there is in Latin no unit above mille, a thousand, the higher units of modern numeration are expressed by prefixing the numeral adverbs to the combination centēna millia; as, decies centēna millia, a million; centies centēna millia, ten millions. In such combinations centēna millia is sometimes omitted; as, decies, scil. centēna millia.

(b.) The poets sometimes make use of numeral adverbs in expressing smaller numbers; as, bis sex for duodēcim; bis centum for ducenti, etc.

6. Mille is used either as a substantive or as an adjective.

(a.) When taken substantively, it is indeclinable in the singular number, and, in the plural, has millia, millium, millibus, etc.; as, mille hominum, a thousand men; duo millia hominum, two thousand men, etc. When mille is a substantive, the things numbered are put in the genitive, as in the preceding examples, unless a declined numeral comes between; as, habui tria millia trecentos milites.

(b.) As an adjective, mille is plural only, and indeclinable: as, mille homines a thousand men; cum bis mille hominibus, with two thousand men.

7. Capitals were used by the Romans to mark numbers. The letters employed for this purpose were C. I. L. V. X., which are, therefore, called Numeral Letters. I. denotes one; V. five; X. ten; L. fifty; and C. a hundred. By the various combinations of these five letters, all the different numbers are expressed.

(a.) The repetition of a numeral letter repeats its value. Thus, II. signifies two; III. three; XX. twenty; XXX. thirty; CC. two hundred, etc. But V. and L. are never repeated.

(b.) When a letter of a less value is placed before a letter of a greater value, the less takes away its value from the greater; but being placed after, it adds its value to the greater; thus,

IV. Four.	V. Five.	VI. Six.
IX. Nine.	X. Ten.	XI. Eleven.
XL. Forty.	L. Fifty.	LX. Sixty.
XC. Ninety.	C. A hundred.	CX. A hundred and ten.

(c.) A thousand was marked thus, CIO, which, in later times, was contracted into M. Five hundred is marked thus, IO, or, by contraction, D.

(d.) The annexing of the apostrophus or inverted C (∩) to IO makes its value ten times greater; thus, IO∩ marks five thousand; and IO∩∩, fifty thousand.

(e.) The prefixing of C, together with the annexing of ∩, to the number CIO, makes its value ten times greater; thus, CCIO∩ denotes ten thousand; and CCCIO∩∩, a hundred thousand. The Romans, according to Pliny, proceeded no further in this method of notation. If they had occasion to express a larger number, they did it by repetition; thus, CCCIO∩∩, CCCIO∩∩, signified two hundred thousand, etc.

(f.) We sometimes find thousands expressed by a straight line drawn over the top of the numeral letters. Thus, IIĪ. denotes three thousand; X̄., ten thousand.

§ 119. II. Ordinal numbers are such as denote order or rank, and answer to the question, Quātus? Which of the numbers? They all end in us, and are declined like bōnus; as, primus, first; secundus, second.

III. Distributive numbers are those which indicate an equal division among several persons or things, and answer to the question, Quotēni? How many apiece? as, singūli, one by one, or, one to each; bini, two by two, or two to each, etc. They are always used in the plural, and are declined like the plural of bōnus, except that they usually have um instead of orum in the genitive plural. Cf. § 105, R. 4.

The following table contains the ordinal and distributive numbers, and the corresponding numeral adverbs, which answer to the question, Quoties? How many times?—

Ordinal.	Distributive.	Numeral Adverbs.
1. Primus, first .	Singŭli, one by one .	Semel, once .
2. Sēcundus, second .	Bini, two by two .	Bis, twice .
3. Tertius, third .	Terni, or triūi .	Ter, thrice .
4. Quartus, fourth .	Quaterni.	Quater, four times .
5. Quintus, fifth .	Quinī.	Quinquies.
6. Sextus, sixth .	Sēni.	Sexies.
7. Septimus, seventh .	Septēni.	Septies.
8. Octāvus, eighth .	Octōni.	Octies.
9. Nōnus, ninth .	Novēni.	Novies.
10. Dēcimus, tenth, etc.	Dēni.	Dēcies.
11. Undecimus.	Undēni.	Undecies.
12. Duodēcimus.	Duodēni.	Duodēcies.
13. Tertius dēcimus.	Terni dēni.	Terdecies.
14. Quartus dēcimus.	Quaterni dēni.	Quatuordecies.
15. Quintus dēcimus.	Quinī dēni.	Quindecies.
16. Sextus dēcimus.	Sēni dēni.	Sedecies.
17. Septimus dēcimus.	Septēni dēni.	Decies et septies.
18. Octāvus dēcimus.	Octōni dēni.	Duodevicies.
19. Nōnus dēcimus.	Novēni dēni.	Undevicies.
20. { Vicesimus, or } vicesimus. }	Vicēni.	Vicies.
21. Vicesimus primus.	Vicēni singŭli.	Semel et vices.
22. Vicesimus secundus.	Vicēni bini, etc.	Bis et vices, etc.
30. { Tricesimus, or } tricesimus. }	Tricēni.	Tricies.
40. Quādragesimus.	Quadragēni.	Quadrages.
50. Quinquagesimus.	Quinquagēni.	Quinquages.
60. Sexagesimus.	Sexagēni.	Sexages.
70. Septuagesimus.	Septuagēni.	Septuages.
80. Octogesimus.	Octogēni.	Octoges.
90. Nonagesimus.	Nonagēni.	Nonages.
100. Centesimus.	Centēni.	Centies.
200. Dūcentesimus.	Ducēni.	Ducenties.
300. Trēcentesimus.	Trecēni, or trecentēni.	{ Trecenties, or } tricenties. }
400. Quadringentesimus.	{ Quadriagēni, or } quadringentēni. }	Quadringenties.
500. Quingentesimus.	Quingēni.	Quingenties.
600. Sexcentesimus.	Sexcēni, or sexcentēni.	Sexcenties.
700. Septingentesimus.	Septingēni.	Septingenties.
800. Octingentesimus.	Octingēni.	Octingenties.
900. Nongentesimus.	Nongēni.	Noningenties.
1000. Millesimus.	{ Millēni, or } singŭla millia.	Millies.
2000. Bis millesimus.	{ Bis millēni, or } bina millia. }	Bis millies.

§ 120. 1. In the ordinals, instead of primus, prior is used, if only two are spoken of. Alter is often used for secundus.

2. (a.) From thirteenth to nineteenth, the smaller number is usually put first, without et; as, tertius dēcimus, but sometimes the greater with or without et; as, dēcimus et tertius, or dēcimus tertius.

(b.) Twenty-first, thirty-first, etc., are often expressed by unus et vicesimus, unus et tricesimus, etc., one and twentieth, etc.; and twenty-second, etc., by duo, or alter et vicesimus, etc., in which duo is not changed. In the other compound numbers, the larger precedes without et, or the smaller with et; as, vicesimus quartus, or quartus et vicesimus.

(c.) For eighteenth, etc., to fifty-eighth, and for nineteenth, etc. to fifty-ninth, the subtractive forms, duodevicesimus, etc., and undevicesimus, etc., are often used.

3. In the distributives, eighteen, thirty-eight, forty-eight, and nineteen and twenty-nine, are often expressed by the subtractives duodevicensi, etc., undevicensi, etc.

4. (a.) Distributives are sometimes used by the poets for cardinal numbers; as, binæ spicula, two darts. Virg. So likewise in prose, with nouns that want the singular; as, binæ nuptiæ, two weddings. ♦

(b.) The singular of some distributives is used in the sense of multiplicatives; as, binus, twofold. So ternus, quinus, septēnus.

5. In the numeral adverbs, for the intermediate numbers 21, 22, etc., the larger number also may be put first, either with or without et; and for twenty-eight times and thirty-nine times, duodetrices and undequadrages are found.

§ 121. To the preceding classes may be added the following:—

1. Multiplicatives, which denote how many fold, in answer to the question, quotplex? They all end in plex, and are declined like fēlix; as,

Simplex, single.

Dūplex, twofold, or double.

Triplex, threefold.

Quadrūplex, fourfold.

Quinctplex, fivefold.

Septēplex, sevenfold.

Decēplex, tenfold.

Centūplex, a hundred fold.

2. Proportionals, which denote how many times one thing is greater than another; as, dūplus, a, um, twice as great; so triplex, quadrūplus, octūplus, decāplus. They are generally found only in the neuter.

3. Temporals, which denote time; as, binus, a, um, two years old; so trimus, quadrūmus, etc. Also, biennis, lasting two years, biennial; so quadriennis, quinquennis, etc. So also, bimestris, of two months' continuance; trimestris, etc., biduus, etc. To these may be added certain nouns, compounds of annus and dies with the cardinal numbers; as, biennium, triennium, etc., a period of two, etc. years; biduum, triduum, etc., a period of two, etc. days.

4. Adjectives in arius, derived from the distributives, and denoting of how many equal parts or units a thing consists; as, binarius, of two parts; ternarius, etc.

5. Interrogatives; as, quot, how many? quotus, of what number? quotēni, how many each? quoties, how many times? Their correlatives are tot, totidem, so many; aliquot, some; which, with quot, are indeclinable; and the adverbs, toties, so often; aliquoties, several times.

6. Fractional expressions, which denote the parts of a thing. These are expressed in Latin by pars with dimidia, tertia, quarta, etc. Thus, $\frac{1}{2}$, dimidia pars; $\frac{1}{3}$, tertia pars, etc. When the number of parts into which a thing is divided exceeds by one only the parts mentioned, as in $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{3}$, etc. the fraction is expressed simply by duæ, tres, etc. partes, denoting two out of three, three out of four, etc.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

§ 122. 1. Adjectives may be divided into two classes—those which denote a variable, and those which denote an invariable, quality or limitation.

Thus, dūmus, good, altus, high, and opacū, dark, denote variable attributes; but æneus, brazen, triplex, threefold, and diurnus, daily, do not admit of different degrees in their signification.

2. The comparison of an adjective is the expression of its quality in different degrees.

3. There are three degrees of comparison—the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

4. The positive simply denotes a quality, without reference to other degrees of the same quality; as, altus, high; mitis, mild.

5. The comparative denotes that a quality belongs to one of two objects, or sets of objects, in a greater degree than to the other; as, altior, higher; mitior, milder.

6. The superlative denotes that a quality belongs to one of several objects, or sets of objects, in a greater degree than to any of the rest; as, altissimus, highest; mitissimus, mildest.

REM. 1. Sometimes also the comparative denotes that a quality, at different times or in other circumstances, belongs in different degrees to the same object; as, est sapientior quam fuit, he is wiser than he was.

REM. 2. The comparative sometimes expresses the proportion between two qualities of the same object; as, est doctior quam sapientior, he is more learned than wise; that is, his learning is greater than his wisdom.

REM. 3. The comparative is also used elliptically instead of our 'too' or 'rather'; as, vixit liberius, he lives too freely, or, rather freely. Cf. § 256, R. 9.

REM. 4. The superlative, like the positive with per, (cf. § 127, 2), often indicates a high degree of a quality without direct comparison with the same quality in other objects; as, amicus carissimus, a very dear friend.

§ 123. 1. Degrees of a quality inferior to the positive may be denoted by the adverbs minus, less; minime, least, prefixed to the positive; as, jucundus, pleasant; minus jucundus, less pleasant; minime jucundus, least pleasant.

2. A small degree of a quality is indicated by sub prefixed to the positive; as, amarus, bitter; subamarus, bitterish, or, somewhat bitter.

3. An equal degree of a quality may be denoted by tam followed by quam, æque followed by ac, sic followed by ut, etc.; as, hæbes, æque ac pécus, as stupid as a brute.

§ 124. 1. The comparative and superlative in Latin, as in English, are denoted either by peculiar terminations, or by certain adverbs prefixed to the positive. Cf. § 127, 1.

2. The terminational comparative ends in

Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
ior ,	ior ,	tus ;

 the terminational superlative in issimus, issima, issimum.

3. These terminations are added to the root of the positive; as, altus, altior, altissimus; high, higher, highest.
mitis, mitior, mitissimus; mild, milder, mildest.
felix, (gen. felicitis), felicior, felicissimus; happy, happier, happiest.

In like manner compare

Ar'-tus, strait.

Cá'-rus, dear.

Doc'-tus, learned.

Cru-dē'-lis, cruel.

Fer'-ti'-lis, fertile.

Lē'-vis, light.

Cá'-pax, capacious.

Clé'-mens, (gen. -tis) merciful.

In'-ers, (gen. -tis), sluggish.

IRREGULAR COMPARISON.

§ 125. 1. Adjectives in er form their superlative by adding rīnus to that termination; as, ācer, active; gen. acris; comparative, acrior; superlative, acerrimus.

In like manner, pauper, pauperrimus. Vetus has a similar superlative, veterinus, from the old collateral form veter.

2. Six adjectives in lis form their superlative by adding lissimus to the root:—

Facilis,	facilior,	facillimus,	easy.
Difficilis,	difficilior,	difficillimus,	difficult.
Gracilis,	gracilior,	gracillimus,	slender.
Humilis,	humilior,	humillimus,	low.
Similis,	similior,	simillimus,	like.
Dissimilis,	dissimilior,	dissimillimus,	unlike.

Imbecillus or imbecillus, weak, has two forms, imbecillissimus and imbecillimus.

3. (a.) Five adjectives in ficus (from facio) derive their comparatives and superlatives from supposed forms in ens:—

Beneficus,	beneficentior,	beneficentissimus,	beneficent.
Honorificus,	honorificentior,	honorificentissimus,	honorable.
Magnificus,	magnificentior,	magnificentissimus,	splendid.
Munificus,	munificentior,	munificentissimus,	liberal.
Maleficus,	maleficentior,	maleficentissimus,	hurtful.

(b.) Adjectives in icens and olens form their comparatives and superlatives regularly; but instead of those positives, forms in dicus and volus are more common; as,

Maledicens or dicus, maledicentior, maledicentissimus, slandorous.

Benevolens, or -volus, benevolentior, benevolentissimus, benevolent.

4. These five have regular comparatives, but irregular superlatives:—

Dexter,	dexterior,	dextimus,	right.
Externus, (fem.)	exterior,	extrēmus, or extimus,	outward.
Posterus, (fem.)	posterior,	postrēmus, or postūmus,	hind.
Inferus,	inferior,	infimus, or imus,	below.
Superus,	superior,	suprēmus, or summus,	above.

REMARK 1. The nominative singular of posterus does not occur in the masculine, and that of exterus wants good authority.

5. The following are very irregular in comparison:—

Bonus,	melior,	optimus,	good,	better,	best.
Malus,	pēior,	pessimus,	bad,	worse,	worst.
Magnus,	māior,	maximus,	great,	greater,	greatest.
Parvus,	minor,	minimus,	little,	less,	least.
Multus,	—	plurimus,	much, more, most.
Multa,	—	plurima,
Multum,	plus,*	plurimum,
Nēquam,	nequior,	nequissimus,	worthless,	etc.
Frūgi,	frugalior,	frugalissimus,	frugal,	etc.

REM. 2. All these, except magnus, whose regular forms are contracted, either form their comparatives and superlatives from obsolete adjectives, or take them from other words of similar signification.

DEFECTIVE COMPARISON.

§ 126. 1. Seven adjectives want the positive:—

Citior, citissimus, nearer.	Prior, primus, former.
Deterior, deterrimus, worse.	Propior, proximius, nearer.
Interior, intimus, inner.	Uterior, ultimus, further.
Ociior, ocissimus, swifter.

* See § 110.

2. Eight want the terminational comparative :—

Consultus, consultissimus, skilful.
 Inclutus, inclutissimus, renowned.
 Invictus, invictissimus, invincible.
 Invitus, invitissimus, unwilling.
 Meritus, meritissimus, (very rare,) deserving.

Par, parissimus, (very rare), equal.
 Persuâsus, persuasissimus (neuter), persuaded.
 Sacer, sacerrimus, sacred.

3. Eight have very rarely the terminational comparative :—

Apronus, apricissimus, sunny.
 Bellus, bellissimus, fine.
 Cômis, comissimus, courteous.
 Diversus, diversissimus, different.

Falsus, falsissimus, false.
 Fidus, fidissimus, faithful.
 Nôvus, novissimus, new.
 Vêtus, veterrimus, old.

4. The following want the terminational superlative :—

Adolescens, adolescentior, young.
 Agrestis, agrestior, rustic.
 Alâcer, alacrior, active.
 Ater, atrior, black.
 Cæcus, cæcior, blind.
 Dêses, desidior, inactive.
 Diurnus, diurnior, lasting.
 Infinitus, infinitior, unlimited.
 Ingens, ingentior, great.
 Jejûnus, jejunior, fasting.
 Juvênis, junior, young.
 Licens, licentior, unrestrained.
 Longinquus, longinquior, distant.
 Optimus, optimior, rich.

Proclivis, proclivior, sloping.
 Prônus, pronior, bending down.
 Protêrvus, protêrvior, violent.
 — sequior, worse.
 Propinquus, propinquior, near.
 Salutâris, salutarior, salutary.
 Sâtis, sufficiens; sâtius, preferable.
 Sâtur, saturior, full.
 Sênex, senior, old.
 Silvestris, silvestrior, woody.
 Sinister, sinisterior, left.
 Supînus, supînior, lying on the back.
 Surdus, surdior, deaf.
 Têres, teretior, round.

REMARK 1. The superlative of juvênis and adolescens is supplied by minimus nâtu, youngest; and that of sênex by maximus nâtu, oldest. The comparatives minor nâtu and major nâtu sometimes also occur.

REM. 2. Most adjectives also in ilis, ilis, alis, and êlis, have no terminational superlative.

5. Many variable adjectives have no terminational comparative or superlative. Such are,

(a.) Adjectives in bundus, imus, inus (except divinus), êrus, most in teus, and in us pure (except -quus.) Yet arduus, assiduus, egregius, exiguus, industrius, perpetuus, pîus, strenuus, and vacuus, have sometimes a terminational comparison. So, dropping i, noziôr, inoziôr, sobriôr.

(b.) The following—almus, calvus, cânus, cicur, claudus, degêner, dêlirius, dispar, egênus, impar, impiger, invidus, lâcer, mêmor, mîrus, nâchus, præcox, præditus, râdis, salvus, scæpes, superstes, vulgâris, and some others.

§ 127. 1. The comparative and superlative may also be formed by prefixing to the positive the adverbs mâgis, more, and maxîme, most; as, idoneus, fit; magis idoneus, maxîme idoneus.

2. Various degrees of a quality above the positive are expressed by admôdum, aliquanto, apprîme, bêne, imprimis, multum, oppîdo, perquam, and valde, and also by per compounded with the positive; as, difficilis, difficult; perdifficilis, very difficult. To a few adjectives præ is in like manner prefixed; as, prædûrus, very hard.

3. The force of the comparative is increased by prefixing etiam, even, still, or yet; and that of both comparative and superlative, by prefixing longe or multo, much, far; as, longe nobilissimus; longe melior, far multo facilius; multo maxima pars.

4. Vel, 'even', and quam, with or without possum, 'as much as possible', before the superlative, render it more emphatic; as, Cicero vel optimus oratorum Romanorum. Quam maximum potest militum numerum colligit; quam doctissimus, extremely learned; quam celerrime, as speedily as possible.

NOTE 1. Instead of quam with possum, quanti is sometimes used, in the same case as the superlative; as, Quantis maximis potuit itineribus contendit.

NOTE 2. Unus, with or without omnium, is sometimes added to superlatives to increase their force; as, Hoc ego uno omnium plurimum aior. Cic. Urbem finam mihi amicissimam declinavi, Id. It is used in like manner with excella.

5. All adjectives whose signification admits of different degrees, if they have no terminational comparison, may be compared by means of adverbs.

6. Instead of the comparative and superlative degrees, the positive with the prepositions præ, ante, præter, or supra, is sometimes used; as, præ nobis beatus, happier than we. Cic. Ante alius pulchritudine insignis, most beautiful. Liv. Sometimes the preposition is used in connection with the superlative; as, Ante alios pulcherrimus omnes. Virg.

7. Among adjectives which denote an invariable quality or limitation, and which, therefore, cannot be compared, are those denoting matter, time, number, possession, country, part, interrogation; also compounds of jūgum, communis, gēro, and fēro, and many others.

DERIVATION OF ADJECTIVES.

§ 128. Derivative adjectives are formed chiefly from nouns, from other adjectives, and from verbs.

I. Those derived from nouns and adjectives are called denominatives. The following are the principal classes:—

1. (a.) The termination ēus, added to the root, denotes the material of which a thing is made, and sometimes similarity; as, aureus, golden; argenteus, of silver; ligneus, wooden; vitreus, of glass; virgineus, maidenly; from aurum, argentum, etc. See § 9, Rem. 3.

(b.) Some adjectives of this kind have a double form in nus and nus; as, eburneus and eburnus, of ivory.

(c.) The termination inus has the same meaning; as, adamantinus, of adamant; cedrinus, of cedar; from adamas and cedrus. So, also, ēnus; as, terrēnus, of earth, from terra.

(d.) The termination ēs or ius (Greek uos), and also icus, belong to adjectives formed from Greek names of men, and denote 'of' or 'pertaining to'; as, Achillēus, Sophoclēus, Aristotelius, Platonicius; Pythagorēus and Pythagoricus; Homerius and Homericus. Names in ias make adjectives in iācus; as, Archias, Archicius. Sometimes, though rarely in the purest Latin authors, adjectives in ēs or ius are formed from Latin names; as, Marcellia or -ēa, a festival in honor of the Marcelli.

2. (a.) The terminations ālis, āris, ārius, ilis, atilis, icius, icus, iis, ēs, and inus, denote 'belonging' 'pertaining,' or 'relating to'; as, capitālis, relating to the life; from caput.

So comitiālis, regālis; Apollināris, consulāris, populāris; argentarius; cicili, hostili, juvenili; aquatili, stuviatili; tribunicius, patricius; bellācus, cicili, Germanicus; accusatorius, imperatorius, regius; Hectorius; caninus, equinus, ferinus, masculinus; from comitia, rex, Apollo, consul, populus, argentum, civis, etc.

(b.) The termination ilis sometimes expresses character; as, hostilis, hostile; puerilis, boyish; from hostis and puer.

(c.) The termination inus belongs especially to derivatives from names of animals, and other living beings.

3. The termination arius, as a substantive, soil. fāber, etc., generally denotes profession or occupation; as, argentarius, a silversmith; from argentum;—coriarius, statuarius; from corium and status. When added to numeral adjectives, it denotes how many equal parts a thing contains. See § 121, 4.

4. The terminations deus and lentus denote abundance, fulness; as, animosus, full of courage; fraudulentus, given to fraud; from animus and fraus. So laptidus, vinosus, portuosus, turbulentus, sanguinolentus, violentus. Before lentus, a connecting vowel is inserted, which is commonly i, but sometimes o.

NOTE.—Adjectives of this class are called amplificatives. See § 104, 12.

5. From adjectives are formed diminutives in ulus, culus, etc., in the same manner as from nouns; as, dulciculus, sweetish; from dulcis. So lentulus, missellus, parvulus, etc. See § 100, 3, and § 104, 11. Diminutives are sometimes formed from comparatives; as, majusculus, avrusculus, somewhat great, somewhat hard, etc. Double diminutives are formed from paucus, viz paucillus and paucillulus; and from bonus, (bēnus) are formed bellus and bellulus.

6. (a.) From the names of places, and especially of towns, are derived patrial adjectives in ensis, inus, as, and ānus, denoting of or belonging to such places.

(b.) Thus from Annas is formed Cannensis; from Sulmo, Sulmonensis. In like manner, from castra and circus come castrēnsis, circēnsis. But Athēna makes Athēnsis; and some Greek towns in ia and ēa drop i and e in their adjectives; as, Antiochensis, Nicomēdensis.

(c.) Those in inus are formed from names of places ending in ia and ium; as, Aricia, Aricinus; Caudium, Caudinus; Capitolium, Capitolinus; Latium, Latinus. Some names of towns, of Greek origin, with other terminations, also form adjectives in inus; as, Tarentum, Tarentinus.

(d.) Most of those in as are formed from nouns in um; some from nouns in a; as, Arpinum, Arpinas; Capēna, Capēnas.

(e.) Those in ānus are formed from names of towns of the first declension, or from certain common nouns; as, Alba, Albānus; Rōma, Romānus; Cuma, Cumānus; Thēbae, Thēbānus; also from some of the second declension; as, Tusculum, Tusculānus; Fundī, Fundānus;—fons, fontānus; mons, montānus; urbs, urbānus; oppidum, oppidānus.

(f.) Adjectives with the terminations ānus, iānus, and inus are formed from names of men; as, Sulla, Sullānus; Tullius, Tullianus; Jugurtha, Jugurthinus.

(g.) Greek names of towns in pōlis form patrial adjectives in politānus; as, Neapōlis, Neapolitānus.

(h.) Greek names of towns generally form patrials in ius; as, Rhodus, Rhodi; Lacedaemon, Lacedaemonius;—but those in a form them in aus; as, Larissa, Larissaeus; Smyrna, Smyrnaeus.

(i.) From many patrials; as, Bithannus, Gallus, Afer, Persa, Arabs, etc., adjectives are formed in teus and ius; as, Britannicus, Galicus, Africus, Persicus, Arabicus; so Syrus, Syrius; Thraz, Thracius.

7. A large class of derivative adjectives, though formed from nouns, have the terminations of perfect participles. They generally signify wearing or furnished with; as, alatus, winged; barbatus, bearded; galeatus, helmeted; auritus, long-eared; turritus, turreted; cornutus, horned; from ala, barba, galea, auris, etc.

8. The termination aneus, annexed to the root of an adjective or participle in us, expresses a resemblance to the quality denoted by the primitive; as, supervacaneus, of a superfluous nature.

§ 129. II. Adjectives derived from verbs are called verbal adjectives. Such are the following classes:—

1. The termination bundus, added to the first root of the verb, with a connecting vowel, which is commonly that of the verb, (see § 150, 5,) has the general meaning of the present participle; as, errābundus, moribundus, from erro, morior, equivalent to errans, moriens.

(a.) In many the meaning is somewhat strengthened; as, gratulābundus, full of congratulations; lacrimābundus, weeping profusely.

(b.) Most verbals in bundus are from verbs of the first conjugation, a few from those of the third, and but one from the second and fourth respectively, viz. puābundus and lascivibundus.

(c.) Some verbal adjectives in cundus have a similar sense; as, rubicundus, verēcundus, from rubeo and vereor.

2. The termination idus, added to the root, especially of neuter verbs, denotes the quality or state expressed by the verb; as, algidus, cold; calidus, warm; madidus, moist; rapidus, rapid; from algeo, madeo, rapio.

3. The termination uus, also, denotes the quality expressed by the verb; and adjectives in uus derived from active verbs take a passive meaning; as, congruus, agreeing, from congruo; so, assiduus, nocuus, innocuus:—irriguus, well watered; conspiciuus, visible; from irrigo, conspicio.

4. (a.) The terminations ilis and bilis, added to the root of a verb, with its connecting vowel, denote passively, capability, or desert; as, amabilis, worthy to be loved; credibilis, deserving credit; placabilis, easy to be appeased; agilis, active; ductilis, ductile; from amo, credo, plāco; āgo, dūco. They are rarely active; as, horribilis, terribilis, fertilis; atq; per cuncta meabilis. Plin.

(b.) In adjectives of these forms, derived from verbs of the third conjugation, the connecting vowel is t; sometimes, also, in those from verbs of the second conjugation, in these and other forms, t is used instead of e; as, horribilis, terribilis, from horreo and terreo.

(c.) These terminations, with the connecting vowel, are sometimes added to the third root; as, flexilis, flexibilis; coctilis, coctibilis, from flecto (flex-), etc.

5. The termination icius or itius, added to the third root of the verb, has a passive sense; as, fictitius, feigned; conductitius, to be hired; from fingo (fict-), etc.

6. The termination ax, added to the root of a verb, denotes an inclination, often one that is faulty; as, audax, audacious; loquax, talkative; rapax rapacious; from audeo, loquor, rapio.

7. The termination ivus, annexed to the third root of a verb, denotes fitness or ability to produce the action expressed by the verb; as, disjunctivus, disjunctive, from disjungo.

8. Verbals in tor and triz, (see § 102, 6, (a.)), are often used as adjectives, especially in poetry; as, victor exercitus, victrices lictres. In the plural they become adjectives of three terminations; as, victōres, victrices, victricia. So also hospes, especially by the later poets, is used as an adjective, having hospitis in the feminine singular and also in the neuter plural.

§ 130. III. Adjectives derived from participles, and retaining their form, are called participial adjectives; as, amans, fond of; doctus, learned.

IV. Some adjectives are derived from adverbs; as, crastinus, of to-morrow; hodiernus, of this day; from cras and hodie.

V. Some adjectives are derived from prepositions; as, contrarius, contrary, from contra; posterus, subsequent, from post.

COMPOSITION OF ADJECTIVES.

§ 131. Compound adjectives are formed variously:—

1. Of two nouns; as, capripes, goat-footed—of cāper and pes; ignicōmus, having fiery hair—of ignis and cōma.

NOTE.—See, respecting the connecting short i, in case the first part of the compound is a noun or an adjective, § 108, Rem. 1.

2. Of a noun and an adjective; as, noctivagus, wandering in the night—of nox and vagus. So lucifugus, shunning the light—of lux and fugax.

3. Of a noun and a verb; as, corniger, bearing horns—of cornu and gero; letifer, bringing death—of letum and fēra. So carnivorus, causidicus, ignivomus, lucifugus, particeps.

4. Of an adjective and a noun; as, æquævus, of the same age—of ævus and ævum; celeripes, swift-footed—of cēler and pes. So centimānus, decennius, magnuminus, misericors, unanimis.

5. Of two adjectives; as, centumgeminus, a hundred-fold; multicavus, having many cavities; quintodecimus, the fifteenth.

6. Of an adjective and a verb; as, brevilŏquens, speaking briefly—of brēvis and lŏquor; magnificus, magnificent—of magnus and fācio.

7. Of an adjective and a termination; as, qualicumque, quocumque, uterque.

8. Of an adverb and a noun; as, bicorpor, two-bodied—of bis and corpus.

9. Of an adverb and an adjective; as, maledicax, slanderous—of māle and dicax. So antemeridiānus, before mid-day.

10. Of an adverb and a verb; as, beneficus, beneficent—of bēne and fācio; malevŏlus, malevolent—of māle and vŏlo.

11. Of a preposition and a noun; as, amens, mad—of a and mens. So concolor, decolor, deformis, implūmis, inermis.

12. Of a preposition and an adjective; as, concavus, concave; infidus, unfaithful. So improvidus, percārus, præcives, subaltidus.

13. Of a preposition and a verb; as, continuus, uninterrupted—of con and teneo; inasciens, ignorant—of in and scio. So præcipuus, promiscuus, subtilissus, superstes.

REMARK. When the former part is a preposition, its final consonant is sometimes changed, to adapt it to the consonant which follows it; as, imprudens—of in and prædens. See § 196; and cf. § 108, R. 2.

PRONOUNS.

§ 132. 1. A pronoun is a word which supplies the place of a noun.

2. There are eighteen simple pronouns:—

Ego, I .	Hic, this, the latter .	Suus, his, hers, its, etc.
Tu, thou .	Is, that or he .	Cujus? whose?
Sui, of himself, etc.	Quis? who?	Noster, our .
Ille, that, the former .	Qui, who .	Vester, your .
Ipse, himself .	Meus, my .	Nostras, of our country .
Iste, that, that of yours .	Tuus, thy .	Cujas? of what country?

3. Ego, tu, and sui, and commonly also quis and its compounds, are substantives: the other pronouns, both simple and compound, are adjectives, but are often by ellipsis used as substantives.

4. Ego, tu, and sui are commonly called personal pronouns. They are a species of appellatives (§ 26, 3,) of general application. Ego is used by a speaker to designate himself; tu, to designate the person whom he addresses. Hence ego is of the first person, tu of the second. (§ 35, 2.) Sui is of the third person, and has always a reflexive signification, referring to the subject of the sentence. The oblique cases of ego and tu are also used reflexively, when the subject of the proposition is of the first or second person.

5. The remaining pronouns, except quis and its compounds, are adjectives, as they serve to limit the meaning of substantives; and they are pronouns, because, like substantive pronouns, they may designate any object in certain situations or circumstances.

6. Meus, tuus, suus, noster, vester, and cujus, have the same extent of signification as the pronouns from which they are derived, and are equivalent to the genitive cases of their primitives.

7. Pronouns, like substantives and adjectives, are declined; but most of them want the vocative. Sui, from the nature of its signification, wants also the nominative in both numbers.

8. The substantive pronouns take the gender of the objects which they denote. The adjective pronouns, like adjectives, have three genders.

SUBSTANTIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 133. The substantive pronouns are thus declined:—

Singular.

N. ě-gŏ, I .	tū, thou .	 {  su'-ī, of himself, herself, itself. sib'-ī,* to himself, etc. sē, himself, etc.
G. me'-ī, of me .	tu'-ī, of thee .
D. mī'-hī, to me .	tib'-ī,* to thee .
Ac. mē, me .	tē, thee .
V. _____	tū, O thou .
Ab. mē, with me .	tē, with thee .	sē, with himself, etc.

* See § 19, 1, Exc.

Plural.

N.	nōs, we.	vōs, ye or you.
G.	{ nos'-trum } or nos'-tri, } of us.	{ ves'-trum or ves'-tri, } of you.	su'-ī, of themselves.
D.	nō'-bis, to us.	vō'-bis, to you.	sīb'-ī, to themselves.
Ac.	nōs, us.	vōs, you.	sē, themselves.
V.		vōs, O ye or you.
Ab.	nō'-bis, with us.	vō'-bis, with you.	sē, with themselves.

REMARK 1. Mē and mī are ancient forms for mīhi. So min' for mīhine, Pers. 1, 2.

REM. 2. The syllable met is sometimes annexed to the substantive pronouns, in an intensive sense, either with or without ipse; as, egōmet, I myself; mīhī-met ipsi, for myself. It is not annexed, however, to the genitives plural, nor to tu in the nominative or vocative. In these cases of tu, tūss or tutemet is used. In the accusative and ablative the reduplicated forms mēmē and tūtē in the singular, and sēsē in both numbers, are employed intensively. Mepte, intensive, med and ted, for me and te, and mis and tis for mei and tui, occur in the comic writers.

3. Nostrum and vestrum are contracted from nostrōrūm, nostrārūm, and vestrōrūm, vestrārūm. Respecting the difference in the use of nostrum and nostrī, vestrum and vestrī, see § 212, R. 2, N. 2.

4. The preposition cum is affixed to the ablative of these pronouns in both numbers; as, me-cum, nobiscum, etc. Cf. § 136, R. 1.

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 134. Adjective pronouns may be divided into the following classes:—demonstrative, intensive, relative, interrogative, indefinite, possessive, and patrial.

NOTE. Some pronouns belong to two of these classes.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

Demonstrative pronouns are such as specify what object is meant.

They are ille, iste, hic, and is, and their compounds, and are thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. il'-lē,	il'-lā,	il'-lūd,	il'-lī,	il'-læ,	il'-lā,

Ab. il'-lō.	il'-lā.	il'-lō.	il'-līs.	il'-līs.	il'-līs.

*See § 15, 1.

Iste is declined like ille.

V. —	—	—	—	—	—
Ab. e'-ō.	e'-ā.	e'-ō.	i'-is or e'-is.	i'-is or e'-is.	i'-is or e'-is.

REMARK 1. Instead of ille, ollus was anciently used; whence olli masc. plur. in Virgil. Illas fem., for illius and illi, is found in Lucretius and Cato, as also in Cato, has for huic fem.; hice for hi, and hæc for has in Plautus and Terence. Im for eum, is found in the Twelve Tables; eii for ei, and ibus for is, in Plautus; eæ, fem., for ei, and eabus for is, in Cato.

REM. 2. From ecce, lo! with ille, iste, and is, are formed, in colloquial language, nom., ecca; eccilla, eccillud; acc. sing., eccum, eccam; eccillum (by syncope ellum), eccillam; eccistam; acc. plur., eccoe, ecca.

REM. 3. Istic and illic are compounded of iste hic, and ille hic; or, as some say, of iste ce, and ille ce. The former sometimes retains the aspirate, as isthic. They are more emphatic than ille and iste.

Istic is thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. is'-tic,	is'-tæc,	is'-tœc, or is'-tūc,	N. —	is'-tæc,	—
Ac. is'-tunc,	is'-tanc,	is'-tœc, or is'-tūc,	Ac. —	—	is'-tæc.
Ab. is'-tœc.	is'-tæc.	is'-tœc.

Illic is declined in the same manner.

REM. 4. Ce, intensive, is sometimes added to the several cases of hic, and rarely to some cases of the other demonstrative pronouns; as, hujusce, huncce, hancce, hocce, hice, hæce or hæc, horunc, haruncce, harunce, or harunc, hoce, hæce, hice; illiusce, illæce, illoce, illisce, istæce, istisce; ejusce, isce. When ne, interrogative, is also annexed, ce becomes ci; as, hæccine, hoscine, hiscine; istuccine, istaccine, istoscine; illiccine, illanccine.

REM. 5. Môdi, the genitive of môdus, annexed to the genitive singular of demonstrative and relative pronouns, imparts to them the signification of adjectives of quality; as, hujusmôdi or hujuscemôdi, like talis, of this sort, such; illiusmôdi and istiusmôdi, of that sort; cujusmôdi, of what sort, like qualis; cu- juacemōdī, cujuacemōdī, cujuamōdicumque, of what kind soever; cujuademōdī, of some kind. So also istimōdī, cuimōdī and cucimōdī, instead of istiusmōdī, cujuismōdī, etc.

REM. 6. The suffix dem is annexed to is, forming idem, "the same," which is thus declined:—

			Singular.
			M.	F.	N.
N.	ī'-dem,		ī'-dem,	e'-ā-dem,	ī'-dem,
G.	e-jus'-dem,		e-jus'-dem,	e-jus'-dem,	e-jus'-dem,
D.	e-ī'-dem,		e-ī'-dem,	e-ī'-dem,	e-ī'-dem,
Ac.	e-un'-dem,		e-un'-dem,	e-an'-dem,	ī'-dem,
V.
Ab.	e-ū'-dem.		e-ū'-dem.	e-ā'-dem.	e-ū'-dem.

			Plural.
			M.	F.	N.
N.	ī'-dem,		ī'-dem,	e-ā'-dem,	e'-ā-dem,
G.	e-o-run'-dem,		e-o-run'-dem,	e-a-run'-dem,	e-o-run'-dem,
D.	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem,		e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem,	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem,	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem,
Ac.	e-os'-dem,		e-os'-dem,	e-as'-dem,	e'-ā-dem,
V.
Ab.	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem.		e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem.	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem.	e-is'-dem, or ī-is'-dem.

NOTE 1. In compound pronouns, s before d is changed into n; as, eundem, eorundem, etc.

NOTE 2. In Sallust idem, and in Palladius hiedem occur for iudem; and Ennius in Cicero has eademmet for eidem.

INTENSIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 135. Intensive pronouns are such as serve to render an object emphatic.

To this class belong ipse, and the intensive compounds already mentioned. See §§ 133, R. 2, and 134, R. 4.

Ipse is compounded of is and the suffix pse, and is thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. ip'-sē,	ip'-sā,	ip'-sum,	ip'-si,	ip'-sae,	ip'-sā,
G. ip'-sī-us,	ip'-sī-us,	ip'-sī-us,	ip'-sō-rum,	ip'-sā-rum,	ip'-sō-rum,
D. ip'-si,	ip'-si,	ip'-si,	ip'-sis,	ip'-sis,	ip'-sis,
Ac. ip'-sum,	ip'-sam,	ip'-sum,	ip'-sōs,	ip'-sās,	ip'-sā,
V. ip'-sē,	ip'-sā,	ip'-sum,	ip'-si,	ip'-sae,	ip'-sā,
Ab. ip'-sō.	ip'-sā.	ip'-sō.	ip'-sis.	ip'-sis.	ip'-sis.

REMARK 1. Ipse is commonly subjoined to nouns or pronouns; as, Jupiter ipse, tu ipse, Jupiter himself, etc.; and hence is sometimes called the adjective pronoun.

REM. 2. A nominative ipseus, occurs in early writers, and a superlative ipselismus, his very self, is found in Plautus.

REM. 3. In old writers the is of ipse is declined, while pse remains undeclined; as, eapse, (nom. and abl.), eampse, and ecapse, instead of ipsea, ipsam, and ipso. So also reapse, i. e. re eapse, "in fact."

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 136. Relative pronouns are such as relate to a preceding noun or pronoun.

1. They are qui, who, and the compounds quicumque and quisquis, whoever. The latter are called general relatives.

2. In a general sense, the demonstrative pronouns are often relatives; but the name is commonly appropriated to those above specified. They serve to introduce a proposition, limiting or explaining a preceding noun or pronoun, to which they relate, and which is called the antecedent.

Qui is thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. qui ,	quæ ,	quod ,	qui ,	quæ ,	quæ ,
G. cū'-jūs ,	cū'-jūs ,	cū'-jūs ,	quō'-rum ,	quā'-rum ,	quō'-rum ,
D. cui ,*	cui ,	cui ,	quī'-būs ,	quī'-būs ,	quī'-būs ,
Ac. quem ,	quam ,	quod ,	quōs ,	quās ,	quæ ,
V. —	—	—	—	—	—
Ab. quō .	quā .	quō .	quī'-būs .	quī'-būs .	quī'-būs .

REMARK 1. Qui is sometimes used for the ablative singular, in all genders, and rarely also for the ablative plural. To the ablatives quo, qua, qui, and quibus, cum is commonly annexed, cf. § 133, 4. Cicero uses quicum for quōcum, when an indefinite person is meant.

REM. 2. Quis (monosyllabic, § 9, R. 1), and quis are sometimes used in the dative and ablative plural for quibus. Cujus and cui were anciently written quijus and quoi: and, instead of the genitive cujus, a relative adjective cujus, a, um, very rarely occurs.

3. Quicumque, (or quicunque), is declined like qui.

REM. 3. Qui is sometimes separated from cumque by the interposition of one or more words; as, quæ me cumque vocant terras. Virg. A similar separation sometimes occurs in the other compounds of cumque.

4. Quisquis is thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.
N. quis'-quis ,	quis'-quis ,†	quid'-quid ,	N. quī'-quī ,
Ac. quem'-quem ,	—	quid'-quid ,	D. quī'-bus'-quī'-bus .
Ab. quō'-quō .	quā'-quā .	quō'-quō .

REM. 4. Quicquid is sometimes used for quidquid. Quisquis for quisquis occurs in Plautus; and quidquid is used adjectively in Cato R. R. 48.

* See § 9, 5; and cf. § 306, (1.)

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 137. Interrogative pronouns are such as serve to inquire which of a number of objects is intended.

They are

Quis?	} who? what?	Ecquis?	} is any one?	Cūjus? whose?
Quisnam?		Ecquisnam?		Cūjas? of what country?
Qui?	} which? what?	Numquis?
Quinam?		Numquisnam,

1. Quis is commonly used substantively; qui, adjectively. The interrogative qui is declined like qui the relative.

Quis is thus declined:—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. quis,	quæ,	quid,	qui,	quæ,	quæ,
G. cū-jūs,	cū-jūs,	cū-jūs,	quō-rum,	quæ-rum,	quō-rum,
D. cui,	cui,	cui,	quī-būs,	quī-būs,	quī-būs,
Ac. quem,	quam,	quid,	quōs,	quās,	quæ,
V. —	—	—	—	—	—
Ab. quō.	quā.	quō.	quī-būs.	quī-būs.	quī-būs.

REMARK (1.) Quis is sometimes used by comic writers in the feminine, and even in the neuter. Quisnam, quisque and quisquam also occur as feminine.

REM. (2.) Qui is used for the ablative of quis in all genders, as it is for that of the relative qui. Cf. § 136, R. 1.

REM. (3.) Quis and qui have sometimes the signification of the indefinite pronoun aliquis (some one, any one), especially after the conjunctions ec (for en), si, ne, neu, nisi, num; and after relatives, as quo, quanto, etc. Sometimes quis and qui are used in the sense of quālis? what sort?

2. The compounds quisnam and quinam have respectively the signification and declension of the interrogatives quis and qui. In the poets nam sometimes stands before quis. Virg. G. 4, 445.

3. Ecquis and numquis are declined and used like quis; but are sometimes adjectives. Virg. Ecl. 10, 28: Cic. Att. 13, 8.

REM. (4.) Ecqua is sometimes found in the nominative singular feminine; and the neuter plural of numquis is numqua.

REM. (5.) Ecqui and numqui also occur, declined like the interrogative qui, and, like that, used adjectively.

4. Ecquisnam and numquisnam are declined like ecquis; but are found only in the singular;—the former in the nominative in all genders, and in the ablative masculine; the latter in the nominative masculine and accusative neuter. In the nominative feminine and in the ablative, the former is used adjectively.

5. The interrogative cujus is also defective :—

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	F.
N. cū'-jūs,	cū'-jā,	cū'-jum,	N. cū'-jās,
Ac. cū'-jum,	cū'-jam,	_____	Ac. cū'-jās.
Ab. _____	cū'-jā.	_____

6. Cujās is declined like an adjective of one termination; cūjas, cujāts. See § 139, 4.

NOTE. The interrogative pronouns are used not only in direct questions but in such dependent clauses also, as contain only an indirect question; as, e. g. in the direct question, quis est? who is he? in the indirect, nescio quis sit, I know not who he is. Qui, in this sense, is found for quis; as, qui sit apertū, he discloses who he is. Cf. § 265, N.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

§ 138. Indefinite pronouns are such as denote an object in a general manner, without indicating a particular individual. They are

Alquis, some one.	Quisquam, any one.	Quidam, a certain one.
Siquis, if any.	Quispiam, some one.	Quilibet, } any one you
Nēquis, lest any.	Unusquisque, each.	Quivis, } please.
Quisque, every one.	Alloquiam, any, some.	Quis and qui, § 137, R. (3.)

NOTE. Siquis and nequis are commonly written separately, si quis and ne quis: so also unus quisque.

1. Alquis is thus declined :—

Singular.
M.	F.	N.
N. al'-i-quis,	al'-i-qua,	al'-i-quod, or -quid,
G. al-i-cū'-jus,	al-i-cū'-jus,	al-i-cū'-jus,
D. al'-i-cui,	al'-i-cui,	al'-i-cui,
Ac. al'-i-quem,	al'-i-quam,	al'-i-quod, or -quid,
V. _____	_____	_____
Ab. al'-i-quo.	al'-i-quā.	al'-i-quo.

Plural.
M.	F.	N.
N. al'-i-qui,	al'-i-quæ,	al'-i-qua,
G. al-i-quō'-rum,	al-i-quā'-rum,	al-i-quō'-rum,
D. a-liq'-ui-bus,*	a-liq'-ui-bus,	a-liq'-ui-bus,
Ac. al'-i-quos,	al'-i-quas,	al'-i-qua,
V. _____	_____	_____
Ab. a-liq'-ui-bus.	a-liq'-ui-bus.	a-liq'-ui-bus.

* Pronounced a-lik'-ui-bus. See §§ 9, 4, and 21, 3.

2. Siquis and nēquis are declined in the same manner; but they sometimes have quæ in the fem. singular and neut. plural.

(a.) Aliquis, in the nominative singular masculine, is used both as a substantive and as an adjective;—aliqui, as an adjective, but is nearly obsolete. Aliqua in the fem. sing. occurs as an adjective in Lucretius, 4, 2, 84. Siqui, and nēqui, which are properly adjectives, are used also substantively for siquis and nēquis, and in the nominative singular masculine these two forms are equivalent. The ablatives aliqui and siqui also occur.

(b.) Aliquid, siquid, and nēquid, like quid, are used substantively; aliquid, etc., like quod, are used adjectively.

3. Quisque, quisquam, and quispiam, are declined like quis.

(a.) In the neuter singular, however, quisque has quodque, quidque, or quicque; quisquam has quidquam or quicquam; and quispiam has quodpiam, quidpiam, or quippiam. The forms quidque or quicque, quidpiam or quippiam are used substantively.

(b.) Quisquam wants the feminine (except quamquam, Plant. Mil. 4, 2, 68), and also the plural, and, with a few exceptions in Plautus, it is always used substantively, its place as an adjective being supplied by ullus. Quispiam is scarcely used in the plural, except in the nominative feminine, quæpiam.

4. Unusquisque is compounded of unus and quisque, which are often written separately, and both words are declined.

Thus unusquisque, uniuscujusque, unicuique, unumquemque, etc. The neuter is unumquodque, or unumquidque. It has no plural. Unumquidquid for unumquidque occurs in Plautus and Lucretius.

5. Quidam, quilibet, and quivis, are declined like qui, except that they have both quod and quid in the neuter, the former used adjectively, the latter substantively.

NOTE. Quidam has usually n before d in the accusative singular and genitive plural; as, quendam, quorundam, etc. Cf. § 134, NOTE 1.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 139. 1. The possessive are derived from the genitives of the substantive pronouns, and of quis, and designate something belonging to their primitives.

They are meus, tuus, suus, noster, vester, and cujus. Meus, tuus, and suus, are declined like bōnus; but meus has in the vocative singular masculine mi, and very rarely meus. Cf. § 105, R. 3. In late writers mi occurs also in the feminine and neuter.

2. Cujus also is declined like bōnus; but is defective. See § 137, 5. It occurs only in early Latin and in legal phraseology.

3. Noster and vester are declined like piger. See § 106.

REMARK 1. The terminations pte and met intensive are sometimes annexed to possessive pronouns, especially to the ablative singular; as, suapte pondere, by its own weight; suapte manu, by his own hand. So nostræpæ culpâ; suæpæ amicum; meæmet culpâ. The suffix met is usually followed by ipse; as, Junnilal suæmet ipse fraude captus abiit. Liv.; but Sallust has meamet facta dicere.

REM. 2. Suus, like its primitive sui, has always a reflexive signification, referring to the subject of the sentence. Meus, tuus, noster, and vester, are also used reflexively, when the subject of the proposition is of the first or second person. See § 132, 4.

PATRIAL PRONOUNS.

4. (a.) These are nostras and cūjas. See §§ 100, 2, and 128, 6. They are declined like adjectives of one termination; as, nostras, nostrātis, but both are defective.

(b.) Nostras is found in the nominative and genitive singular, in the nominative plural, (masc. and fem., nostrātes, neut. nostratia), and in the ablative, (nostratibus). Cūjas or quōjas occurs in the nominative, genitive and accusative (cujātem masc.) singular, and in the nominative plural, masc. (cujātes). Cf. § 137, 6.—Nostrātis and cujātis (or quojātis) also occur in the nominative.

PRONOMINAL ADJECTIVES.

5. To the adjective pronouns may be added certain adjectives of so general a meaning, that they partake, in some degree, of the character of pronouns. Of this kind are:—

(1.) (a.) Alius, ullus, nullus, and nonnullus, which answer to the question, who?

(b.) Alter, neuter, alterūter, utervis, and uterlibet, which answer to the question, ūter? which of two?

(2.) Adjectives denoting quality, size, or number, in a general way. These stand in relation to one another, and are hence called correlatives.

REMARK. The relatives and interrogatives of this class begin with qu, and are alike in form. The indefinites are formed from the relatives by prefixing ali. The demonstratives begin with t, and are sometimes strengthened by dem. A general relative, having a meaning more general than the relative, is formed by doubling the simple relative, or by affixing to it the termination cumque. A general indefinite is formed by annexing libet or vis to the relative.

(3.) Their mutual relation is denoted by the following table, with which may be compared the adverbial correlatives, § 191, R. 1.

Interrog.	Demonstr.	Relat.	Relat. general.	Indefin.	Indef. general.
quālis?	tālis,	quālis,	{ qualis-qualis, qualiscumque.	—————	qualialibet,
quantus?	{ tantus, tantundem,	{ quantus,	{ quantus-quantus, quantuscumque,	aliquantus,	quantualibet,
quōt?	tōt, totidem,	quōt,	{ quot-quot, quotcumque,	aliquot,	quotlibet,
quōtus?	tōtus,	quōtus,	quotuscumque,	(aliquōtus),	—————.

Diminutives.

quantūlus? tantūlus. ———. quantuluscumque. aliquantūlum. ———.

NOTE 1. The suffix cumque, which is used in forming general relatives, is composed of the relative adverb cum (quum) and the suffix que, expressive of universality, as in quisque and in adverbs, (see § 191). Cumque, therefore, originally signified 'whenever.' When attached to a relative, whether a pronoun, adjective, or adverb, it renders the relative meaning more general; as, qui, who; quicumque, whoever; or, every one who.

NOTE 2. Cujusmodi is sometimes used for qualis, and hujusmodi, istiusmodi, eiusmodi, and eiusdemmodi for tālis. Cf. § 184, R. 5.

VERBS.

§ 140. A verb is a word by which something is affirmed of a person or thing.

1. That of which any thing is affirmed is called the subject of the verb. (2.) That which is affirmed of the subject is called the predicate. Cf. § 201.

3. A verb either expresses an action or state; as, puer legit, the boy reads; aqua calet, the water is warm;—or it connects an attribute with a subject; as, terra est rotunda, the earth is round.

4. All verbs belong to the former of these classes, except sum, I am, the most common use of which is, to connect an attribute with a subject. When so used, it is called the copula.

§ 141. Verbs are either active or neuter.

NOTE. Active and neuter verbs are sometimes called transitive and intransitive; and verbs of motion are by some grammarians divided into active-transitive and active-intransitive, according as they require, or do not require, an object after them.

I. An active or transitive verb expresses such an action as requires the addition of an object to complete the sense; as, amo te, I love thee; sequitur consulem, he follows the consul.

II. A neuter or intransitive verb expresses such an action or state, as does not require the addition of an object to complete the sense; as, equus currit, the horse runs; gradior, I walk.

REMARK 1. Many verbs, in Latin, are considered as neuter, which are usually translated into English by active verbs. Thus indulgeo, I indulge, noceo, I hurt, pareo, I obey, are reckoned among neuter verbs. In strictness, such Latin verbs denote rather a state than an action, and their sense would be more exactly expressed by the verb to be with an adjective; as, 'I am indulgent, I am hurtful,' etc. Some verbs in Latin, which do not usually take an object after them, are yet active, since the object is omitted by ellipsis. Thus credo properly signifies to intrust, and, in this sense, takes an object; as, credo tibi salutem meam, I intrust my safety to you; but by ellipsis it usually means to believe; as, crede mihi, believe me.

To verbs belong voices, moods, tenses, numbers, and persons.

VOICES.

(a.) Voice, in verbs, is the form by which they denote the relation of the agent to the action of the verb.

(b.) Most active Latin verbs have, for this purpose, two forms, which are called the active and passive voices.

1. A verb in the active voice represents the agent as acting upon some person or thing, called the object; as, puer legit librum, the boy is reading a book.

2. A verb in the passive voice represents the object as acted upon by the agent; as, liber legitur a puëro, a book is read by the boy.

REM. 2. By comparing the two preceding examples, it will be seen that they have the same meaning. The passive voice may thus be substituted at pleasure for the active, by making the object of the active the subject of the passive, and placing the subject of the active in the ablative case, with or without the preposition a or ab, according as it is a voluntary or involuntary agent. The active form is used to direct the attention especially to the agent as acting; the passive, chiefly to exhibit the object as acted upon. In the one case the object, in the other the agent, is frequently omitted, and left indefinite; as, puer legit, the boy is reading, scil. librum, litteras, etc., a book, a letter, etc.; virtus laudatur, virtue is praised, scil. ab hominibus, by men.

The two voices are distinguished from each other by peculiar terminations. Cf. § 152.

§ 142. 1. Neuter verbs have, in general, only the form of the active voice. They are, however, sometimes used impersonally in the passive voice. See § 184, 2.

2. The neuter verbs audeo, I dare, fido, I trust, gaudeo, I rejoice, and soleo, I am wont, have the passive form in the perfect and its cognate tenses; as, ausus sum, I dared. Hence these verbs are called neuter passives, or semi-deponents.

3. The neuter verbs vapulo, I am beaten, and vëneo, I am sold, have an active form, but a passive meaning, and are hence called neutral passives.

4. (a.) Deponent verbs have a transitive or intransitive signification with only the passive form. They are called deponent verbs, from depōno, to lay aside, as having laid aside their active form, and their passive signification; as, sëquor, I follow; mörior, I die.

(b.) Some deponent verbs have both an active and a passive signification, especially in the perfect participle. These are sometimes called common verbs. Cf. § 162, 17.

MOODS.

§ 143. (a.) Moods (or modes) are forms of the verb, which denote the relation of the action or state, expressed by the verb, to the mind of the speaker or to some other action.

(b.) Latin verbs have four moods—the indicative, the subjunctive, the imperative, and the infinitive.

1. The indicative mood is used in independent and absolute assertions and inquiries; as, amo, I love; audisne? dost thou hear?

2. The subjunctive mood is used to express an action or state simply as conceived by the mind; as, si me obsëcret, redibo; if he entreat me, I will return.

3. The imperative mood is used in commanding, exhorting, or entreating; as, ama, love thou; amanto, they shall love.

4. The infinitive mood is used to denote an action or state indefinitely, without limiting it to any person or thing as its subject; as, virtus est vitium fugere, to shun vice is a virtue.

TENSES.

§ 144. Tenses are forms of the verb, denoting the time of the action or state expressed by the verb.

1. Time admits of a threefold division, into present, past, and future; and, in each of these times, an action may be represented either as going on, or as completed. From these two divisions arise the six tenses of a Latin verb, each of which is distinguished by its peculiar terminations.

2. They are called the present, imperfect, future, perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect tenses.

Present	{ action	{	amo , I love, or am loving; Present tense .
Past	{ not com-	{	amābam , I was loving; Imperfect tense .
Future	{ pleted;	{	amābo , I shall love, or be loving; Future tense .
Present	{ action	{	amāvī , I have loved; Perfect tense .
Past	{ com-	{	amāveram , I had loved; Pluperfect tense .
Future	{ pleted;	{	amāverō , I shall have loved; Future perfect tense .

3. There is the same number of tenses in the passive voice, in which actions not completed are represented by simple forms of the verb, and those which are completed by compound forms.

Present	{ action	{	amor , I am loved; Present tense .
Past	{ not com-	{	amābar , I was loved; Imperfect tense .
Future	{ pleted;	{	amābor , I shall be loved; Future tense .
Present	{ action	{	amātus sum , or fuī , I have been loved; Perfect tense .
Past	{ com-	{	amātus eram , or fuēram , I had been loved; Pluperfect .
Future	{ pleted;	{	amātus ero , or fuēro , I shall have been loved; Future Perfect .

§ 145. I. The present tense represents an action as now going on, and not completed; as, āmo, I love, or am loving.

1. Any existing custom, or general truth, may be expressed by this tense; as, apud Parthos, signum datur tympano; among the Parthians, the signal is given by a drum. A general truth is sometimes also expressed by the perfect.

2. The present tense may also denote an action which has existed for some time, and which still exists; as, tot annos bella gero; for so many years I have waged, and am still waging war.

3. The present tense is often in narration used for the perfect indefinite. It is then called the historical present; as, desiliunt ex equis, prociuant in primum; they dismount, they fly forward to the front.

II. The imperfect tense represents an action as going on at some past time, but not then completed; as, amābam, I was loving.

1. The imperfect sometimes denotes repeated or customary past action; as, legēbam, I was wont to read.

2. It may also denote an action which had existed for some time, and which was still existing at a certain past time; as, audiebat jamdudum verba; he had long heard, and was still hearing the words.

3. In letters, and with reference not to the time of their being written, but to that of their being read, the imperfect is sometimes used for the present as, expectābam, I was expecting, (i. e. when I wrote).

4. The imperfect also sometimes denotes the intending, preparing, or attempting to act at a definite past time.

III. The future tense denotes that an action will be going on hereafter, but without reference to its completion; as, amābo, I shall love, or shall be loving.

IV. The perfect tense represents an action either as just completed, or as completed in some indefinite past time; as, amāvī, I have loved, or I loved.

REMARK. In the former sense, it is called the perfect definite; in the latter, the perfect indefinite, historical perfect, or aorist.

V. The pluperfect tense represents a past action as completed, at or before the time of some other past action or event; as, litteras scripsēram, quum nuncius vēnit; I had written the letter, when the messenger arrived.

VI. The future perfect tense denotes that an action will be completed, at or before the time of some other future action or event; as, quum cœnavēro, proficiscar; when I shall have supped, I will go.

NOTE 1. This tense is often, but improperly, called the future subjunctive. It has the signification of the indicative mood, and corresponds to the second future in English.

NOTE 2. The imperfect, historical perfect, and pluperfect tenses are sometimes called preterites or the preterite tenses.

NOTE 3. The present, imperfect, and future tenses passive, in English, do not express the exact sense of those tenses in Latin, as denoting an action which is, was, or will be, going on at a certain time. Thus laudor signifies, not 'I am praised,' but 'I am in the act of being praised,' or, if such an expression is admissible, 'I am being praised.'

REMARK 1. The six tenses above enumerated are found only in the indicative mood.

REM. 2. The subjunctive mood, in the regular conjugation, has the present and past, but no future tenses.

NOTE 4. The tenses of the subjunctive mood have less definiteness of meaning, in regard to time, than those of the indicative. Thus the present and perfect, besides their common signs, may or can, may have or can have, must, in certain connections, be translated by might, could, would, or should; might have, could have, etc. The tenses of this mood must often, also, be translated by the corresponding tenses of the indicative. For a more particular account of the signification of each of the tenses of the subjunctive mood, see § 260.

REM. 3. The imperative mood has two tenses—a present and a future; the former for that which is to be done at once, and the latter for that which is to be done in future.

REM. 4. The infinitive mood has three tenses—the present, the perfect, and the future; the first of which denotes an incomplete, the second a completed action, and the last an action to be performed.

NUMBERS.

§ 146. Number, in verbs, is the form by which the unity or plurality of their subject is denoted. Hence verbs, like nouns, have two numbers—the singular and the plural. Cf. § 35, 1.

PERSONS.

§ 147. Person, in verbs, is the form by which they denote the person of their subject. Hence in each number there are three persons—the first, second, and third. Cf. § 35, 2.

1. The imperative present has only the second person in both numbers. The imperative future has in each number the second and third persons, but in the singular they have both the same form, -to in the active, and -tor in the passive voice.

2. As the signification of the infinitive mood is not limited to any subject, it admits no change to express either number or person.

3. The following are the terminations of the different persons of each number, in the indicative and subjunctive moods, in both voices:—

	Active.			Passive.
Person.	1.	2.	3.	1.	2.	3.
Singular.	o, i, or m,	s,	t;	r,	ris,	tur;
Plural.	mus,	tis,	nt.	mur,	mini,	ntur.

These may be called personal terminations.

REMARK 1. The perfect indicative active is irregular in the second person singular and plural, which end in sti and stis, and in one of the forms of the third person plural, which ends in re.

REM. 2. The passive form above given belongs to the simple tenses only.

REM. 3. The pronouns of the first and second persons, ego, nos; tu and vos, are seldom expressed in Latin as subjects of a finite verb, the several persons being sufficiently distinguished by the terminations of the verb.

PARTICIPLES, GERUNDS, AND SUPINES.

§ 148. 1. A participle is a word derived from a verb, and partaking of its meaning, but having the form of an adjective.

(1.) Like a verb, it has different voices and tenses; like an adjective, it has *declension and gender; and like both, it has two numbers.

(2.) Active verbs have usually four participles—two in the active voice, a present and a future; as, amans, loving; amaturus, about to love;—and two in the passive voice, a perfect and a future; as, amatus, loved, or having been loved; amandus, to be loved.

*See §§ 105, R. 2: and 111, R.

(3.) Neuter verbs have usually only the participles of the active voice.

(4.) Deponent verbs, both active and neuter, may have the participles of both voices.

2. (a.) Gerunds are verbal nouns, used only in the oblique cases, and expressing the action or state of the verb; as, amandi, of loving, etc.

(b.) Like other abstract nouns, they are found only in the singular number, and by their cases supply the place of a declinable present infinitive active.

3. Supines also are verbal nouns of the fourth declension in the accusative and ablative singular; as, amatum, to love; amatu, to be loved.

REMARK. These also serve in certain connections to supply the place of the infinitive present both active and passive. The supine in um is called the former supine; that in u, the latter. The former is commonly used in an active, the latter in a passive sense.

CONJUGATION.

§ 149. 1. The conjugation of a verb is the regular formation and arrangement of its several parts, according to their voices, moods, tenses, numbers, and persons.

2. There are four conjugations, which are characterized by the vowel before re in the present of the infinitive active.

In the first conjugation, it is a long;

In the second, e long;

In the third, i short;

In the fourth, i long.

EXCEPTION. Do, dare, to give, and such of its compounds as are of the first conjugation, have d short before re.

§ 150. A verb, like a noun, consists of two parts—the root, and the termination. Cf. § 40, R. 10.

1. The first or general root of a verb consists of those letters that are found in every part. This root may always be found by removing the termination of the present infinitive.

2. There are also two special roots, the first of which is found in the perfect, and is called the second root; the other, found in the supine or perfect participle, is called the third root.

3. In regular verbs of the first, second, and fourth conjugations, the second root is formed by adding, respectively, av, u, and iv, to the general root; and the third root by a similar addition of at, it, and it.

REMARK. Many verbs, in each of the conjugations, form their second and third roots irregularly.

4. In the third conjugation, the second root either is the same as the first, or is formed from it by adding s; the third root is formed by adding t. See § 171.

NOTE. In the second and fourth conjugations, e and i before o are considered as belonging not to the root, but to the termination. In verbs whose second or third roots are formed irregularly, the general root often undergoes some change in the parts derived from them.

5. The vowel which unites the general root with the remaining letters of the verb, is called the connecting vowel. Each conjugation, except the third, is, in a great degree, distinguished by a peculiar connecting vowel, which is the same as characterizes the infinitives. See § 149, 2.

(a.) In the third conjugation, the connecting vowel is generally i or t. In the second and fourth conjugations, and in verbs in io of the third, a second connecting vowel is sometimes added to that which characterizes the conjugation; as, a in doceant, u in capiant, etc.

(b.) In verbs whose second and third roots are formed irregularly, the connecting vowel often disappears, or is changed in the parts derived from those roots; but it is almost always found in the parts derived from the first root.

§ 151. 1. From the first root are derived, in each voice, the present, imperfect, and future indicative; the present and imperfect subjunctive; the imperative, and the present infinitive. From this root are derived also the present participle, the gerund, and the future participle passive.

2. From the second root are derived, in the active voice, the perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect indicative; the perfect and pluperfect subjunctive, and the perfect infinitive.

3. (a.) From the third root are derived, in the active voice, the supine in um, and the future participle; the latter of which, with the verb esse, constitutes the future infinitive active.

(b.) From this root are derived, in the passive voice, the supine in u, and the perfect participle; from the latter of which, with the verb sum, are formed all the tenses which in the active are derived from the second root. The future infinitive passive is formed from the supine in um, and tri, the present infinitive passive of the verb eo, to go.

4. The present and perfect indicative, the supine in um, and the present infinitive, are called the principal parts of the verb, because from the first three the several roots are ascertained, and from the last, the characteristic vowel of the conjugation. In the passive voice, the principal parts are the present indicative and infinitive, and the perfect participle.

NOTE. As the supine in um is wanting in most verbs, the third root must often be determined from the perfect participle, or the future participle active.

§ 152. The following table exhibits a connected view of the verbal terminations, in all the conjugations. By annexing these to the several roots, all the parts of a verb may be formed.

Terminations added to the First Root.

REMARK 1. In analyzing a verb, the voice, person, and number, are ascertained by the personal terminations. See § 147, 3. The conjugation, mood, and tense, are, in general, determined by the letter or letters which intervene between the root of the verb and the personal terminations. Thus in amabamus, mus denotes that the verb is of the active voice, plural number, and first person; ba denotes that it is of the indicative mood, imperfect tense; and the connecting vowel a determines it to be of the first conjugation. So in amarentini, mini denotes the passive voice, plural number, and second person; re, the subjunctive mood, imperfect tense; and a, as before, the first conjugation.

REM. 2. Sometimes, the part between the root of the verb and the personal termination, does not precisely determine the conjugation, mood, and tense, but only within certain limits. In such cases, the conjugation may be learned, by finding the present tense in the dictionary, and if two forms are alike in the same conjugation, they can only be distinguished by the sense. Thus amēmus and docēmus have the same termination; but, as amo is of the first, and doceo of the second conjugation, the former is determined to be the subjunctive, the latter the indicative, present. Regar may be either the future indicative, or the present subjunctive—bibimus either the present or the perfect indicative.

§ 153. SUM, I am, is called an auxiliary verb, because it is used, in conjunction with participles, to supply the want of simple forms in other verbs. From its denoting existence, it is sometimes called the substantive verb.

REMARK. Sum is very irregular in those parts which, in other verbs, are formed from the first root. Its imperfect and future tenses, except in the third person plural of the latter, have the form of a pluperfect and future perfect. It is thus conjugated:—

§ 154. REMARK 1. A present participle ens seems to have been anciently in use, and is still found in the compounds absens, prasens, and pōtens.

REM. 2. The perfect fuī, and its derivative tenses, are formed from an obsolete fuo, whence come also the participle futūrus, an old subjunctive present fuam, fuas, fuat; —, —, fuant, and the forms fuius, perf. ind., fuerint, perf. subj., and fuisse, plup. subj.

REM. 3. From fuo appear also to be derived the following:—

Subj. imperf. fō'-rem, fō'-rēs, fō'-rēt; —, —, fō'-rent.
Inf. pres. fō'-rē.

These forms seem to have been contracted from fuērem, etc., and fuēre. Fōrem is equivalent in meaning to essem, but the infinitive fōre has, in most cases, acquired a future signification, equivalent to futūrus esse.

REM. 4. Siem, sies, siet, sient, for sim, sia, sit, sint, are found in ancient writers, as are also escit for erit, escunt for erunt, ese, esētis, and esent, for esse, essētis, and essent.

REM. 5. Like sum are conjugated its compounds, absum, adsum, dēsum, insum, intersum, obsum, præsum, subsum, and supersum.

REM. 6. PROSUM, from the old form prōd for prō, and sum, has d after pro, when the simple verb begins with e; as, REM. 7. (a.) POSSUM is compounded of pōtis, able, and sum. They are sometimes written separately, and then pōtis is the same in all genders and numbers.

(b.) In composition, is is omitted in pōtis, and t, as in other cases, coming before s, is changed into s. In the infinitive, and imperfect subjunctive, es of the simple verb is dropped, as is also f at the beginning of the second root. In every other respect possum is conjugated like sum, wherever it is found; but the imperative, and the parts derived from the third root, are wanting.

DEPONENT VERBS.

§ 161. Deponent verbs are conjugated like the passive voice, and have also all the participles and participial formations of the active voice. Neuter deponent verbs, however, want the future passive participle, except that the neuter in dama is sometimes used impersonally. See § 184, 8.

The following is an example of an active deponent verb of the first conjugation :—

REMARKS ON THE CONJUGATIONS.

Of the Tenses formed from the First Root.

§ 162. 1. A few words in the present subjunctive of the first and third conjugations, in the earlier writers and in the poets, end in im, is, it, etc.; as, edim, edis, edit, edimus; comedim, comedis, comedunt; for edam, etc. comedam, etc.; dum, duis, duit, duint; and perduim, perduis, perduint, perduint; for dem, etc. perdam, etc. from old forms dao and perduo, for uo and perdo: so creduis, creduis, and also creduam, creduis, creduat, for credam, etc. from the old form creduo, for credo. The form in im, etc. was retained as the regular form in sine and oculim, from suum and oculo, and in their compounds.

2. The imperfect indicative in the fourth conjugation, sometimes, especially in the more ancient writers, ends in ibam and ibar, for iēbam and iēbar, and the future in ibo and ibor, for iam and iar; as, vestibat, Virg., largibar, Propert., for vestiebat, largiebar; scibo, opperibor, for sciam, opperiar. Ibam and ibo were retained as the regular forms of eo, queo, and nequeo. Cf. § 182.

3. The termination re, in the second person singular of the passive voice, is rare in the present, but common in the other simple tenses.

4. The imperatives of dico, dāce, fācio, and fēro, are usually written dīc, dūc, fāc, and fēr; in like manner their compounds, except those compounds of fācio which change a into i; as, effice, confice; but callāce also is found in Cicero; and in old writers dīce, edāce, addāce, indīce, dāce, abdāce, redāce, tradāce, and fāce. Inger for ingere is rare. Scio has not aci, but its place is supplied by scito, and scilote is preferred to scite.

5. In the imperative future of the passive voice, but especially of deponents, early writers and their imitators sometimes used the active instead of the passive form; as, arbitrāto, complexāto, ultio, nitto; for arbitrātor, etc.; and censorio, utendo, tuendo, etc. for censorior, etc.—In the second and third persons singular occur, also, forms in -mīno; as, hortāmīno, veremīno, fruinīno; for hortātor, etc.

6. The syllable er was often added to the present infinitive passive by early writers and especially by the poets; as, amarier for amāri, dicier for dici.

Of the Tenses formed from the Second Root.

7. (a.) When the second root ends in v, a syncopation and contraction often occur in the tenses formed from it, by omitting v, and sinking the first vowel of the termination in the final vowel of the root, when followed, in the fourth conjugation, by s, and in the other conjugations, by s or r; as, audissem for audivissem, amavisti for amavisti, implorant for implēverunt, nōram and novise for novēram and novise.

(b.) When the second root ends in is, v is often omitted without contraction; as, audivēro for audivēro; audivisse for audivisse.

(c.) When this root ends in s or x, especially in the third conjugation, the syllables is, iss, and iss, are sometimes omitted in the termination of tenses derived from it; as, evasti for evasisi, extinasti for extinxisi, divise for divisiss; extinxem for extinxissem, surrexe for surrexisse; accessisti for accessisisti, iusti for iussisti; dixi for dixisti. So favem for (facissem, l. e.) fecissem.

(d.) In the perfect of the first, second, and fourth conjugations, a syncope sometimes occurs in the last syllable of the root and the following syllable of the termination, especially in the third person singular; as, fumāt, audī, capit; for fumāvī, audīvī, capīvī. So, also, but rarely, in the first person; as, sepī, enarrāvimus; for sepelī, enarrāvimus.

8. In the third person plural of the perfect indicative active, the form in ēr is less common than that in ērunt, especially in prose.

9. Ancient forms of a future perfect in so, a perfect and pluperfect subjunctive in sim and sem, and a perfect infinitive in se sometimes occur. They may, in general, be formed by adding these terminations to the second root of the verb; as, recepao, emissim, ausim from the obsolete perfect, ausi, from audeo, confestim and promissim: divisim and promisse. But when the root ends in x, and frequently when it ends in s, only o, im, em, and e, etc. are added; as, jusso, disis; intellexe, percepset; surrexe, sumse. V, at the end of the root, in the first conjugation, is changed into s; as, levasso, locassim. U, at the end of the root, in the second conjugation, is changed into es; as, habesso, hēcassit. Sometimes the vowel of the present is retained in these forms, though changed in the other parts derived from the second root; as, capao, faze (facso), fazim (facim).

NOTE. Fazo expresses determination, 'I will,' or, 'I am resolved, to make, cause,' etc. The subjunctive fazit, etc., expresses a solemn wish; as, dis immortalēs faxint. Ausim, etc. express doubt or hesitation, 'I might venture,' etc. The perfect in sim is used also in connection with the present subjunctive; as, quasso uti tu calamitātēs prohibeās, defendas, averruncesque. Cato.

10. In the ancient Latin a few examples occur of a future passive of similar form; as, turbassitur, jussitur, instead of turbātum fuerit, and jussus fuerit.—A future infinitive active in stire is also found, in the first conjugation; which is formed by adding that termination to the second root, changing, as before, v into s; as, expugnastire, impetrastire, for expugnātūrum esse, etc.

Of the Tenses formed from the Third Root.

11. The supine in um, though called one of the principal parts of the verb, belongs in fact to very few verbs, the whole number which have this supine not amounting to three hundred. The part called in dictionaries the supine in um must therefore, in most cases, be considered as the neuter gender of the perfect participle.

12. In the compound tenses of the indicative and subjunctive moods, the participle is always in the nominative case, but it is used in both numbers, and in all genders, to correspond with the number and gender of the subject of the verb; as, amātus, -a, -um, est; amāti, -a, -a, sunt, etc.

(1.) Fui, fueram, fuerim, fuissem, and fuisse, are seldom used in the compound tenses of deponent verbs, and not so often as sum, etc., in those of other verbs, but when used they have generally the same sense. It is to be remarked, however, that fui with the perfect participle usually denotes that which has been, but which no longer exists. In the pluperfect subjunctive, fīrem, etc., for essem, etc., are sometimes found.

(2.) But as the perfect participle may be used in the sense of an adjective, expressing a permanent state, (see § 162, 22), if then connected with the tenses of sum its meaning is different from that of the participle in the same connection; epistōla scripta est, when scripta is a participle, signifies, the letter has been written, but if scripta is an adjective, the meaning of the expression is, the letter is written, and epistōla scripta fuit, in this case, would signify, the letter has been written, or, has existed as a written one, implying that it no longer exists.

13. The participles in the perfect and future infinitive, are used only in the nominative and accusative, but in all genders and in both numbers; as, amātus, -a, -um, esse or fuisse; amātum, -am, -um, esse or fuisse; amāti, -a, -a, esse or fuisse; amātos, -as, -a, esse or fuisse; and so of the others. With the infinitive fuisse, amātus, etc. are generally to be considered as participial adjectives.

(1.) These participles in combination with esse are sometimes used as indeclinable; as, cohortes ad me missum facias. Cic. Ad me, mea Terentia, scribis, te vicum venditurum. Id.

Periphrastic Conjugations.

14. The participle in rus, joined to the tenses of the verb sum, denotes either intention, or being upon the point of doing something. This form of the verb is called the active periphrastic conjugation.

REMARK 1. As the performance of the act depends either on the will of the subject, on that of others, or upon circumstances, we may say, in English, in the first case, 'I intend,' and in the others, 'I am to,' or 'I am about to' (be or do any thing).

INDICATIVE.

Pres.	amatūrus sum,	I am about to love.
Imperf.	amatūrus eram,	I was about to love.
Fut.	amatūrus ero,	I shall be about to love.
Perf.	amatūrus fui,	I was or have been about to love.
Plup.	amatūrus fuēram,	I had been about to love.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Pres.	amatūrus sim,	I may be about to love.
Imperf.	amatūrus essem,	I would be about to love.
Perf.	amatūrus fuērim,	I may have been about to love.
Plup.	amatūrus fuisset,	I would have been about to love.

INFINITIVE.

Pres.	amatūrus esse,	to be about to love.
Perf.	amatūrus fuisse,	to have been about to love.

REM. 2. Fuēro is scarcely used in connection with the participle in rus.

REM. 3. Amatūrus sim and amatūrus essem serve also as subjunctives to the future amābo. The infinitive amatūrus fuisse answers to the English, 'I should have loved,' so that in hypothetical sentences it supplies the place of an infinitive of the pluperfect subjunctive.

REM. 4. In the passive, the fact that an act is about to be performed is expressed by a longer circumlocution; as, in eo est, or futūrum est, ut epistola scribātur, a letter is about to be written. So in eo erat, etc., through all the tenses.

15. The participle in dus, with the verb sum, expresses necessity or propriety; as, amandus sum, I must be loved, or deserve to be loved. With the various moods and tenses of sum, it forms a passive periphrastic conjugation;—thus :

INDICATIVE.

Pres.	amandus sum,
Imperf.	amandus eram,
Fut.	amandus ero,
Perf.	amandus fui,
Plup.	amandus fuēram,
Fut. Perf.	amandus fuēro.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Pres.	amandus sim,
Imperf.	amandus essem,
Perf.	amandus fuērim,
Plup.	amandus fuisset.

INFINITIVE.

Pres.	amandus esse,
Perf.	amandus fuisse.

REM. 5. The neuter of the participle in us with est and the dative of a person, expresses the necessity of performing the action on the part of that person; as, mihi scribendum est, I must write, etc., and so through all the tenses.

Participles.

16. The following perfect participles of neuter verbs, like those of active deponents, are translated by active participles:—canātus, having supped; pātus, having drunk; pransus, having dined; and sometimes jurātus, having sworn. So also adhūsus, coactus, conspirātus, interitus, occāsus, obvultus, and crētus.

For the active meaning of usus and its compounds, see § 183, 1.

17. (a.) The perfect participles of some deponent verbs have both an active and a passive sense; as, adeptus libertatem, having obtained liberty, or adeptā libertate, liberty having been obtained. Cf. § 142, 4, (b.)

So abominātus, comitātus, commentātus, complexus, confessus, contestātus, detestātus, dignātus, dimensus, effātus, emensus, ementitus, emeritus, expertus, exsecrātus, interpretātus, largitus, machinātus, meditātus, mercātus, metātus, oblitus, opinātus, orsus, pactus, partitus, perfunctus, perichitātus, pollicitus, populātus, depopulātus, stipulātus, testātus, ultus, venerātus.

(b.) The participle in us, of deponent verbs, is commonly passive.

18. The perfect participles of neuter passive verbs have the signification of the active voice; as, gavisus, having rejoiced. But ausus is used both in an active and a passive sense.

19. The genitive plural of participles in us is seldom used, except that of futurus. Venturōrum is found in Ovid, exilurārum, transiturārum and periturōrum in Seneca, and moriturōrum in Augustine.

20. In the third and fourth conjugations, the gerund and future passive participle (including deponents) sometimes end in undum and undus, instead of endum and endus, especially when i precedes; as, faciundum, audiundum, scribundus. Potior has usually potiundus.

21. Many present and perfect participles are compounded with in, signifying not, whose verbs do not admit of such composition; they thus become adjectives; as, insciens, ignorant; imparātus, unprepared.

22. Participles, when they do not express distinctions of time, become adjectives, and as such are compared; as, amans, loving; amantior, amantissimus. They sometimes also become substantives; as, præfectus, a commander; ausum, an attempt; commissum, an offence.

NOTE. Many words derived from substantives, with the terminations of participles, ātus, ītus, and ūtus, are yet adjectives; as, alātus, winged; turritus, turreted, etc. See § 128, 7.

GENERAL RULES OF CONJUGATION.

§ 163. 1. Verbs which have a in the first root have it also in the third, even when it is changed in the second; as, fācio, factum; hābeo, habūm.

2. The connecting vowel is often omitted in the second root, and in such cases, if v follows, it is changed into u. This happens in most verbs of the second conjugation.

REMARK. Some verbs of the first, second, and third conjugations prefix to the second root their initial consonant with the vowel which follows it, or with ē; as, curro, cūcurri; fallo, fēfelli. This prefix is called a reduplication.

NOTE 1. Spondeo and sto lose s in the second syllable, making spōndēdi and stētēdi. For the verbs that take a reduplication, see §§ 165, R. 2; 168, N. 2; 171, Exc. 1, (b.)

3. Verbs which want the second root commonly want the third root also.

4. Compound verbs form their second and third roots like the simple verbs of which they are compounded; as, audio, audivi, auditum; exaudio, exaudivi, exauditum.

NOTE 2. Some compound verbs, however, are defective, whose simples are complete, and some are complete, whose simples are defective.

Exc. 1. Compound verbs omit the reduplication; but the compounds of do, sto, disco, posco, and some of those of curro, retain it.

Exc. 2. Verbs which, in composition, change a into e in the first root, (see § 189, 1,) retain e in the second and third roots of the compound; as, scando, scandi, scansum; descendo, descendi, descensum.

Exc. 3. (a.) When a, æ, or e, in the first root of the simple verb, is changed in the compound into i, (see § 189, 2,) the same is retained in the second and third roots, in case the third root of the simple verb is a dissyllable; as, habeo, hābui, hābitum; prohibeo, prohibui, prohibitum.

(b.) But if the third root is a monosyllable, the second root of the compound has usually the same vowel as that of the simple, but sometimes changes a or e into i, and the third root has e; as, fācio, fēcī, factum; conficio, confēcī, confectum; tēneo, tēnui, tentum; retineo, retinui, retentum; rāpio, rāpui, raptum; abripio, abripui, abreptum.

NOTE 3. The compounds of cādo, āgo, frango, pango, and tango, retain a in the third root. See § 172.

Exc. 4. The compounds of pārio, (ēre), and some of the compounds of do and cūbo, are of different conjugations from their simple verbs. See do, cūbo and pārio in §§ 165 and 172.

A few other exceptions will be noticed in the following lists.

FORMATION OF SECOND AND THIRD ROOTS.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

§ 164. In regular verbs of this conjugation, the second root ends in āv, and the third in āt; as, amo, amāvi, amātum.

The following list contains such regular verbs of this conjugation as are of most frequent occurrence.

NOTE. In this and subsequent lists, those verbs which are marked * are said to have no perfect participle; those marked † to have no present participle. A dash(—) after the present, denotes that there is no second root. The participles in rus and dus, and the supines in um and u which are in use, are indicated respectively by the letters r., d., m., and u. Abundo, for example, has no perfect participle, no supine, no participle in dus; but it has a present participle, and a participle in rus.

In the lists of irregular verbs, those compounds only are given, whose conjugation differs from that of their simples.

When p. is subjoined to a deponent verb, it denotes that some of the parts which have commonly an active meaning, are used either actively and passively, or passively alone. Such verbs are by some grammarians called common. Cf. § 142, 4, (b.)

REMARK 1. The principal irregularity, in verbs of the first and second conjugations, consists in the omission of the connecting vowel in the second root, and the change of the long vowels d and e in the third root into i. The v remaining at the end of the second root, when it follows a consonant, is pronounced as u; as, cubo, (cubāvi, by syncope cubvi), i. e. cubui; (cubātum, by change of the connecting vowel,) cubitum. Sometimes in the first conjugation, and very frequently in the second, the connecting vowel is omitted in the third root also; as, juvo, (āre) jūvi, jūtum; teneo, (āre) tēnuī, tentum. In the second conjugation several verbs whose general root ends in d and g, and a few others of different terminations, form either their second or third root or both, like verbs of the third conjugation, by adding s; as, rideo, risi, risum.

REM. 2. The verbs of the first conjugation whose perfects take a reduplication are do, sto, and their compounds.

REM. 3. The following verbs in eo are of the first conjugation, viz. beo, calceo, creo, cūneo, enucleo, illūqueo, collīneo, delīneo, meo, nauseo, screeo; eo and its compounds are of the fourth.

§ 166. All deponent verbs, of the first conjugation, are regular, and are conjugated like mitror, § 161; as,

Abominor, d. to abhor.

Adūlor, d. to flatter.

Emūlor, d. to rival.

	Rimör, d. to search.
	Rixör, to quarrel.

NOTE. Some deponents of the first conjugation are derived from nouns, and signify being or practising that which the noun denotes; as, ancilläri, to be a handmaid; hariöläri, to practise soothsaying; from ancilla and hariölus.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

§ 167. Verbs of the second conjugation end in eo, and form their second and third roots in u and üt; as, moneo, monui, monitum.

The following list contains most of the regular verbs of this conjugation, and many also which want the second and third roots:—

*Aceo, to be sour.	*Cläreo, —, to be bright.	*†perhübeo, d. to report.

§ 168. The following verbs of the second conjugation are irregular in their second or third roots or in both.

NOTE 1. As the proper form of verbs of the first conjugation is, o, āvi, ātum, of the fourth io, īvi, ītum, so that of the second would be eo, ēvi, ētum. Very few of the latter conjugation, however, retain this form, but most of them, as noticed in § 165, Rem. 1, drop in the second root the connecting vowel, ē, and those in eo drop ē; as, cāreo, (cāvāvi) cāri, (cāvētum or cāritum) cautum. Others, imitating the form of those verbs of the third conjugation whose general root ends in a consonant, add s to form the second and third roots. Cf. § 165, Rem. 1, and § 171.

NOTE 2. Four verbs of the second conjugation take a reduplication in the parts formed from the second root, viz. mordeo, pendeo, spondeo, and tondeo. See § 163, Rem.

- Abōleo, -ōvi, -ītum, r. d. to efface.
 *Algeo, alsi, to be cold.
 Ardeo, arsi, arsum, r. to burn.
 Audeo, ausus sum, (rarely ausi, whence ausim, § 183, R. 1,) r. d. to dare.
 Augeo, auxi, auctum, r. d. to increase.
 Cāveo, cāvī, cautum, m. d. to beware.
 Genseo, censui, consum, d. to think.
 recenseo, -ui, -um or -ītum. *per-censeo, -ui. *succenseo, -ui, d.
 Cio, civi, citum, to excite. There is a cognate form, cio, of the fourth conjugation, both of the simple verb and of its compounds. The penult of the participles excitus and concitus is common, and that of accitus is always long.
 *Connīveo, -nīvi, to wink at.
 Dēleo, -ēvi, -ētum, d. to blot out.
 Dōceo, docui, doctum, d. to teach.
 *Fāveo, fāvī, fautūrus, to favor.
 *Ferveo, ferbui, to boil. Sometimes fervo, vi, of the third conjugation.
 Fleo, flēvi, flētum, r. d. to weep.
 Fōveo, fōvi, fōtum, d. to cherish.
 *Fulgeo, fulsi, to shine. Fulgo, of the third conjugation, is also in use.
 Gaudeo, gavisus sum, r. to rejoice. § 142, 2.
 *Hāreo, hāsi, hāsūrus, to stick. So ad-, co-, in-, ob-hāreo; but *subhāreo, —.
 Indulgeo, indulsi, indultum, r. d. to indulge.
 Jūbeo, jussi, jussum, r. d. to order.
 *Lūceo, luxi, to shine. pollūceo, -luxi, -luctum.
 *Lūgeo, luxi, d. to mourn.
 *Māneo, mansi, mansum, m. r. d. to remain.
 Misceo, miscui, mistum or mixtum, mistūrus, d. to mix.
 Mordeo, monordi, morsum, d. to bite.
 remordeo, -di, -morsum, r.
 Mōveo, mōvi, mōtum, r. d. to move.
 Mulceo, mulsi, mulsum, d. to soothe.
 permulceo, permulsi, permulsum and perrulcetum, to rub gently.
 *Mulgeo, mulsi or mulxi, to milk. emulgeo, —, emulsum, to milk out.

Neo, nēvi, nētum, to spin.

*Pāveo, pāvi, d. to fear.

*Pendeo, pependi, to hang. *impendeo, —, propendeo, —, propensum.

Pleo, (obsolete), compleo, -ēvi, -ētum, to fill. So the other compounds.

Prandeo, prandi, pransum, r. d. to dine.

Rideo, risi, risum, m. r. d. to laugh.

*Sēdeo, sēdi, sessum, m. r. to sit.

The compounds with monosyllabic prepositions change ē into i, in the first root; ū, insideo, insēdi, insessum.

*dissideo, -sēdi. So præsideo, and rarely circumsideo.

Sūleo, solitus sum and rarely solui, to be accustomed. § 142, 2.

*Sorbeo, sorbui, to suck in. *So *exsorbeo: but *resorbeo, —. absorbeo, -sorbui or -sorpsi.

Spondeo, spondi, sponsum, to promise. See § 163, Rem.

*Strideo, idi, to whiz.

Suādeo, suāsi, suāsum, r. d. to advise.

Tēneo, tēnui, tēntum, r. d. to hold. *The compounds change ē into i in the first and second roots; as, detineo, detinui, detentum. attineo, -tinui. So pertineo.

Tergeo, tersi, tersum, to wipe. Tergo, of the third conjugation, is also in use.

Tondeo, tōtondi, tonsum, to shear. The compounds have the perfect tondi.

Torqueo, torsi, tortum, d. to twist.

Torreo, torrui, tostum, to roast.

*Turgeo, tursi, to swell.

*Urgeo or urgueo, nrui, d. to urge.

Video, vidi, visum, m. u. r. d. to see.

Vōveo, vōvi, vōtum, d. to vow.

§ 169. Impersonal Verbs of the Second Conjugation.

Dēcet, decuit, it becomes.

Libet, libuit or libitum est, it pleases, is agreeable.

Licet, licuit or licitum est, it is lawful, or permitted.

Liquet, liquit, it is clear, evident.

Misēret, misernit or miseritum est, it moves to pity; misēret me, I pity.

Oportet, oportuit, it behooves.

Piget, piguit or pigitum est, d. it troubles, grieves.

Pōnitet, pōnituit, pōnitūrus, d. it repents; pōnitet me, I regret.

Pūdet, puduit or puditum est, d.; it shames; pudet me, I am ashamed.

Tædet, tæduit or tæsum est, it disgusts or wearies. pertædet, pertæsum est.

NOTE. Lūbet is sometimes written for libet, especially in the comic writers.

§ 170. Deponent Verbs of the Second Conjugation.

Fāteor, fassus, r. d. p. to confess. *The compounds change ā into i in the first root, and into e in the third; as, confiteor, confessus, d. p. to acknowledge. †diffiteor, to deny. profiteor, professus, d. p. to declare.

Liceor, licitus, to bid a price.

Mēreor, meritus, to deserve.

Misēreor, miseritus or misertus, to pity.

Polliceor, pollicitus, p. to promise.

Reor, rātus, to think, suppose.

Tueor, tuistis, d. p. to protect.

Vēreor, veritus, d. p. to fear.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

§ 171. In the third conjugation, when the first root ends with a consonant, the second root is regularly formed by adding s; when it ends with a vowel, the first and second roots are the same: the third root is formed by adding t; as, carpo, carpsi, carptum; arguo, argui, argūtum.

In annexing s and t, certain changes occur in the final consonant of the root:—

1. The palatals c, g, qu, and also h, at the end of the first root, form with s the double letter x in the second root; in the third root, c remains, and the others are changed into c before t; as, dico, (dixi, i. e.), dixi, dictum; rego, (regi, i. e.), rexi, rectum; vēho, vexi, vectum; cōquo, coxi, coctum.

NOTE. Fleo and struo form their second and third roots after the analogy of verbs whose first root ends in a palatal or h.

2. B is changed into p before s and t; as, scribo, scripsi, scriptum.

3. D and t, before s, are either dropped, or changed into s; as, claudio, clausi; cado, cessi; mitto, mihi. Cf. § 56, I, Rem. 1. After m, p is sometimes inserted before s and t; as, sūmo, sumpsi, sumptum. R is changed to s before s and t in géro and āro.

4. Some other consonants are dropped, or changed into s, in certain verbs.

Exc. 1. Many verbs whose first root ends in a consonant, do not add s to form the second root.

(a.) Of these, some have the second root the same as the first, but the vowel of the second root, if a monosyllable, is long; as,

Bibo,	Excūdo,	Ico,	Mando,	Scābo,	Solvo,	Verro,
Edo,	Fōdio,	Lambo,	Prehendo,	Scando,	Strīdo,	Verto,
Emo,	Fūgio,	Lēgo,	Psallo,	Sīdo,	Tollo,	Volvo;

to which add the compounds of the obsolete cando, fendo, and nuo.

(b.) Some make a change in the first root. Of these, some change a vowel, some drop a consonant, some prefix a reduplication, others admit two or more of these changes; as,

Ago, āgi.	Cāpio, cāpi.	Fācio, fāci.
Findo, fidi.	Frango, frāgi.	Fundo, fūdi.
Jācio, jāci.	Liquo, liqui.	Rumpo, rūpi.
Scindo, scidi.	Sisto, stiti.	Vinco, vici.

Those which have a reduplication are

Cādo, cēcidi.	Cādo, cēcidi.	Cāno, cēcini.
Curro, cūcurri.	Disco, didici.	Fallo, fēfelli.
Pāgo, (obs.) pēpigi	Parco, pēperci.	Pārio, pēpēri.
and pāgi.	Pēdo, pēpēdi.	Pello, pēpēli.
Pendo, pēpendi.	Posco, pōposci.	Pungo, pūptigi.
Tango, tētigi.	Tendo, tētēdi.	Tundo, tūtūdi.

Exc. 2. Some, after the analogy of the second conjugation, add u to the first root of the verb; as,

Alo, alui, etc.	Constūlo,	Gēmo,	Rāpio,	Trēmo,
Cōlo,	Depso,	Gēno, (obs.)	Strēpo,	Vōlo,
Compesco,	Frēmo,	Mōlo,	Texo,	Vōmo.

Mēto, messui; and pōno, pōsui; add ui, with a change in the root.

Exc. 3. The following, after the analogy of the fourth conjugation, add ui to the first root:—

Arcesso,	Cūpio,	Lācesso,	Rūdo,	Tēro, dropping ē .
Cāpesso,	Incesso,	Pēto,	Quāro, with a change of r into s .

Exc. 4. The following add v, with a change in the root; those in no and scō dropping n and sc, and those having er before n changing it to rē or rā:—

Cresco,	Pasco,	Scisco,	Sperno,	Lino,	Sēro,
Nosco,	Quiesco,	Cerno,	Sterno,	Sino,	to sou .

Exc. 5. (a.) The third root of verbs whose first root ends in d or t, and some in g, add s, instead of t, to the root, either dropping the d, t, and g, or changing them into s; as, claudio, clausum; dēfendo, dēfensum; cēdo, cessum; flecto, flexum; figo, fixum. But the compounds of do add ū; as, perdo, perdūtum.

(b.) The following, also, add s, with a change of the root:—

Excello,	Fallo,	Pello,	Spargo,	Verro.
Percello,	Mergo,	Præmo,	Vello,

Exc. 6. The following add t, with a change of the root; those having n, nc, ng, nqu, or mp at the end of the first root dropping n and m in the third:—

Cerno,	Fingo,	Gëro,	Sëro,	Sperno,	Stringo,	Uro,
Côlo,	Frango,	Rumpo,	Sisto,	Sterno,	Tëro,	Vinco;

to which add the compounds of linguo, and verbs in sc with the second root in v; the latter drop sc before t; as, nosco, nôvi, nôtum; except pasco, which drops c only.

Exc. 7. (a.) The following have u:—

Bibo,	Ellicio,	Môlo,	Pôno, with a change of ôn into ôs .
Gëno, (obs. form of gigno,)	Vômo,	Sino, dropping n .

(b.) The following, like verbs of the fourth conjugation, add u to the first root:—

Arcesso,	Cûpio,	Pëto,	Tëro, dropping ë .
Fâcesso,	Lâcesso,	Quëro, with a change of r into s .

For other irregularities occurring in this conjugation, see § 172-174.

NOTE. Disector, prosector, resector, compounds of secto, are used as deponents in the present and imperfect tenses; resector also, sometimes, in the perfect.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

§ 175. Verbs of the fourth conjugation regularly form their second root in iv, and their third in it; as, audio, audivi, auditus.

The following list contains most regular verbs of this conjugation:—

Audio, -ivi or -ii, m. u. r. d. to hear.
 Cio*, civi, to excite. Cf. cio, § 188.
Conodio, -ivi or -ii, to season.
Custodio, -ivi or -ii, d. to guard.
 Dormio*, -ivi or -ii, m. r. d. to sleep.

Haurio, hausi, rar. haurii, haustum, rar. hausitum, hausturus, hausturus, u. d. to draw.
 Hinnio*, —, to neigh.
 Ineptio*, —, to trifle.
 Lascivio*, lascivii, to be wanton.
 Ligürio*, ligürii, to feed delicately.
 Lippio*, —, r. to be blear-eyed.
 Obedio*, obedii, r. to obey.
Pärio is of the third conjugation, but its compounds are of the fourth, changing ä to ë; as, äpério, äpërii, äpertum, r. d. to open. So öpério, d. compërio, compërii, compertum, rarely dep. compërior, to find out. So rêpërio, r. d.

Pāvio, —, pāvītum, to beat.

Prūrio, —, to itch.

Mōlior, mōlītus, d. to strive, toil.

Ordior, orsus, d. p. to begin.

Orior, ortus, brītūrus, d. to spring up.

Except in the present infinitive, this verb seems to be of the third conjugation.

Pērior, (obs. whence pēritus) ex- pērior, expertus, r. d. to try. oppē- rior, opportus or oppēritus, d. to wait for.

Partior, partitus, d. to divide.

Pōrior, pōtitus, r. d. to obtain, enjoy.
In the poets the present indicative and imperfect subjunctive are sometimes of the third conjugation.

Sortior, sortitus, r. to cast lots.

IRREGULAR VERBS.

§ 178. Irregular verbs are such as deviate from the common forms in some of the parts derived from the first root.

They are sum, vōlo, fēro, ēdo, fio, eo, queo, and their compounds.

Sum and its compounds have already been conjugated. See § 153. In the conjugation of the rest, the parts which are irregular are fully exhibited, but a synopsis only, of the other parts is, in general, given. Some parts of volo and of its compounds are wanting.

1. Volo is irregular only in the present of the indicative and infinitive, and in the present and imperfect of the subjunctive.

REMARK. It is made irregular partly by syncope, and partly by a change in the vowel of the root. In the present infinitive also and in the imperfect subjunctive, after s was dropped, r following l was changed into l; as, velōre (velre) vells; velērem (velrem) vellem.

§ 179. Fēro is irregular in two respects:—1. Its second and third roots are not derived from the first, but from otherwise obsolete verbs, viz. tūlo for tollo, and tlao, sup. ilātum, by aphæresis, lātum:—2. In the present infinitive active, in the imperfect subjunctive, and in certain parts of the present indicative and imperative, of both voices, the connecting vowel is omitted. In the present infinitive passive, r is doubled.

NOTE. In the comic writers the following reduplicated forms are found in parts derived from the second root, viz. tetālī, tetulisti, tetālī, tetulērunt; tetulōro, tetulōrī; tetulīsem, and tetulīssē.

§ 180. Fio, 'to become,' is properly a neuter verb of the third conjugation, having only the parts derived from the first root; but it is used also as a passive of fācio, from which it takes those parts of the passive which are derived from the third root, together with the participle in dus. The infinitive present has been changed from the regular form fiēre to fiēri.

NOTE. The compounds of fācio which retain a, have also fīo in the passive; as, calefācio, to warm; passive, calefīo; but those which change a into i form the passive regularly. (Cf. fācio in the list, § 172.) Yet confī, dēfī, and inīfī, occur. See § 183, 12, 13, 14.

§ 181. Edo, to eat, is conjugated regularly as a verb of the third conjugation; but in the present of the indicative, imperative, and infinitive moods, and in the imperfect of the subjunctive, it has also forms similar to those of the corresponding tenses of sum:—Thus.

INDICATIVE.

PASSIVE.

Pres.	ēd'-ī-tūr,	(or es'-tūr).
Imperf.	ēd'-ě-rē'-tūr,	(or es-sē'-tūr).

NOTE. (a.) In the present subjunctive, ēdīm, ēdīs, etc., are found, for ēdam, ēdās, etc.

(b.) In the compounds of ēdo, also, forms resembling those of sum occur. Ambēdo has the participles ambēsus and ambēsus; comēdo has comēsus, comēstus, and rarely comestus; and adēdo and exēdo have adēsus and exēsus.

§ 182. Eo is irregular in the parts which, in other verbs are formed from the first root, except the imperfect subjunctive and the present infinitive. In these, and in the parts formed from the second and third roots, it is a regular verb of the fourth conjugation.

NOTE. Eo has no first root, and the parts usually derived from that root, consist, in this verb, of terminations only.

REMARK 1. In some of the compounds the forms eam, ies, iet occur, though rarely, in the future; as, redeam, redies, abiet, exiet, prodient. Istis, issem, and isse, are formed by contraction for ivistis, ivissem, and ivisse. See § 182, 7.

REM. 2. In the passive voice are found the infinitive iri, and the third persons singular itur, ibātur, ibitur, itum est, etc.; eātur, irētur, eundem est, etc., which are used impersonally. See § 184, 2, (a.)

REM. 3. The compounds of eo, including vēneo, are conjugated like the simple verb, but most of them have ti in the perfect rather than ti. See under eo in § 176. Adeo, anteeo, inco, prætereo, sūbeo, and transco, being used actively, are found in the passive voice. Insetur occurs as a future passive of inco. Ambio is regular, like audio, but has either ambibat or ambēbat.

NOTE. Queo, I can, and nequeo, I cannot, are conjugated like eo, but they want the imperative mood and the gerund, and their participles rarely occur. They are sometimes found in the passive voice, before an infinitive passive.

DEFECTIVE VERBS.

§ 183. (1.) Defective verbs are those which are not used in certain tenses, numbers, or persons.

REMARK. There are many verbs which are not found in all the tenses, numbers, and persons, exhibited in the paradigms. Some, not originally defective, are accounted so, because they do not occur in the classics now extant. Others are in their nature defective. Thus, the first and second persons of the passive voice must be wanting in many verbs, from the nature of their signification.

- | | | |
|-------------------------------|------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1. Odi, I hate. | 6. Fāri, to speak. | 11. Cēdo, tell, or give me. |
| 2. Cœpi, I have begun. | 7. Quæso, I pray. | 12. Confît, it is done. |
| 3. Mēmîni, I remember. | 8. Ave, } hail, or | 13. Dēst, it is wanting. |
| 4. Aio, } | 9. Salve, } farewell. | 14. Infît, he begins. |
| 5. Inquam, } I say. | 10. Apāge, begone. | 15. Ovât, he rejoices. |

1. Odi, cœpi, and mēmîni are used chiefly in the perfect and in the other parts formed from the second root, and are thence called preteritive verba. Odi has also a deponent form in the perfect:—Thus,

PART. pres. ô'-vans; perf. ô'-vâ'-tûs; fut. ôv'-â-tû-rûs. GERUND, ô-van'-dû.

REMARK 1. Among defective verbs are sometimes, also, included the following:—Fôrem, fôres, etc., f'rê, (see § 154, R. 3.) Ausim, ausis, ausit; ausint. Fazem and fazim, fazis, fazit; fazimus, fazitis, fazint. Fazem. The form in e is an old future perfect; that in im a perfect, and that in em a pluperfect subjunctive. See § 162, 7, (c.), and 9.

REM. 2. In the present tense, the first person singular, fîro, to be mad, and dor and der, from do, to give, are not used. So in the imperative scî, cûpe and polle, from scio, cûpio, and polleo, do not occur.

REM. 3. A few words, sometimes classed with defectives, are formed by contraction from a verb and the conjunction si; as, sis for si vis, sultis for si vultis, sodes for si audes (for audies.)

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

§ 184. (a.) Impersonal verbs are those which are used only in the third person singular, and do not admit of a personal subject.

(b.) The subject of an impersonal verb in the active voice is, for the most part, either an infinitive, or an infinitive or subjunctive clause; but in English the neuter pronoun, it, commonly stands before the verb, and represents such clause; as, me delectat scribere, it delights me to write. Sometimes an accusative depending on an impersonal verb takes, in English, the place of a subject; as, me misêret tui, I pity thee.

1. Impersonal verbs in the active voice are conjugated in the several conjugations like delectat, it delights; dêcet, it becomes; contingit, it happens; evênit, it happens; thus:—

	1st Conj.	2d Conj.	3d Conj.	4th Conj.
IND. Pres.	delectat,	dēcet,	contingit,	evēnit,
Imp.	delectābat,	decēbat,	contingēbat,	eveniēbat,
Fut.	delectābit,	decēbit,	continget,	eveniet,
Perf.	delectāvit,	decuit,	contigit,	evēnit,
Plup.	delectāverat,	decuērat,	contigērat,	evenērat,
Fut. perf.	delectāverit.	decuērit.	contigērit.	evenērit.
SUB. Pres.	delectet,	deceat,	contingat,	eveniat,
Imp.	delectāret,	decēret,	contingēret,	eveniēret,
Perf.	delectāverit,	decuērit,	contigērit,	evenērit,
Plup.	delectāvisset.	decuissset.	contigisset.	evenissset.
INF. Pres.	delectāre,	decēre,	contingere,	evenire,
Perf.	delectāvisse.	decuisse.	contigisse.	evenisse.

2. (a.) Most neuter and many active verbs may be used impersonally in the passive voice, by changing the personal subject of the active voice into an ablative with the preposition a or ab; as,

Illī pugnant; or pugnātur ab illis, they fight. Illī quarunt, or quaritur ab illis, they ask. Cf. § 141, Rem. 2.

(b.) In the passive form, the subject in English is, commonly, either the agent, expressed or understood, or an abstract noun formed from the verb; as, Pugnātum est, we, they, etc. fought; or, the battle was fought. Concurritur, the people run together; or, there is a concourse.

(c.) Sometimes the English subject in the passive form is, in Latin, an oblique case dependent on the verb; as, favētur tibi, thou art favored.

The following are the forms of impersonal verbs in the several conjugations of the passive voice:—

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Pres.	pugnātur,	favētur,	currītur,	venītur,
Imp.	pugnabātur,	favebātur,	currebātur,	veniebātur,
Fut.	pugnabitur,	favebitur,	currētur,	veniētur,
Perf.	pugnātum est or fuit,	fautum est or fuit,	cursum est or fuit,	ventum est or fuit,
Plup.	pugnātum erat or fuērat,	fautum erat or fuērat,	cursum erat or fuērat,	ventum erat or fuērat,
Fut. p.	pugnātum erit or fuērit.	fautum erit or fuērit.	cursum erit or fuērit.	ventum erit or fuērit.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Pres.	pugnētur,	faveātur,	currātur,	veniātur,
Imp.	pugnārētur,	faverētur,	currerētur,	venirētur,
Perf.	pugnātum sit or fuērit,	fautum sit or fuērit,	cursum sit or fuērit,	ventum sit or fuērit,
Plup.	pugnātum esset or fuisset.	fautum esset or fuisset.	cursum esset or fuisset.	ventum esset or fuisset.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Pres.	pugnāri,	favēri,	curri,	veniri,
Perf.	pugnātum esse or fuisse,	fautum esse or fuisse,	cursum esse or fuisse,	ventum esse or fuisse,
Fut.	pugnātum iri.	fautum iri.	cursum iri.	ventum iri.

3. In like manner, in the periphrastic conjugation, the neuter gender of the participle in dus, both of active and neuter verbs, is used impersonally with est, etc., and the dative of the person; as, mihi scribendum fuit, I have been obliged to write; morendum est omnibus, all must die. See § 162, 15, R. 5.

REMARK 1. Grammarians usually reckon only ten real impersonal verbs, all of which are of the second conjugation, viz. décet, libet, licet, liquet, mistret, oportet, piget, possidet, pádet, and tádet. (See § 189.) Four of these, décet, libet, licet, and liquet occur also in the third person plural, but without personal subjects. There seems, however, to be no good reason for distinguishing the verbs above enumerated from other impersonal verbs. The following are such other verbs as are most commonly used impersonally:—

(a.) In the first conjugation:—

Constat, it is evident.	Vácat, there is leisure.	Pugnátur, a battle is fought.
Júvat, it delights.	Certátur, there is a contention.	Státur, they stand firm.
Præstat, it is better.	Pecátur, a fault is committed.
Restat, it remains.
Stat, it is resolved.

(b.) In the second conjugation:—

Appáret, it appears.	Pertinet, it pertains.	Persuadétur, he, they, etc. are persuaded.
Attinet, it belongs to.	Plácet, it pleases.	Pertæsum est, he, they, etc. are disgusted with.
Displicet, it displeases.	Flétur, we, etc. weep, or, there is weeping.	Silétur, silence is maintained.
Dólet, it grieves.	Nocétur, injury is inflicted.
Miserétur, it distresses.
Pátet, it is plain.

(c.) In the third conjugation:—

Accidit, it happens.	Miserescit, it distresses.	Desinítur, there is an end.
Conducit, it is useful.	Sufficit, it suffices.	Scribitur, it is written.
Contingit, it happens.	Creditur, it is believed.	Vivitur, we, etc. live.
Fallit, or } it escapes me;	Curritur, people run.
Fúgit me, } I do not know.

(d.) In the fourth conjugation:—

Convénit, it is agreed upon; it is fit.	Expédit, it is expedient.	Scítur, it is known.
Evénit, it happens.	Dormitur, we, they, etc. sleep.	Itur, they, etc. go.
		Venitur, they, etc. come.

(e.) Among irregular verbs:—

Fit, it happens.	Præterit me, it is unknown to me.	Ráfert, it concerns.
Intéret, it concerns.	Pródest, it avails.	Súbít, it occurs.
Obeat, it is hurtful.		Supêrest, it remains.

(f.) To these may be added verbs signifying the state of the weather, or the operations of nature. The subject of these may be Jupiter, deus, or calum, which are sometimes expressed. Of this kind are the following:—

Fulget, } it lightens.	Lapidat, it rains stones.	Tónat, it thunders.
Fulgurat, } it lightens.	Lucescit, } it grows light.	Vesperascit, } evening
Fulminat, } it lightens.	Illucescit, } it grows light.	Advesperascit, } evening
Gelat, it freezes.	Ningit, it snows.	Invesperascit, } proaches.
Grandinat, it hails.	Pluit, it rains.

Lapidat, ningit, and pluit are also used impersonally in the passive voice.

REM. 2. Impersonal verbs, not being used in the imperative, take the subjunctive in its stead; as, delectet, let it delight. In the passive voice, their perfect participles are used only in the neuter.

REM. 3. Most of the impersonal verbs want participles, gerunds, and supines; but pamitet has a present participle, futures in rus and dae, and the gerund. Püdet and piget have also the gerund and future passive participle.

REM. 4. Most of the above verbs are also used personally, but frequently in a somewhat different sense; as, ut Tiberis inter eos et pons interesset, so that the Tiber and bridge were between them.

REDUNDANT VERBS.

§ 185. Redundant verbs are those which have different forms to express the same meaning.

Verbs may be redundant in termination; as, fabríco and fabrícor, to frame;—in conjugation; as, lāvo, -āre, and lāvo, -ēre, to wash;—or in certain tenses; as, ōdi and ōsus sum, I hate.

1. The following deponent verbs, besides their passive form, have an active form in o, of the same meaning, but which is, in general, rarely used. A few, however, which are marked r., occur more rarely than the corresponding forms in o.

Abominor, to abhor .	Fabricor, to frame .	Oscitor, to gape .
Adūlor, to flatter .	Fenēror, to lend on interest .	Pacificor, r. to make a peace .
Altercor, to dispute .	Fluctuor, to fluctuate .	Palpor, to caress .
Amplexor, to embrace .	Frustror, to disappoint .	Partior, to divide .
Arbitror, to suppose .	Fruticor, to sprout .	Popūlor, to lay waste .
Argūtor, to prate .	Impertior, r. to impart .	Pūnior, to punish .
Assentior, to assent .	Jurgor, to quarrel .	Ruminor, to ruminate .
Aucūpor, to hunt after .	Lacrimor, r. to weep .	Sciscitor, to inquire .
Augūror, to foretell .	Ludiflor, to ridicule .	Sortior, to cast lots .
Aurigor, to drive a chariot .	Luxūrior, r. to be rank .	Stabūlor, to stale .
Auspicio, to take the auspices .	Medicor, to heal .	Tueor, to defend .
Cachinnor, r. to laugh aloud .	Mēreor, to deserve .	Tumultuor, to be in confusion .
Comitor, to accompany .	Mētor, to measure .	Tūtor, to defend .
Commentor, to deliberate .	Misēreor, to commiserate .	Ūtor, to use .
Convivor, to feast together .	Modēror, to moderate .	Ūrnor, to dive .
Cunctor, (cont.), to delay .	Munēror, r. to bestow .	Velificor, to set sail .
Dignor, to deem worthy .	Nictor, r. to wink .	Venēror, to reverence .
Depascor, to feed upon .	Nūtrior, r. to nourish .	Vociferor, to baul .
Elucubror, to elaborate .	Obsōnor, to cater .
	Opinor, to suppose .

2. The following verbs are redundant in conjugation:—

Boo, -āre, } to roar .	Fulgeo, -āre, } to shine .	Sōno, -āre, } to sound .
Boo, -ēre, r. }	Fulgo, -ēre, r. }	Sōno, -ēre, }
Bullo, -āre, } to boil .	Lāvo, -āre, }	Strideo, -ēre, } to creak .
Bullio, -īre, }	Lāvo, -ēre, r. }	Strido, -ēre, }
Cieo, -āre, } to excite .	Līno, -ēre, }	Tergeo, -āre, } to wipe .
Cio, -īre, r. }	Līnio, -īre, r. }	Tergo, -ēre, }
Denseo, -āre, } to thicken .	Nicto, -āre, }	Tueor, -ēri, } to protect .
Denseo, -ēre, }	Nicto, -ēre, }	Tuor, -ī, r. }
Ferveo, -ēre, } to boil .	Sālo, -ēre, } to salt .
Fervo, -ēre, }	Sālio, -īre, }
Fōdio, -ēre, } to dig .	Scāteo, -ēre, }
Fōdio, -īre, r. }	Scāto, -ēre, r. }

Those marked r. are rarely used.

Mörior, brior, and pörior, also, are redundant in conjugation in certain parts. See in lists §§ 174 and 177.

§ 186. 1. Some verbs are spelled alike, or nearly alike, but differ in conjugation, quantity, pronunciation, or signification, or in two or more of these respects.

Such are the following:—

Abdico, -äre, to abdicate.	Edo, -äre, to eat.	Nitor, -i, to strive.

	Möror, -i, to die.	Völo, velle, to be willing.
	Niteo, -äre, to glitter.

2. Different verbs have sometimes the same perfect; as,

Aceo, acui, to be sour.	Fulcio, fulsi, to prep.	Paveo, pavi, to fear.
Acuo, acui, to sharpen.	Luceo, luxi, to shine.	Pasco, pavi, to feed.
Cresco, crevi, to grow.	Lugeo, luxi, to mourn.	Pendo, pependi, to hang.
Cerno, crevi, to decree.	Mulceo, mulsi, to soothe.	Pendo, pependi, to weigh.
Fulgeo, fulsi, to shine.	Mulgeo, mulsi, to milk.

To these add some of the compounds of sto and sisto.

3. Different verbs have sometimes, also, the same supine or perfect participle; as,

Frico, frictum, to rub.	Pango, pactum, to drive in.	Pätior, passus, to suffer.
Frigo, frictum, to roast.		Teneo, tentum, to hold.
Mäneo, mansum, to remain.	Paciscor, pactus, to bargain.	Tendo, tentum, to stretch.
Mando, mansum, to chew.	Pando, passum, to extend.	Verro, versum, to brush.
		Verto, versum, to turn.

DERIVATION OF VERBS.

§ 187. Verbs are derived either from nouns, from adjectives, or from other verbs.

I. Verbs derived from nouns or adjectives are called denominatives.

1. (a.) Active denominatives are generally of the first conjugation; those which are neuter, of the second. They are usually formed by adding respectively o and eo to the root; as,

FROM NOUNS.

Actives.	Neuters.
Armo, to arm, (arma.)	Flöreo, to bloom, (flos.)
Fraudo, to defraud, (fraus.)	Frondeo, to produce leaves, (frons.)
Nomino, to name, (nomen.)	Luceo, to shine, (lux.)
Numéro, to number, (numérus.)	Vireo, to flourish, (vis.)

FROM ADJECTIVES.

Albo, to whiten, (albus.)	Albeo, to be white, (albus.)
Celebro, to frequent, (celéber.)	Calveo, to be bald, (calvus.)
Libéro, to free, (liber.)	Fläveo, to be yellow, (flävus.)

(b.) Sometimes a preposition is prefixed in forming the derivative; as,

Coacervo, to heap together, (acervus.)	Exstirpo, to extirpate, (stirps.)
Excävo, to excavate, (cävus.)	Illäqueo, to insnare, (läqueus.)

2. Many deponents of the first conjugation, derived from nouns, express the exercise of the character, office, etc., denoted by the primitive; as, architector, to build; comitor, to accompany; füror, to steal; from archilectus, cömes, and für.

3. Such as denote resemblance or imitation are called imitatives; as, cornäcor, to imitate a crow, from cornix; Gräcor, to imitate the Greeks. Some of these end in isso; as, pätrisso, to imitate a father.

II. Verbs derived from other verbs are either frequentatives, inceptives, desideratives, diminutives, or intensives.

1. Frequentatives express a repetition, or an increase of the action expressed by the primitive.

(a.) They are all of the first conjugation, and are formed by adding o to the third root; as, dōmo, (dōmīt-) dōmīto. So adjūvo, adjūto; dico, dicto; gēro, gesto. In verbs of the first conjugation, āt of the root is often changed into ū; as, clāmo, to cry, (clamāt-) clamīto, to cry frequently.

(b.) A few frequentatives are formed by adding ūto to the first root of the primitive; as, āgo (āg-) āgūto. So lūteo, lūtūto; nosco, nosctūto; quæro, quæritūto.

(c.) Frequentatives, from primitives of the second, third, and fourth conjugations, sometimes serve again as primitives, from which new frequentatives are formed; as, dico, dicto, dictitūto; curro, curso, cursitūto; venio, vento, ventitūto. Sometimes the second or intermediate form is not in use.

(d.) Some frequentatives are deponent; as, minītor, from minor (minūt-); versor, from verto (vers-). So amplexor, sector, loquor, from amplector, sequor, and loquor.

(e.) When verbs of this class express simply an increase of the action denoted by the primitive, they are, by some grammarians, called intensives.

2. Inceptives, or inchoatives mark the beginning of the action or state expressed by the primitive.

(a.) They all end in sco, and are formed by adding that termination to the root of the primitive, with its connecting vowel, which, in the third conjugation, is i; as, cāleo, to be hot; cālesco, to grow hot.

So lābo, (āre), lābasco; ingēmo, (ēre), ingēmisco; obdormio, (ire), obdormisco. Hisco is contracted for hiasco, from hio, (āre).

(b.) Most inceptives are formed from verbs of the second conjugation.

(c.) Some inceptives are formed from nouns and adjectives by adding asco or esco to the root; as, puérasco, from puer; jūvenasco, from jūvenis.

NOTE. Inceptives are all neuter, and of the third conjugation. See § 173.

Some verbs in sco, which are not inceptives, are active; as, dīscō, poscō.

3. Desideratives express a desire of doing the act denoted by the primitive.

(a.) They are formed from the third root, by adding ūrio; as, cæno, to sup, (cænāt-) cænātūrio, to desire to sup.

(b.) Desideratives are all of the fourth conjugation. See § 176, Note.

(c.) Verbs in ūrio, having u long, are not desideratives; as, prūrio, agūrio.

4. Diminutives denote a feeble or trifling action. They are formed by adding illo to the root of the primitive; as, conscribillo, to scribble, from conscribo.

They are few in number, and are all of the first conjugation.

5. Intensives denote eager action. They are usually formed by adding so, esso, or isso to the root of the primitive; as, fācesso, to act earnestly—from fācio.

So cāpesso, incesso, from cāpio and incēdo. Concēpisco, to desire greatly, though in form an inceptive, is, in its signification, an intensive.

NOTE. Verbs of all these classes have sometimes simply the meaning of their primitives.

COMPOSITION OF VERBS.

§ 188. Verbs are compounded variously :—

1. Of a noun and a verb; as, edificio, belligero, lucrifacio. See § 103, R. 1.
2. Of an adjective and a verb; as, amplifico, multiplico.
3. Of two verbs; as, calefacio, madefacio, patefacio.

REM. In verbs of this class, the first part, which is a verb of the second conjugation, loses its final o; the second part is always the verb facio.

4. Of an adverb and a verb; as, benefacio, maledico, stitigo, nolo, negligo.
5. Of a preposition and a verb; as, adiuco, excolo, prodo, subrepto, discerno, sjungo.
6. Of a preposition and a noun, as, pernocto, irratio.

§ 189. In composition with particles, the vowels a and e and the diphthong æ in the radical syllable of the simple verb are often changed in the compound.

1. The following simple verbs in composition change a into e :—

Arceo,	Carpō,	Farcio,	Jacto,	Pārio,	Patro,	Spargo,
Candeo,	Damno,	Fātiscor,	Lacto,	Partio,	Sacro,	Tracto.
Capto,	Fallo,	Grādior,	Mando,	Pātor,	Scando,

Exc. A is retained in amando, præmando, desacro, and retracto; prædamno, and pertracto sometimes also occur. A is also changed into e in occulto from culto, and anhelo from halo; comperco also is found.

2. The following, in the first root, change ā and ē into ī; viz.

āgo, cādo, ēgeo, ēmo, frango, pango, præmo, rēgo, sēdeo, spēcio, tango.

3. These change ā and ē, in the first and second roots, into ī; viz.

sālio, to leap, sāpio, tāceo, and tēneo.

4. These change ā into ī, and æ into ī, in all the roots; viz.

hābeo, lācio, lāteo, plāceo, stātuo; cædo, lædo, and quæro.

5. The following change ā, in the first root, into ī, and in the third root into e; viz.

cāno, cāpio, fāteor, jācio, rāpio, and āpiscor.

Exc. (a.) A is retained in circumdāgo, perāgo, saltāgo; antehābeo, posthābeo, depango, repango, complāceo, and perplāceo. Occāno and recāno also sometimes occur. E is retained in coēmo, circumseādeo, and superseādeo. Antecāpio and anticpio are both used; so also are superjācio and superjicio.

(b.) Ogo and dēgo are formed, by contraction, from con, de, and āgo; dēmo, prōmo and sūmo, from de, pro, sub, and ēmo; præbeo, and perhaps debeo, from præ, de, and hābeo; pergo and surgo, from per, sub, and rēgo.

NOTE 1. Fācio, compounded with a preposition, changes ā into ī in the first root, and into e in the third; as, afficio, affēci, affectum. Some compounds of fācio with nouns and adjectives, change ā into ī, and also drop i before o, and are of the first conjugation; as, significo, latifico, magnifico. Spēcio forms some compounds in the same manner; as, conspicor and suspīcor.

NOTE 2. Lāgo, compounded with con, de, ā, e, inter, nec, and se, changes ā into ī, in the first root; as, collāgo, neglīgo, etc.; but with ad, præ, per, re, sub, and trans, it retains ā; as, allāgo.

NOTE 3. Calco and salto, in composition, change a into u; as, inulco, insulto. Plaudo changes au into o; as, explōdo; except applaudo. Audīo changes au into ī in obediō. Causo, claudo, and quittio, drop a; as, accūsō, rēclūdō, percūtio. Jūro changes ā into ī in dējūro and pējūro, but dējūro, also, is in use.

NOTE 4. In the compounds of cāveo, māneo, and trāho, d remains unchanged, and so also does æ in the compounds of hæreo.

NOTE 5. The simple verbs with which the following are compounded are not used:—

Dēfendo,	Impēdio,	Confūto,	Instigo,	Connīveo,
Offendo,	Imbuo,	Rēfūto,	Impleo,	Percello,
Expērior,	Compello, (-āre,)	Ingruo,	Compleo,	Induo, and some
Expēdio,	Appello, (-āre,)	Congruo,	Rēnīdeo,	Exuo, others.

For the changes produced in prepositions by composition with verbs see § 196.

PARTICLES.

§ 190. 1. Particles are those parts of speech which are neither declined nor conjugated. They are divided into four classes—adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections.

NOTE. A word may sometimes belong to two or more of these classes, according to its connection.

ADVERBS.

2. An adverb is a particle used to modify or limit the meaning of a verb, an adjective, or another adverb; as,

Bēne et sapienter dixit, he spoke well and wisely; Canis ēgrēgie fidēlis, a remarkably faithful dog; Nimis valde laudāre, to praise too much. Compare § 277, R. 1.

3. Adverbs, in regard to their signification, are divided into various classes; as, adverbs of place, time, manner, etc., and some belong to either class according to their connection.

4. In regard to their etymology, adverbs are either primitive or derivative.

REMARK. Among primitive adverbs are here classed not only such as cannot be traced to any more remote root, but also all which are not included in the regular classes of derivative adverbs hereafter mentioned.

PRIMITIVE ADVERBS.

§ 191. The primitive adverbs are few in number, when compared with the derivatives, and most of them are contained in the following lists marked I, II, and III.

I. Adverbs of Place and Order.

ādeo, so far, as far.	ālicūbi, somewhere.	āliquōversum, toward ādhiūc, to this place.	ālicundē, from some	some place.
adversūs, } opposite,	place.	āliundē, from another adversum, } over against,	place.	place.
exadversūs,—um, } toward.	āliō, to another place.	āliquā, in some way.
ālīā, by another way.	āliorsum, toward another	circā, } around.
ālīās, in another place.	place.	circitēr, on every side.
ālibi, elsewhere.	āliquō, to some place.	circumcircā, all around.

citrā, on this side.
citra, hither.
contrā, over against.
cōram, before.
dehinc, henceforth.
deinceps, successively.
deindē, after that.
dēnlquē, finally.
dēnuo, again.
deorsum, downward.
dextrorsum, toward the right.
eā, that way.
eādem, the same way.
eo, to that place, thither.
eodem, to the same place.
exindē, after that.
extrā, without.
extrinsēcus, from without.
fōrās, out of doors.
fōris, without.
hāc, this way.
hactēnūs, thus far.
hic, here.
hinc, hence.
hūc, hither.
hūcuscūq, thus far.
hōrsūm, hitherward.
Ibi, there.
Ibidem, in the same place.
illāc, that way.
illinc, thence.
illō, thither.
illorsūm, thitherward.
illūc, thither.
indē, thence.
indidem, from the same place.

infra, below, beneath.
Inibi, in that place.
intrinsēcus, from within.
intrā, intro, } within.
introrsum, } within.
intūs, } within.
istāc, that way.
istic, there.
istinc, thence.
istō, istūc, thither.
juxtā, near, alike.
nēcūbi, lest any where.
neutro, to neither side.
neutrūbi, to neither place, to neither side.
nullibi, } no where.
nusquam, } no where.
pēnitūs, within.
pōnē, post, behind, back.
porro, onward.
prōcūl, far.
prōpē, proptēr, near.
prorsūm, forward.
prōtītūs, onward.
quā? in which way?
quāquā, } what way
quācumq, } soever.
quāquē, } wheresoever.
quālibēt, } in every way.
quāvis, } in every way.
quō? whither?
quōd, } how far.
quousquē, } how far.
quōpiam, } to some place.
quōquam, } to some place.
quōquō, } whitherquōcumq, } soever.
quōquōversūs, toward every side.

quorsum? whitherward?
quōvis, } to every place.
quōlibēt, } to every place.
retro, } backward,
retrorsum, } back.
rursūm, } back.
scūbi, if any where.
scundē, if from any place.
subtēr, beneath.
sūpēr, suprā, above, on top.
sum, upward.
tum, then, in the next place.
ūbi? where?
ūbicumq, } wherever,
ūbiūbi, } wheresoever.
ūbilibēt, } any where,
ūbiquē, } every where.
ūbivis, } every where.
ultrā, ultro, beyond.
undē? whence?
undēlibēt, } from every undēvis, } where.
undiquē, } where.
undeundē, } whenceundēcumq, } soever.
uspiam, } somewhere,
usquam, } any where.
usquē, all the way.
usquēquāq, in all ways.
utrimquē, on both sides.
utrō? which way?
utrōbi? in which place?
utrōbiquē, in both places.
utrōquē, to both sides.
utrōquēversum, toward both sides.

REMARK 1. (a.) The interrogative adverbs of place, ūbi? where? undē? whence? quō? whither? and quā? in what way? have relation to other adverbs formed in a similar manner, thus constituting a system of adverbial correlatives similar to that of the pronominal adjectives. See § 139, 5, (8.)

(b.) As in the case of the pronominal correlatives, the interrogative and relative forms are alike, beginning with u or qu. The demonstratives are formed from is, which is strengthened by dem, and the indefinite from aliquis. The general relatives and the general indefinites or universals, like those of the pronominal adjectives, are made, the former by doubling the simple relatives or by appending to them the termination cumq, 'soever,' and the latter by adding quē, vis, or libēt. Thus :

Interrog.	Demonstr.	Relat.	Gen. Relat.	Indefin.	Gen. Indefin.
ūbi?	Ibi, Ibidem,	ūbi,	ūbiūbi, ūbicumq,	āncūbi,	ūbiquē, ūbivis, ūbilibēt.
undē?	indē, indidem,	undē,	undeundē, undēcumq,	āncundē,	undiquē, undēvis, undēlibēt.
quō?	eō, eōdem,	quō,	quōquō, quōcumq,	ānquō,	quōvis, quōlibēt.
quā?	eā, eādem.	quā.	quāquā, quācumq.	ānquā.	quāvis, quālibēt.

(c.) To those answering to ubi? may be added adibi, nulibi, and ubi, the latter being a strengthened form of ibi. In like manner aliunde, utrimque, intus, and extrinsecus may be added to those answering to unde? and adibi to those answering to quod? So also to utro? answer utroque and neutro.

(d.) The demonstratives ibi, indē, and eō are used only in reference to relative sentences which precede; but more definite demonstratives are formed from the pronouns hic, iste, and ille, answering in like manner to ubi? unde? and quod? These together with the preceding correlatives are, in the following table, arranged respectively under their several interrogatives ubi? unde? quod? and quorum?—Thus:

ubi?	unde?	quod?	quā?	quorum?
hic ,	hinc ,	hūc ,	hāc ,	hōrum ,
istic ,	istinc ,	istūc ,	istāc ,	istorum ,
illuc ,	illinc ,	illūc ,	illāc ,	illorum ,
ibi ,	indē ,	eō ,	eā ,	_____
ibidem ,	indidem ,	eōdem ,	eādem ,	_____
alibi ,	aliundē ,	alio ,	aliā ,	aliorum ,
alicubi .	alicundē .	aliquō .	aliquā .	aliquorum .

(e.) Hic, hinc, hāc, refer to the place of the speaker; istic, istinc, istūc, to the place of the second person or person addressed; and illic, illinc, illūc, to that of the third person or the person or thing spoken of. Cf. § 207, R. 23, (a.) and (d.)

(f.) The interrogative adverbs ubi, unde, quod, quā, etc. are often used without a question, simply as adverbs of place; as, In eam partem iussus, atque ibi futuros Helvetios, ubi eos Cæsar constituisse.

(g.) In consequence of a transfer of their meaning, some of the adverbs of place, as, hic, ibi, ubi, hinc, indē, hactenus, etc., become also adverbs of time, and some of them are used also as conjunctions.

II. Adverbs of Time.

actūtum, immediately.
abhinc, from this time.
adēo, so long (as).
adhūc, until now, still.

sure .	ritē , duly.	vidēlicet , clearly, to wit.
	saltem , at least.	vix , scarcely.

REM. 2. Adverbs denoting quality, manner, etc., are sometimes divided into those of, 1. Quality; as, bēnē, mālē. 2. Certainty; as, certē, plānē. 3. Contingence; as, fortē. 4. Negation; as, haud, nōn, nē, immō. 5. Affirmation; as, na, quidē, ūtīquē, nempē. 6. Swearing; as, hercūlē. 7. Explaining; as, vidēlicet, utpōtē. 8. Separation; as, seorsum. 9. Joining together; as, simul, ūnā. 10. Interrogation; as, cūr? quārē? 11. Quantity or degree; as, sātis, ādeo. 12. Excess; as, perquam, maximē. 13. Defect; as, pārum, pene. 14. Preference; as, pōtius, sātius. 15. Likeness; as, itā, sic. 16. Unlikeness; as, āliṭer. 17. Exclusion; as, tantum, solum.

REM. 3. Non is the ordinary Latin negation. Haud signifies either 'not at all,' or 'not exactly.' It is used by the comic and later writers in all combinations, but in the authors of the best age its use is more especially limited to its connection with adjectives and adverbs denoting a measure; as, haud multum, haud magnum, haud parvus, haud mediocris, haud paulo, haud prōcul, haud longe, especially haud sēne in connection with other words; as, haud sēne facīle, res haud sēne diffīcīlis, haud sēne intellīgo; also haud quisquam, haud unquam, haud ququam. With verbs haud is scarcely used until Livy and Tacitus, except in the common phrase haud scīo an, which is equivalent to nescio an.—Nē, (or nī) is the primitive Latin negative particle, signifying no or not. It is used in this sense and as an adverb, (a) with quidē to make an emphatic negation of the word standing between them; as, nē in oppidīs quidē, not even in the towns; (b) in composition as in nescio, nēfas, neuter, etc.; (c) with imperatives and subjunctives used as imperatives; as, Nē putri, nē tanta animis assuescite bella. Virg. So, also, in wishes and asseverations; as, Nē id Jupiter sinderet, may Jupiter forbid it. Liv. Ne vitam, si scio, may I die, if I know. Cic.; and in concessive and restrictive clauses; as, Ne fuerit, suppose there was not. Cic. Sint misericordes in furibus ararii, ne illas sanguinem nostram largiantur, only let them not, etc. Cic. So dum ne, dummodo ne, modo ne, dum quidem ne; and in intentional clauses with ut.—Immo, as a negative, substitutes something stronger in the place of the preceding statement, which is denied; as, Causa igitur non bona est? Immo optima, sed, etc. Cic. It may often be translated by 'nay,' or 'nay even.'

REM. 4. Quidem gives particular emphasis to a word or an idea, and then answers to our 'certainly' or 'indeed,' but frequently, especially with a pronoun, it merely adds emphasis. Equidem, which is considered as a compound of ego and quidem, is used exclusively in this sense by Cicero, Virgil, and Horace, but by other and particularly by later writers it is used like quidem.—Nempe, 'surely,' is often used ironically, when we refute a person by concessions which he is obliged to make, or by deductions. In other connections it may be translated 'namely.'

REM. 5. Sic, ita, tam, as also tantopere, and adeo signify 'so.' Sic is more particularly the demonstrative 'so,' or 'thus'; as, sic se res habet. Ita defines or limits more accurately, and is equivalent to our 'in such a manner,' or 'only in so far'; as, ita defendito, ut neminem ladas. Frequently, however, ita has the signification of sic, but sic has not the limiting sense of ita.—Tam, 'so much,' generally stands before adjectives and adverbs, and increases the degree; before vowels tantopere is generally used instead of tam.—Adeo, 'to that degree' or 'point,' increases the expression to a certain end or result. Hence it forms the transition to the conclusion of an argument or to the essential part of a thing; and Cicero employs it to introduce the proofs of what he has previously alleged; as, Id adeo ex ipso sentitus consulo cognoscite, and always in such case puts adeo after a pronoun.

REM. 6. Umquam, 'ever,' and usquam, 'somewhere,' like quisquam, require a negation in the sentence, and thus become equivalent to numquam and nusquam. A negative question, however, may supply the place of a negative proposition; as, num tu eum umquam vidisti?—Uspiam, like quispiam, is not negative, but is the same as aliquis, but strengthened, just as quispiam is the same as aliquis. So, also, quopiam is used affirmatively, and quodquam negatively.—Jam, with a negative, answers to our 'longer'; as, Nihil jam spero, I no longer hope for any thing. When used to connect sentences it signifies 'further,' or 'now.'—Usque is commonly accompanied by the prepositions ad, in, ab, or ex. It rarely signifies 'ever and anon'; as, Nataram expellas fœdâ, tamen usque recurret. Hor.—Nuper, modo, and mox are relative and indefinite.—Dudum, 'previously,' or 'before,' in relation to a time which has just passed away, may often be translated 'just before.'—Jamdudum signifies 'long before,' or 'long since.' With the poets jamdudum contains the idea of impatience, and signifies 'without delay,' 'forthwith'; as, Jamdudum sumite penas. Virg.—Tandem, 'at length,' also expresses the impatience with which a question is put.

REM. 7. Tunc is 'then,' 'at that time,' in opposition to nunc, 'now': Tum is 'then,' as the correlative of quum, 'when'; as, quum omnes adessent, tum ille exorsus est dicere, when all were present, then he began to speak. Without a relative sentence tum signifies 'hereupon,' or 'thereupon'; but a relative sentence may always be supplied. The same difference exists between etiam nunc and etiam tum, 'still,' or 'yet'; and between nunc ipsum and tum ipsum; quummaxime and tummaxime, 'just,' or 'even then'; for etiam nunc, nunc ipsum and quummaxime refer to the present; but etiamtum, tum ipsum, and tummaxime, to the past.

DERIVATION OF ADVERBS.

§ 192. Adverbs are derived from nouns, adjectives, pronouns, and participles.

I. From Nouns.

1. Of these a few end in im (generally ātim), and denote manner; as, gregātīm, in herds; membrātīm, limb by limb; vicisēdīm, or more frequently, vicisim, by turns; from grex, membrum, and vicis.

2. Some end in itus, and denote origin or manner; as, cœlitus, from heaven; funditus, from the bottom; radicitus, by the roots; from caelum, fundus, and radix.

3. Some are merely the different cases of nouns used adverbially; as,

(a.) Some adverbs of time; as, mānē, noctā, diā, tempōrē or tempōri, iniitū, principiū, mōdo.—(b.) Adverbs of place; as, fōris, fōrās.—(c.) Adverbs of manner; as, sponē, fortē, grāis or grātis, ingrātis, vulgō, partim.

II. From Adjectives and Participles.

By far the greater number of derivative adverbs come from adjectives and participles (present and perfect), and end in ē and tēr.

1. Adverbs derived from adjectives and participles of the second declension, are formed by adding ē to the root; as, agrē, scarcely; altē, high; librē, freely; longē, far; misērē, miserably; plēnē, fully; doctē, learnedly; ornātē, elegantly; from ager, altus, liber, longus, misér, plēnus, doctus, and ornātus. Bēnē, well, is from bōnus, or an older form bēnus.

REMARK. A few adverbs in e differ in meaning from their adjectives; as, sānē, certainly; valdē, very; from sānus, sound, well; and validus, strong.

Exc. 1. A few adverbs derived from adjectives and participles of the second declension, add itēr, itūs, im, or ātim to the root; as, nāvitēr, actively; antiquitūs, anciently; divinitūs, divinely; privātīm, privately; tutīm, after your manner; singulātīm, singillātīm, sigillātīm, or singultīm, severally; cāsim, carptīm, sensim, stātīm, etc. from nāvus, antiquus, divinus, privātus, tutus, singuli, cāsus, carptus, etc.

Exc. 2. Some adverbs are formed with two or more of the above terminations with the same meaning; as, dūrē, duritēr; firmē, firmitēr; nāvē, nāvitēr; largē, largitēr; lūcilentē, lūcilentēr; turbulentē, turbulentēr: so cautē and cautīm; hūmānē, hūmānitēr, and hūmānitās; publicē and publicitās.

2. Adverbs derived from adjectives and participles of the third declension, are formed by adding itēr to the root, except when it ends in t, in which case ēr only is added; as, acritēr, sharply; fēlicitēr, happily; turpitēr, basely;—ēlegantēr, elegantly; prudentēr, prudently; amantēr, lovingly; propérantēr, hastily; from acer, fēlix, turpis, ēligans, prūdēns, amans, and propérans. So also from the obsolete ālis for ālius, and prōptis, (neuter prōpē), come ālitēr and prōptēr for prōptēr.

Exc. From audax comes by syncope audactēr; from fortis comes fortitēr; from omnis, omnino; from uber, ubertim; and from nequam, nequitēr.

3. From the cardinal numerals are formed numeral adverbs in iēs; as, quinqüē, dēciē, from quinqüē and dīcem. So trīciē and quadrīē, from trī and quadrī. See § 119.

4. Some adverbs are merely certain cases of adjectives. Such are,

(a.) Ablatives in ō, from adjectives and participles of the second declension; as, citrō, quickly; continūō, immediately; falsō, falsely; crēbrō, frequently; mēritō, deservedly; inōpīnatō, unexpectedly; fortuitō, by chance; auspiciō, auspiciously; consultō, designedly; and a few in ā from adjectives of the first declension; as, rectā, straight on; undā, together. In like manner, rēpēntē, suddenly, from rēpens; and pēregre or pēregri, from pēreger.

(b.) Nominatives or accusatives of the third declension in the neuter singular; as, facilē, difficilē, rēcens, sublimē, and impūnē; and some also of the second declension; as, cēterum, plērumquē, multum, plūrimum, pōtissimum, paupulum, nīmīum, pārum, and the numeral adverbs, primum, trīterum, tertium, quartum, etc. which have also the termination in ō, and so also postrimum (ō), and ultimum (ō). The neuter plural sometimes occurs also, especially in poetry; as, multā gēnere; tristia ululāre; crēbrā ferire.

NOTE 1. The forms in ē and ō from adjectives of the second declension have generally the same meaning, but vērē and vērō have a somewhat different sense. Vērē, truly, is the regular adverb of vērū, true; but vērō is used in answers, in the sense of 'in truth,' or 'certainly.' In this use it is added to the verb used in the question; as, adfusitne hēri in convivio? The affirmative answer is ego vērō adfui, or without the verb, ego vērō, and negatively, minime vērō; and as vērō thus merely indicates a reply, it is often untranslatable into English.—Certō, on the other hand, usually takes the meaning of the adjective certus, while certē often signifies 'at least'; as, victi sumus, aut, si dignitas vincī non pōtest, fracti certē; but certē is frequently used in the sense of 'certainly,' especially in the phrase certē scio.

NOTE 2. Some adjectives, from the nature of their signification, have no corresponding adverbs. Of some others, also, none occur in the classics. Such are āmens, divus, discors, gnārus, rūdis, trux, imbellis, immobilis, and similar compounds. In place of the adverbs formed from vētūs and fidūs, vētustē and antiquē are used for the former, and fideliūter for the latter, from vētustūs, antiquūs, and fideliūs.

III. From the adjective pronouns are derived adverbs of place, etc. (See § 191, Rem. 1.)

REMARK. The terminations ō and ac denote the place whither, instead of the accusative of the pronoun with a preposition; as, ad for ad eum locum; hūc for ad hunc locum; the terminations de and inc denote the place from which; ī and ic, the place in which; and ā and ac, the place by or through which; as, ad; viā or parte being understood.

IV. (a.) A few adverbs are derived from prepositions; as, subtūs, beneath; from sub; proptēr, near; from proptē. (b.) Morāciūs and versūs are derived from the verbs mordeo and verto.

REMARK. Diminutives are formed from a few adverbs; as, clam, clancūlum; primum, primūlum; cēleriūs, cēleriūsculē; sēpiūs, sēpiūsculē; bēnē, be'lē, belliūsculē.

COMPOSITION OF ADVERBS.

§ 193. Adverbs are compounded variously:—

1. Of an adjective and a noun; as, postridiē, quōtidī, magnōpērē, maximōpērē, summōpērē, quantōpērē, tantōpērē, tantummōdo, solummōdo, multimōdis, quōtannis—of postērō diē, magnō ōpērē, etc.
2. Of a pronoun and a noun; as, hōdiē, quadrē, quōmōdō—of hōc diē, quā rē, etc.
3. Of an adverb and a noun; as, nūtiūs, sēpēnūmērō—of nunc diēs, etc.
4. Of a preposition and a noun; as, comminūs, ēminūs, illico, obiter, exēmplō, obtrium, postmōdo, admōdum, prōpēdiem—of con, e, and mātūs; in and lōcūs; etc.
5. Of an adjective and a pronoun; as, aliōqui or aliōquin, cēterōqui or cēterōquin—of aliūs and quī, i. e. aliō quō (mōdo), etc.
6. Of a pronoun and an adverb; as, aliquamdiū, ālicubi—of āliquis, diū, and ibi; nēquāquam and nēquicquam—of nē and quisquam.
7. Of two verbs; as, ilicet, scilicet videlicet of irē, scire, vidērē, and licet.
8. Of an adverb and a verb; as, quōlibet, ubivis, undelibet. So deinceps—from dein and cōpio; duntaxat—from dum and taxo.
9. Of a participle with various parts of speech; as, deorsum, dextrorsum, horsum, retrorsum, sursum—of dē, dextēr, hic, retro, supēr, and versūs or versūs.
10. Of two adverbs; as, jamdūdum, quamdiū, tamdiū, cummaximē, tummaximē, quousquē, sicūt.
11. Of a preposition and an adjective; as, dēnuo, imprimis, cumprimis, apprimē, incassum—of dē nōvō, in prinis, etc.
12. Of a preposition and a pronoun; as, quapropter, postea, intēred, prātered, hactēnūs, quātēnūs, āliquātēnūs, cātēnūs—of propter quō, post ea or eam, etc.
13. Of a preposition and an adverb; as, abhinc, adhuc, dērepentē, intēribi, intērdū, interdum, persēpē.
14. Of two or three prepositions; as, insupēr, prōtinūs, inde, dein, deindē, pēindē.
15. Of a conjunction and an adverb; as, nēcūbi, sicūbi—of nē, si, and ālicubi.
16. Of an adverb and a termination scarcely used except in composition; as, ibidem, pārupēr, quāndocumquē, ubiquē, utcumquē.
17. Of three different parts of speech; as, fortātū—of fora, sit, an, quemadmodum, quamobrem, etc.
18. Of an adverb and an adjective; as, nimirum, utpōtē.
19. Of an adjective and a verb; as, quantumvis, quantumlibet.

Signification of certain Compound and Derivative Adverbs.

1. The adverbs continuo, prōtinus, statim, confestim, subito, repente and dērepente, actūm, illico, ilicet, exēmplo, signify in general 'directly' or 'immediately'; but, strictly, continuo means, 'immediately after'; statim, 'without delay'; confestim, 'directly'; subito, 'suddenly, unexpectedly'; prōtinus, 'farther,' viz. in the same direction, and hence, 'without interruption'; repente and dērepente, 'at once,' opposed to sensim, 'gradually,' (see Cic. Off. 1, 33); actūm, 'instantaneously,' i. q. edēm actū; illico, and more rarely ilicet, 'forthwith, the instant,' (Virg. Æn. 2, 424, Cic. Mur. 10); so also exēmplo, (Liv. 41, 1).

2. Præsertim, præcipue, imprimis, cumprimis, apprimē, are generally translated 'principally,' but, properly, præsertim is 'particularly,' and sets forth a particular circumstance with emphasis; præcipue, from præcōpio, has reference to privilege, and signifies 'especially'; imprimis and cumprimis, signify 'principally,' or 'in preference to others'; and apprimē, 'before all,' 'very,' is used in pure Latin to qualify and strengthen only adjectives. Admodum properly signifies 'according to measure,' that is, 'in as great a measure as can be,' 'very, exceedingly.' With numerals it denotes approximation, 'about.' Admodum nihil and admodum nullus signify 'nothing at all' and 'no one at all.'

3. Modo is the usual equivalent for 'only.' Solum, 'alone,' 'merely,' points to something higher or greater. Tantum, 'only,' 'merely,' intimates that something else was expected. The significations of solum and tantum are strengthened by modo, forming solummodo and tantummodo. Duntaxat, 'only, solely,' is not joined with verbs. It also signifies 'at least,' denoting a limitation to a particular point. Saltem also signifies 'at least,' but denotes the reduction of a demand to a minimum; as, Eripe mihi hunc dolorem, aut minus saltem.

4. Frustrâ implies a disappointed expectation; as in frustra suscipere labores. Nequicquam denotes the absence of success, as in Hor. Carm. 1, 3, 21. Incasum, composed of in and casum, 'hollow' or 'empty,' signifies 'to no purpose'; as, tela incasum jacere.

COMPARISON OF ADVERBS.

§ 194. 1. Adverbs derived from adjectives with the terminations ē and tēr, and most of those in o, are compared like their primitives.

2. The comparative, like the neuter comparative of the adjective, ends in iūs; the superlative is formed from the superlative of the adjective by changing ūs into e; as, dārē, dāriūs, dāriissimē; faciļē, faciļiūs, faciļissimē; acertiūr, aceriūs, acerrimē; rārō, rāriūs, rāriissimē; mātūrē, mātūriūs, mātūriissimē or mātūrrimē.

3. Some adverbs have superlatives in ō or um; as, mēritissimō, plurimum, primō or primum, potissimum.

4. If the comparison of the adjective is irregular or defective, (see §§ 125, 126), that of the adverb is so likewise; as, bēnē, meliūs, optimē; malē, pēiūs, pessimē; parum, minūs, minimē; multum, plūs, plurimum; —, priūs, primō or primum; —, ociūs, ocissimē; —, dēlētriūs, dēlētrime; —, potiūs, potissimē or potissimum; mēritō, —, mēritissimō; editiūs, —. Māgis, maximē, (from magnūs,) has no positive; nūpēr, nūperrime, has no comparative. Prōpē, prōpiūs, prociūs: the adjective prōpiūs has no positive in use. The regular adverb in the positive degree from uber is wanting, its place being supplied by ubertim, but uberiūs and uberrimē are used. So instead of tristitēr, tristē, the neuter of tristis, is used, but the comparative tristiūs is regular; and from sōcors only sōcordiūs, the comparative, is in use.

5. Diū and sepe, though not derived from adjectives, are yet compared; — diū, diutiūs, diutissimē; sepe, sepiūs, sepiissimē. A comparative tempēriūs, from tempēri or tempōri, also sometimes occurs. So sēcūs, sēcūs.

6. Adverbs, like adjectives, are sometimes compared by prefixing māgis and maximē; as, māgis apertē, maximē accommodāi.

PREPOSITIONS.

§ 195. 1. A preposition is a particle which expresses the relation between a noun or pronoun and some preceding word.

2. Prepositions express the relations of persons or things, either to one another, or to actions and conditions; as, amor meus erga te, my love toward thee; eo ad te, I go to thee.

3. Some prepositions have the noun or pronoun which follows them in the accusative, some, in the ablative, and some, in either the accusative or the ablative.

4. Twenty-six prepositions have an accusative after them:—

ad , to, towards, at, for.	extrā , without, beyond.	post , after, since, behind.
adversus , } against.	infra , under, beneath.	præter , past, before.
adversum , } towards.	intër , between, among,	against, beyond, besides.
antè , before.	during.	pròptèr , near by, nigh.
apud , at, with, near, be-	intrā , within.	proptèr , near, on account fore, in presence of.	juxtā , near to, next to.	of.
circā , } around, about.	ob , for, on account of,	secundum , after, behind,
circum , } around, about.	before.	along, next to, accord-
circitèr , about, near.	pènès , in the power of,	ing to.
cis , } on this side, within.	with.	suprà , above, over.
citrā , } on this side, within.	për , through, throughout,	trans , over, beyond.
contrā , against, opposite.	by, during.	ultrā , beyond.
ergā , towards, opposite.	pōnè , behind.

5. Eleven prepositions have after them an ablative:—

ā , }	dā , from, down from, af-	præ , before, for, on ac-
ab , } from, after, by.	ter, of, concerning.	count of, in comparison
abs , }	ē , } out of, from, of, by,	with.
absquē , without, but for.	ex , } after.	prō , before, for, instead
cōram , before, in pres-	pālam , before, in pres-	of, according to.
ence of.	ence of.	sine , without.
cum , with.		tēnūs , as far as, up to.

6. Five prepositions take after them sometimes an accusative, and sometimes an ablative:—

clam , without the knowl-	sūb , under, about, near.	sūpër , above, over; upon, edge of.	subtèr , under, beneath.	concerning.
In , in, on; to, into, against.

REMARK 1. Prepositions are so called, because they are generally placed before the noun or pronoun whose relation they express. They sometimes, however, stand after it. Cf. § 279, 10.

REM. 2. A is used only before consonants; ab before vowels, and frequently before consonants, though rarely before labials: abs is obsolete, except in the phrase abs te.

E is used only before consonants, ex before both vowels and consonants.

REM. 3. Versus, which follows its noun, (cf. § 235, R. 3), usquē, and exadversus (-um), sometimes take an accusative, simul and proximā, an ablative, and are then by some called prepositions. Secus, with an accusative, occurs in Pliny and Cato.

REM. 4. Many of the prepositions, especially those which denote place, are also used as adverbs. Cf. § 191.

Signification and Use of certain Prepositions.

REM. 5. (a.) Ad denotes direction, and answers to the questions Whither? and Till when? as, Venio ad te. Sophocles ad summam senectutem tragœdians fuit. Cic. It also denotes a fixed time; as, ad hōram, at the hour; ad tempus aliquid facere,—at the right time. But sometimes ad tempus denotes 'for a time.' Sometimes, also, ad denotes the approach of time; as, ad lucem, ad vesperam, ad extrēmum, towards day-break, etc.; and also the actual arrival of a time; as, ad prima signa vèris profectus, at the first sign of Spring.

(b.) In answer to the question Where? ad signifies 'near' a place; as, ad urbem esse; ad portas urbis; pugna navalis ad Tenedum. It is used like in, 'at,' in such phrases as ad aedem Bellonæ, or, without aedem, ad Opis, negotium habere ad portum.—With numerals it may be rendered 'to the amount of' or 'nearly'; as, ad ducentos. It is also used like circiter without any case; as, Occisus ad hominum millibus quatuor.—The phrase omnes ad unum signifies, 'all without exception,' 'every one.'

(c.) Ad often denotes an object or purpose, and hence comes its signification of 'in respect to'; as, homo ad labores belli impiger. It is also used in figurative relations to denote a model, standard, or object of comparison, where we say 'according to,' or 'in comparison with'; as, ad modum, ad effigiem, ad similitudinem, ad speciem alicujus rei; ad normam, etc. ad voluntatem alicujus facere aliquid. Ad verbum signifies, 'word for word'; nihil ad hanc rem, 'nothing in comparison with this thing.'

REM. 6. Apud expresses nearness to, and was primarily used of persons as ad was applied to things. Apud also denotes rest, and ad direction, motion, etc. Hence it signifies 'with,' both literally and figuratively. With names of places it signifies 'near,' like ad; as, Mile pugnatum est apud Caudium. But in early writers, apud is used for in; as, Augustus apud urbem Nôlam extinctus est,—at Nola.—With me, te, se, or the name of a person, it signifies 'at the house' or 'dwelling of'; as, Fuisti apud Læcam illâ nocte.—Before appellatives of persons having authority in regard to any matter, it is translated 'before,' 'in the presence of'; as, apud judices, apud prætorem, apud populum.—It is also used with names of authors, instead of in with the name of their works; as, Apud Xenophontem, but we cannot say in Xenophonte.

REM. 7. Adversus, contra, and erga signify 'opposite to.' Contra denotes hostility, like our 'against'; erga, a friendly disposition, 'towards'; and adversus is used in either sense. But erga sometimes occurs in a hostile sense.

REM. 8. Intra signifies 'within,' in regard both to time and place. In regard to place it is used in answer to both questions Where? and Whither? It denotes time either as an entire period, when it is equivalent to 'during,' or as 'unfinished,' when it corresponds with 'under,' or 'before the expiration of.'

REM. 9. Për, denoting place, signifies, 'through,' and also 'in,' in the sense of 'throughout.'—With the accusative of persons it signifies 'through,' 'by the instrumentality of.' It often expresses the manner; as, për litteras, by letter; për injuriam, për scelus, with injustice, criminally; për iram, from or in anger; për simulationem, për speciem, për causam, under the pretext; për occasionem, on the occasion; për ridiculum, in a ridiculous manner.—It sometimes signifies 'on account of'; as, për valetudinem, on account of illness.—Për me hæc,—so far as I am concerned.

REM. 10. A or ab, denoting time, is used with nouns, both abstract and concrete, with the same general meaning; as, a primâ aetate, ab ineunte aetate, ab initio aetatis, ab infantia, ab pueritia, ab adolescentiâ; and, a puero, ab infante, ab adolescentulo, ab infante, all of which signify 'from an early age.' So also, a parvis, a parvulo, a tenèro, a tenèris unguiculis, which expressions are of Greek origin.—Ab initio, a principio, a primo, properly denote the space of time from the beginning down to a certain point; as, Urbem Rômam a principio rege habuere, i. e. for a certain period after its foundation. But frequently ab initio is equivalent to initio, in the beginning.—The adherents or followers of a school are often named from its head; as, a Platône, ab Aristotèle, etc.—In comic writers ab is sometimes used instead of the genitive; as, ancilla ab Andriâ.—In a figurative sense it signifies 'with regard to'; as, ab equitatu firmus.—With names of persons it also denotes relationship, and signifies 'on the side of'; as, Augustus a matre Magnum Pompeium aristismo contingebat gradu,—on his mother's side.—Statim, confestim, reçens ab aliquâ re, 'immediately after.'—Ab itinere aliquid facere, to do a thing while on a journey.

REM. 11. Cum is used not only to designate accompanying persons but also accompanying circumstances; as, cum aliquo ire; hostes cum detrimento sunt depulsi. It signifies also 'in,' i. e. 'dressed in'; as, cum tunicâ pullâ sedere. With verbs implying hostility, it signifies 'with,' in the sense of 'against'; as, cum aliquo bellum gerere; cum aliquo queri, to complain of or against.

REM. 12. Dē commonly signifies 'concerning,' 'about.' Hence traditur dē Homēro is very different from traditur ab Homēro; in the former, Homer is the object, in the latter the agent.—In the epistolary style, when a new subject is touched upon, dē signifies 'in regard to,' 'as respects'; as, dē fratre, confido ita esse, ut semper volui.—It often signifies 'down from'; and also 'of,' in a partitive sense; as, homo dē plebe, unus dē populo.—From its partitive signification arises its use in denoting time; as, in comitium dē nocte venire, i. e. even by night, or spending a part of the night in coming; hence multa dē nocte, mechā dē nocte, 'in the depth of night,' 'in the middle of the night.'—In other cases, also, it is used for ex or ab; as, Auditi hoc dē parente meo puer. Cic.; especially in connection with emere, mercari, conducere. Triumphum agere dē Gallis and ex Gallis are used indiscriminately.—Sometimes, like secundum, it signifies 'in accordance with,' 'after'; as, dē consilio meo:—sometimes it denotes the manner of an action; as, denuo, dē integro, afresh; dē improviso, unexpectedly; dē industria, purposely:—quā dē re, quā dē causā, quibus dē causis, for which reason or reasons.

REM. 13. Ex, 'from,' 'out of.' Ex equo pugnare, to fight on horseback; so ex itinere scribere: ex adverso, dē regione, opposite; ex omni parte, in or from all parts.—Ex vino or ex aquā coquere or bibere, i. e. 'with wine,' etc. are medical expressions.—It sometimes denotes manner; as, ex animo laudare, to praise heartily; ex sententiā and ex voluntate, according to one's wish.—It is also, like dē, used in a partitive sense; as, unus dē plebe, unus dē multis.

REM. 14. In, with the accusative, signifying 'to' or 'into,' denotes the point towards which motion proceeds; as, in aedem ire; or the direction in which a thing extends; as, dēcem pedes in altitudinem, in height; so, also, it denotes figuratively the object towards which an action is directed, either with a friendly or a hostile design; as, amor in patriam, odium in malos cives, in milites liberālis; oratio in aliquem, a speech against some one.—It also denotes a purpose; as, pecunia data est in rem militārem. Pax data Philippo in has lēges est, on these conditions.—With words denoting time, it expresses a predetermination of that time, like 'for'; as, invitare aliquem in postērum diem, for the following day. In diem vivere, to live only for the day; in futurum, in postērum, in reliquum, for the future; in aeternum, in perpetuum, forever; in præsens, for the present: with all these adjectives tempus may be supplied. In with singuli, expressed or understood, denotes a distribution, and may be translated 'to,' 'for,' 'on,' 'over.'—In singulos dies, or simply in dies, with comparatives and verbs denoting increase, signifies 'from day to day.'—In some phrases it denotes the manner of an action; as, servilem in modum, mirum in modum; so in universum, in general; in commune, in common; in vicem, alternately, or, instead of; in alicujus locum aliquid petere, in the place, or, instead of.

REM. 15. In, with the ablative, signifies 'in,' 'on,' 'upon,' and answers to the question, Where? When a number or quantity is indicated, it signifies 'among,' and is equivalent to inter. It may sometimes be translated 'with,' or 'notwithstanding'; as, In summa copiā oratorum, nemo tamen Cicerōnis laudem aequavit.—With nouns which by themselves denote time, such as seculum, annus, mensis, dies, nox, vesper, etc., the time, in answer to the question When? is expressed by the simple ablative; but in is used with words which acquire the signification of time only by such connection; as, in consulātu, in principio, in bello; but even with these in is sometimes omitted, but is usually retained in connection with the gerund or gerundive; as, in legendo, in legendis libris. In præsenti, or in præsentiā, signifies 'at the present moment,' 'for the present.'—Est in eo, ut aliquid fiat signifies that something is on the point of happening.

PREPOSITIONS IN COMPOSITION.

§ 196. Most of the prepositions are used also in forming compound words. In composition, they may be considered either in reference to their form, or their force.

I. (u.) Prepositions in composition sometimes retain their final consonants, and sometimes change them, to adapt them to the sounds of the initial consonants of the words with which they are compounded. In some words, both forms are in use; in others, the final consonant or consonants are omitted.

1. Ad, in composition, is used before m and v; as, admoveo, avello, and sometimes before f in adfui and adföre, for abfui and abföre. Ab is used before vowels, and before d, f, h, j, l, n, r, and s; as, abjuro, abrogo, etc. Abs occurs only before c, g, and t; as, abscondo, absque, abstineo. In aspello, asperor, and asporto, the b of abs is dropped; in aufëro and aufugio, it is changed into u.

2. Ad remains unchanged before vowels and before b, d, h, m, v. It often changes d into c, f, g, l, n, p, r, s, t, before those letters respectively; as, accëdo, affëro, aggredior, allëgo, annitor, appöno, arrigo, assëquor, attollo. Its d is usually omitted before s followed by a consonant, and before gn; as, aspergo, aspicio, agnosco, agnätus. Before g, the d is changed into c; as, acquirö.

3. Ante remains unchanged, except in antëcipo and antësto, where it changes e to i; but antësto also occurs.

4. Circum in composition remains unchanged, only in circümëo and its derivatives the m is often dropped; as, circueo, circuitus, etc.

5. Cum (in composition, com), retains m before b, m, p; as, combibö, committo, compöno: before l, n, r, its m is changed into those letters respectively; as, colligo, conmitto, corripio: before other consonants, it becomes n; as, condüco, conjungo. Before a vowel, gn or h, m is commonly omitted; as, coco, coopto, cognosco, cohabitö; but it is sometimes retained; as, comëdo, cömes, cömëtor. In cögo and cögito a contraction also takes place; as, cöägo, cögö, etc. In combüro, b is inserted.

6. Ex is prefixed to vowels, and to c, h, p, q, s, t; as, exëo, exigö, excurro, exhibëo, expëdïo. Before f, x is assimilated, and also rarely becomes ec; as, effëro, or exfëro. S after x is often omitted; as, exëquor, for exsëquor; in excidiüm (from exscindo), s is regularly dropped. E is prefixed to the other consonants; as, ëbibo, ëdïco, except in eclez. Before these however, with the exception of n and r, ex is sometimes used; as, exmöveo. E is sometimes used before p; as, ëpöto.

7. In remains unchanged before a vowel. Before b, m, p, it changes n into m; as, imbüo, immitto, impöno: before l and r, n is assimilated; as, illägo, irrëtio: before gn, n is omitted; as, ignärus. Before the other consonants n is unchanged. In some compounds, n retains d before a vowel, from an ancient form indu; as, indigëna, indägeo, indolesco. So anciently induperätor, for imperätor.

8. Inter remains unchanged, except in intelligo and its derivatives, in which r before l is assimilated.

9. Ob remains unchanged before vowels and generally before consonants. Its b is assimilated before c, f, g, p; as, occurro, officio, oggannio, oppëto. In ömitto, b is dropped. An ancient form öbs, analogous to abs for ab, is implied in obolesco, from the simple verb oleo, and in ostendo, for obstendo.

10. Per is unchanged in composition, except in pellëcio and sometimes in pellüceo, in which r is assimilated before l. In pëjëro, r is dropped.

11. Post remains unchanged, except in pömarium and pömeridiänus, in which st is dropped.

12. Pro and præter in composition remain unchanged, except that pro is shortened before a vowel. Cf. § 283, II. Exc. 1.

13. Pro has sometimes its vowel shortened, (cf. § 285, 2, Exc. 5) and, to avoid hiatus, it sometimes takes d before a vowel; as, prōdeo, prōdesse, prōdigo. Before verbs beginning with r and l, pro sometimes becomes por and poi; as, porrigo, polliceor.

14. Sūb in composition remains unchanged before a vowel and before b, d, j, l, n, s, t, v. Before c, f, g, m, p, r, its b is regularly assimilated; as, succēdo, suffēro, suggēro, summōceo, supplicō, surripio. Before c, p, and t, it sometimes takes the form sus from sub, analogous to abs and obs; as, enuspicio, suspendo, sustollo: b is omitted before s, followed by a consonant; as, suspicio.

15. Subter and sūper in composition remain unchanged.

16. Trans remains unchanged before a vowel. It omits s before s; as, transcendo: in trādo, trādūco, trāgicio, and trāno, ns is commonly omitted.

(b.) The following words are called inseparable prepositions, because they are found only in composition:—

Ambi or amb, (Greek ἀμφί), around, about. Rēd or rē, again, back. Vē, not.
Dis or di, asunder. Sē, apart, aside.

1. Amb is always used before a vowel; as, ambāges, ambārvalis, ambēdo, ambigo, ambio, ambūro: except ampulla, āmicio, and ānhelo. Before consonants it has the forms ambi; as, ambidens, ambifāriam, ambivium: am; as, amplector, ampūto: or an; as, anceps, anfractus, anquiro.

2. Dis is prefixed to words beginning with c, p, q, s before a vowel, t, and l; as, discutio, dispono, disputo, distendo, dishiasco: but disertus is formed from disēro; before j, s is changed into f; as, diffēro: in dirimo, and diribeo (from dis habeo), s becomes r. Di is prefixed to the other consonants, and to s when followed by a consonant; as, didūco, dimitto, distinguo, dispicio. But both dis and di are used before j; as, disjuncto, dijūctio, and before r in rumpo.

3. Rēd is used before a vowel or h; rē before a consonant; as, rēdimo, rēdeo, rēdhibeo, rēdigo, rēditeo, rēdundo;—rēgicio, rēpono, rēvertor. But rēd is used before do; as, reddo. The connecting vowel i is found in rēdivitus; and in the poetical forms relligio, reliquia, and sometimes in reccido the d is assimilated. In later writers re is sometimes found before a vowel or h.

4. Sē and vē are prefixed without change; as, sēcēdo, sēcūrus; vēgrandis, vēcōra.

§ 197. II. Prepositions in composition usually add their own signification to that of the word with which they are united; but sometimes they give to the compound a meaning different from that of its simples. The following are their most common significations:—

1. A, or ab, away, from, down; entirely; un-. With verbs it denotes removal, disappearance, absence; as, aufero, abūtor, absum. With adjectives it denotes absence, privation; as, āmens, absōnus.

2. Ad, to, toward; at, by. In composition with verbs ad denotes (a) motion to, (not into), as, accēdo; (b) addition, as, ascribo; (c) nearness, as, assideo; (d) assent, favor, as, annuo, arrideo; (e) repetition and hence intensity, as, accido; (f) at, in consequence of, as, arrigo. It is sometimes augmentative, rarely inchoative.

3. Ambi, around, about, on both sides.

4. Circum, around, about, on all sides.

5. Cōm or cōn, together, entirely. In composition with verbs it denotes (a) union, as, concurro, consūlo; (b) completeness, as, combūro, conficio; (c) with effort, as, conquiesco, conclāmo; (d) in harmony, as, consōno, consentio; (e) on or over, like the English be-, as, collino, to beamear.

6. Contra, against, opposite.

7. De, off, away, through, over, down; entirely; very, extremely. With verbs de denotes (a) down; as, dēmitto; (b) removal; as, dētondeo; (c) absence; as, dēsūm, dēhābeo; (d) prevention; as, dēhortor; (e) unfriendly feeling; as, despicio, dērideo.—With adjectives dē denotes (a) down; as, dēclivis; (b) without; as, dēmēns.

8. Dis, asunder, apart, in pieces, in two; dis-, un-; very greatly. With verbs dis denotes (a) division; as, divido, dilābor; (b) difference; as, discrepo, dissentio; (c) the reverse of the simple notion; as, displaceo, diffido; (d) intensity; as, dilando.—With adjectives dis denotes difference; as, discolor, discors.

9. E, or ex, out, forth, away, upward, without, -less, un-; utterly, completely, very. With verbs it denotes (a) out; as, exeo, exīmo, ēlābōro; (b) removal of something; as, ēdormio; (c) publicity; as, ēdico; (d) ascend; as, exsisto; (e) completeness; as, ēdisco, exūro; (f) with denominative verbs, change of character; as, expio, effēro (āre); (g) removal of what is expressed by the noun whence the verb is derived; as ēnodo; (h) the reversal of the fundamental idea; as, explico; (i) distance; as, exaudio.—With adjectives formed from substantives it denotes absence; as, exsomnia.

10. In, with verbs, signifies in, on, at; into, against; as, inhābito, induo, ingēmo, ineo, illido. With adjectives, un-, in-, im-, il-, ir-, not; as, ignōtus, inhospitalis, immortalis. Some of its compounds have contrary significations, according as they are participles or adjectives; as, intectus, part., covered, adj., uncovered.

11. Inter, between, among, at intervals.

12. Ob, with verbs, signifies to, towards; as, obeo, ostendo; against; as, obtuor, obvuntio; at, before; as, obambulo, obversor; upon; as, occulco; over; as, obduco.

13. Per, with verbs, denotes, through, thoroughly, perfectly, quite; as, perduco, perficio, perdo: with adjectives, through, very; as, pernox, perlēvis.

14. Post, after, behind.

15. Præ in composition with verbs denotes (a) before in place; as, præmitto; (b) by or past; as, præfluo; (c) in command; as, præsum, præficio; (d) superiority; as, præsto; (e) before in time; as, prædico, præcerpo; at the extremity; as, præuro.—With adjectives, (a) before in place or time; as, præceps, præsciū; (b) very; as, præaltus, præclarus.

16. Præter, past, by, beyond, besides.

17. Prō, before, forward, forth, away, down; for; openly; as, prōlūdo, porrigo, prōterreo, prōtēro, prōcūro, prōfiteor.

18. Rē, again, against, back, re-, un-, away; greatly; as, rēfloreſco, rēpendo, rēfēro, rēfigo, rēcondo.

19. Sē, without, aside, apart; as, sēcūro, sēpno, sēcēdo, sēcūrus.

20. Sūb, up, from below upwards, under. With verbs sūb also signifies (a) assistance; as, subvenio; (b) succession; as, succīno; (c) in place of; as, sufficio; (d) near; as, subsum; (e) secretly, clandestinely; as, surrūpio, subduco; (f) somewhat, a little; as, subrideo, sūbaccūso.—With adjectives it signifies, slightly, rather; as, sūbobscurus, sūbabsurdus, sūbacidus.

21. Subter, beneath, under, from under, secretly, privately.

22. Sūper, above, over, left over, remaining, super-; as, sūpersēdeo, sūpernum, sūperstes, sūperadāneus.

23. Trans, over, across, through; beyond; as, trādo, transeo, transfigo, transalpinus.

24. Vē, not, without; very; as, vēgrandis, vēcors; vēpalidus.

REMARK. In composition the preposition seems often to add nothing to the signification of the word with which it is compounded.

CONJUNCTIONS.

§ 198. A conjunction is a particle which connects words or propositions.

The most usual conjunctions are,

Atque, } and, as; than.

Ac, } as if.

Ac si, } as if.

Adco, } so that, so.

An, } whether.

Anne, } whether.

Conjunctions, according to their different uses, are divided into two general classes,—coordinate and subordinate.

I. Coordinate conjunctions, are such as join coordinate or similar constructions; as,

Luna et stellæ fulgebant. The moon and the stars were shining. Conciderunt venti, fugiuntque nubes. The winds subside, and the clouds disperse. Difficile factu est, sed conabor tamen. It is difficult to accomplish, but still I will try.

Coordinate conjunctions include the following subdivisions, viz. copulative, disjunctive, adversative, illative, and most of the causal conjunctions.

II. Subordinate conjunctions are such as join dissimilar constructions; as, Edo, et vivam, I eat that I may live. Pyrrhus rex in itinere incidit in canem, qui interfecti hominis corpus custodiebat. Mergi pullos in aquam jussit, ut bibberent, quoniam esse nolent.

Subordinate conjunctions include all those connectives which unite subordinate or dependent clauses. These are the concessive, illative, final, conditional, interrogative, and temporal conjunctions, and the causals quod, quum, quoniam, etc. To these may be added also the relatives whether pronouns, adjectives, or adverbs.

The following paragraphs contain a specification of the several conjunctions comprised in each of the preceding subdivisions, and remarks respecting their particular import and use as connectives.

1. COPULATIVE conjunctions connect things that are to be considered jointly; as, et, ac, atque, the enclitic que, which, combined with the negation belonging to the verb, becomes neque or nec, and, the negation being doubled, nec non or neque non, it becomes again affirmative and equivalent to et. To these are to be added etiam and quodque, with the adverbials item and etiam.

REMARK. (a.) Et and que differ in this, et connects things which are conceived as different, and que adds what belongs to, or naturally flows from them. Et, therefore, is copulative and que adjunctive. Hence, in an enumeration of words, que frequently connects the last of the series, and by its means the preceding idea is extended without the addition of any thing which is generically different. In connecting propositions que denotes a consequence, and is equivalent to 'and therefore.'

(b.) Ac never stands before vowels, atque chiefly before vowels, but also before consonants.—Atque, being formed of ad and que, properly signifies 'and also,' 'and in addition,' thus putting things on an equality, but giving emphasis to the latter. In the beginning of a proposition, which is explanatory of that which precedes, atque or ac introduces a thing with great weight, and may be rendered 'now'; and in answers; as, Cognostine hos versus? Ac memoriter, it is rendered 'yes, and that.' Ac being an abridged form of atque loses somewhat of its power in connecting single words, and its use alternates with that of et; it is preferred in subdivisions, whereas the main propositions are connected by et.

(c.) Neque, compounded of the ancient ne for non and que, is used for et non. Et non itself is used, when only one idea or one word of a proposition is to be negated; as, patior et non moleste fero; and also when our 'and not' is used for 'and not rather' to correct an improper supposition; as, Si quam Rubrius injuriam suo nomine ac non impulsu tuo fecisset. Cic. Et non is commonly found also in the second clause of a sentence when et precedes, but neque, also, is often used in this case. Nec non or neque non, in classical prose, is not used like et to connect nouns, but only to join propositions, and the two words are separated. In later writers, however, they are not separated and are equivalent to et.

(d.) Etiam has a wider extent than quodque, for it contains the idea of our 'even,' and it also adds a new circumstance, whereas quodque denotes the addition of a thing of a similar kind. Hence etiam is properly used to connect sentences, while quodque refers to a single word. Etiam signifies 'and further,' quodque, 'and so,' 'also.' Quodque always follows the word to which it refers, etiam in similar cases is usually placed before it, but when it connects propositions its place is arbitrary. Et, too, in classical prose, is sometimes used in the sense of 'also.' So often is non modo—sed et, 'not only—but also,' or 'but even.'

(e.) Copulative conjunctions are often repeated in the sense of 'both—and,' 'as well—as,' 'not only—but also' Et—et is of common occurrence; so, in later writers, but rarely in Cicero, et—quē; quē—et connect single words, but not in Cicero; quē—quē, occur for the most part only in poetry, or in connection with the relative.—Negative propositions are connected in English by 'neither—nor,' and in Latin by nēquē—nēquē, nēc—nēc, nēquē—nēc, and rarely by nēc—nēquē. Propositions, one of which is negative and the other affirmative 'on the one hand—but not on the other,' or, 'not on the one hand—but on the other,' are connected by et—nēquē or nēc, nēquē or nēc—et, and occasionally by nēc or nēquē—quē.

2. DISJUNCTIVE conjunctions connect things that are to be considered separately; as, aut, vēl, the enclitic vē, and sivē or seu.

REMARK. (a.) Aut and vēl differ in this; aut indicates a difference of the object, vēl, a difference of expression, i. e. aut is objective, vēl, subjective. Vēl is connected with the verb velle, and is generally repeated, vēl—vēl, 'choose this or choose this,' and the single vēl is used by Cicero only to correct a preceding expression, and commonly combined with dicam, pōtius, or etiam.—Hence by ellipsis vēl has acquired the signification of the adverb, 'even,' and so enhances the signification of the word modified by it; as, Quam Sophocles vel optime scripsérūt Electram, where bēne is to be supplied before vēl, and the latter is used for the purpose of correcting the preceding expression. Cf. § 127, 4. By means of its derivation from velle it has, also, the signification of 'for example' or 'to take a case,' for which vēlūt is more frequently used.—(b.) Vē, the apocopated vēl, leaves the choice free between two or more things, and in later but good prose vēl is used in the same manner.

(c.) Sivē commonly retains the meaning of si, and is then the same as vēl si, but sometimes loses it, and is then equivalent to vēl, denoting a difference of name; as, Vocabulum sive appellatio. Quint. The form seu is rarely used by Cicero except in the combination seu pōtius.—(d.) Aut and vē serve to continue the negation in negative sentences, where we use 'nor'; as, nōn—aut, where nōn—nēquē also may be used. They are used also in negative questions; as, Num leges nostras morosē nōvī? Cic.; and after comparatives; as, Doctrina paulo asperior, quam veritas aut natura patiātur. Cic. It is only when both ideas are to be united into one that a copulative is used instead of aut and vē.—(e.) 'Either—or' is expressed in Latin by aut—aut, denoting an opposition between two things, one of which excludes the other, or by vēl—vēl, denoting that the opposition is immaterial in respect to the result, so that the one need not exclude the other; as, Vēl imperatōre vel milite me utimini. Sall.—Sivē—sivē is the same as vēl si—vēl si, and retains the meaning of vēl—vēl. If nouns only are opposed to each other, an uncertainty is expressed as to how a thing is to be called; as, Crētum leges, quas sive Jupiter sive Minos sanxit; i. e. I do not know whether I am to say Jupiter or Minos.

3. COMPARATIVE conjunctions express a comparison. These are, ut or utī, sicūt, vēlūt, proūt, prout, the poetical ceu, quam, tamquam, (with and without si), quāsi, ut si, ac si, with ac and atquē; when they signify 'as.'

REMARK. Ac and atquē signify 'as' or 'than' after adverbs and adjectives which denote similarity or dissimilarity; as, aequē, juxtā, pār and partēr, périnđe and proinđe, prō eō, similis and similitēr, dissimilis, tālis, tōtīdem, alius and aliūter, contrā, secūs, contrārius.—Quam is rarely used after these words, except when a negative particle is joined with alius; as, Virtus nihil aliud est, quam, etc.; and et and quē do not occur in this connection.—Ac is used for quam, after comparatives, in poetry and occasionally by late prose writers; as, Artius atque hederā. Hor. Insanius ac si. Id.

4. CONCESSIVE conjunctions express a concession, with the general signification 'although.' These are etsi, etiam si, tāmet si, or tāmenetsi, quamquam, quamvis, quantumvis, quamlibēt, licēt, ut in the sense of 'even if' or 'although,' and quum when it signifies 'although.'

REMARK. Tāmen and other particles signifying 'yet,' 'still,' are the correlatives of the concessive conjunctions; as, Ut desint vires, tāmen est laudanda voluntas. Ovid. The adverb quidem becomes a concessive conjunction, when it is used to connect propositions and is followed by sed.—Quamquam, in absolute sentences, sometimes refers to something preceding, which it limits and partly nullifies; as, Quamquam quid loquor? Yet why do I speak?

5. CONDITIONAL conjunctions express a condition, their fundamental signification being 'if.' These are si, sin, nisi or ni, si modo, dummodo, 'if only,' 'if but,' (for which dum and modo are also used alone), dummodo nē, or simply modo nē or dum nē.

REMARK. (a.) In order to indicate the connection with a preceding proposition, the relative quod, which in such case loses its signification as a pronoun, and may be rendered, 'nay,' 'now,' 'and,' or 'then,' is frequently put before si and sometimes before nisi and etsi, so that quodsi may be regarded as one word, signifying 'now if,' 'but if,' or 'if then.' It serves especially to introduce something assumed as true, from which further inferences may be drawn. It sometimes signifies 'although.' Quodnisi signifies 'if then—not,' and quodetsi, 'nay, even if.' Quod is found also before quum, ubi, quid, quoniam, nē, etiam, and even before the relative pronoun.

(b.) Ni and nisi limit a statement by introducing an exception, and thus differ from si nōn, which introduces a negative case. It is often immaterial whether nisi or si nōn is used, but the difference is still essential. Si nōn is used when single words are opposed to one another, and in this case si minùs may be used instead of si nōn.—If after an affirmative proposition its negative opposite is added without a verb, our 'but if not' is commonly expressed in prose by si minùs or sin minùs or sin aliter; as, Educ tecum etiam omnes tuos; si minùs, quam plurimos. Cic.; rarely by si nōn.

6. ILLATIVE conjunctions express an inference or conclusion, with the general signification of 'therefore,' 'consequently.' These are ergo, igitur, itaque, ed, ideo, iccirco, proinde, propterea, and the relative conjunctions, quapropter, quare, quamobrem, quocirca, unde, 'wherefore.'

REMARK. Ergo and igitur denote a logical inference.—Itaque, 'and thus,' expresses the relation of cause in facts.—Ideo, iccirco, and propterea, 'on this account,' express the agreement between intention and action.—Ed, 'on this account,' or 'for this purpose,' is more frequently an adverb of place.—Proinde, 'consequently,' implies an exhortation.—Unde, 'whence,' is properly an adverb of place.—Adeo, 'so that,' or simply 'so,' is also properly an adverb. Hinc, 'hence,' and inde, 'thence,' continue to be adverbs.

7. CAUSAL conjunctions express a cause or reason, with the general signification of 'for' and 'because.' These are nam, namque, enim, etiam, quid, quod, quoniam, quippe, quum, quando, quandocumque, siquidem; and the adverbs nimirum, nempe, scilicet, and videlicet.

REMARK. (a.) Nam is used at the beginning of a proposition, enim, after the first or second word. Nam introduces an objective reason, and enim merely a subjective one. There is the same difference between namque and etiam. Namque, however, though constantly standing at the beginning of a proposition in Cicero, Cæsar, and Nepos, is in later writers often put after the beginning. Enim in the sense of et enim or sed enim is sometimes, by comic writers, put at the beginning of a proposition.—Nam, enim, and etiam are often used in the sense of 'namely,' or 'to wit,' to introduce an explanation of something going before. Nimirum, videlicet, and scilicet likewise answer to our 'namely' or 'viz.' Nimirum, compounded of ni and mirum, and signifying 'a wonder if not,' is used as a connective in the sense of 'undoubtedly' or 'surely,' and implies strong confidence in the truth of the proposition with which it is connected.—Videlicet and scilicet introduce an explanation, with this difference that videlicet generally indicates the true, and scilicet a wrong explanation. Sometimes, however, nam, enim, etiam, nimirum, and videlicet are used in an ironical sense, and scilicet introduces a true reason.—Nempe, 'surely,' often assumes a sarcastic meaning when another person's concession is taken for the purpose of refuting him.—(b.) Quid and quod indicate a defininite and conclusive reason, quoniam, (l. e. quum jam), a motive.—Ideo, idcirco, propterea quod, and quid, are used without any essential difference, except that quid introduces a more strict and logical reason, whereas quoniam, signifying 'now as,' introduces important circumstances.—Quando, quandoguidem, and siquidem approach nearer to quoniam than to quid, as they introduce only subjective reasons. Quandoguidem denotes a reason implied in a circumstance previously mentioned; siquidem, a reason implied in a concession. In siquidem the meaning of si is generally dropped, but it sometimes remains, and then si and quidem should be written as separate words; as, O fortunatam rempublicam, si quidem hanc sententiam eiecit. Cic.—Quippe, with the relative pronoun or with quum, introduces a subjective reason. When used elliptically without a verb it signifies 'forsooth' or 'indeed.' Sometimes it is followed by a sentence with enim, and in this way gradually acquires the signification of nam.

8. FINAL conjunctions express a purpose, object, or result, with the signification of 'in order that,' or 'in order that not.' These are ut or utrum, quod, ne or ut ne, neve or neu, quin and quominus.

REMARK. Ut, as a conjunction, indicates either a result or a purpose, 'so that,' and 'in order that.' When indicating a result, if a negative is added to it, it becomes ut non; when indicating a purpose, if the negative is added, it, becomes ne or ut ne, but ut non also is very rarely used for ne.—Nervé (i. e. ut ne) signifies either 'or in order that not,' or 'and in order that not.' Ut ne is a pleonasm, not differing perceptibly from ne. It is used more frequently by Cicero than by other writers. Quo ne for ne occurs once in Horace.

9. ADVERBATIVE conjunctions, express opposition, with the signification of 'but.' These are sed, autem, verum, vero, at (poetical ast), at enim, atque, tamen, attamen, sedtamen, veruntamen, at vero, (enimvero), verumtamen, verum, vero, ceterum.

REMARK. (a.) Sed denotes a direct opposition, and interrupts the narrative or argument; autem marks a transition, and denotes at once a connection and an opposition. Porro, 'further,' denotes progression and transition but not opposition, except in later authors.—Verum has a similar relation to vero as sed to autem. Verum, while it denotes opposition, contains also an explanation. Vero connects things which are different, but denotes the point in favor of which the decision should be. It thus forms the transition to something more important, as in the phrase, Illud vero plane non est ferendum, i. e. that which I am about to mention. In affirmative answers vero is often added to the verb; as, Dame? Do vero. Hence, when the protasis supplies the place of a question, it is sometimes introduced into the apodosis merely to show that it contains an answer. Hence also vero alone signifies 'yes,' like sane, ita, and etiam.—Enimvero, 'yes, truly,' 'in truth,' does not denote opposition. It sometimes, like vero, forms the transition to that which is most important. The compound verum enimvero denotes the most emphatic opposition.

(b.) At denotes that that which is opposed is equivalent to that which precedes. It frequently follows si, in the sense of 'yet,' or 'at least'; as, etsi non sapientissimus, at amicissimus. It is especially used to denote objections whether of the speaker himself or of others. At enim introduces a reason for the objection implied in at.—By atque, 'but still,' 'but yet,' or 'nevertheless,' we admit what precedes, but oppose something else to it; as, Magnum narras, viz credibile. Atque sic habet. Hor. So, also, when that which is admitted, is made use of to prove the contrary. Finally, atque is used in syllogisms, when a thing is assumed which had before been left undecided; in this case it does not denote a direct opposition of facts, and may be translated by 'now,' 'but,' 'but now.'—Ceterum, properly 'as for the rest,' is often used by later writers for sed.—Contra ea, in the sense of 'on the other hand,' is used as a conjunction. So adeo with a pronoun, when it may be translated 'just,' 'precisely,' 'even,' 'indeed,' or an intensive 'and.'

10. TEMPORAL conjunctions, express time. These are quum, quum primum, ut, ut primum, ubi, postquam, antequam, and priusquam, quando, simulac or simulatque, or simul alone, dum, usque dum, donesc, quoad.

REMARK. Ut and ubi, as particles of time, signify 'when.' Dum, dōnec, and quoad signify either 'as long as,' or 'until.' Dum often precedes intēdē or intērim, and both dum and dōnec are often preceded by the adverbs usquē, usquē ad or usquē adeo.

11. INTERROGATIVE conjunctions indicate a question. These are, num, utrum, an, and the enclitic ne. This, when attached to the three preceding particles, forming numne, utrumne, and anne, does not affect their meaning. With ne it forms a special interrogative particle nonne. To these add ec and en, as they appear in ecquis, ecquando, and enumquam, and numquid and ecquid, when used simply as interrogative particles.

REMARK. (a.) The interrogative particles have no distinct meaning by themselves in direct questions, but only serve to give to a proposition the form of a question. In direct speech the interrogative particles are sometimes omitted, but in indirect questions they are indispensable, except in the case of a double question, where the first particle is sometimes omitted.—Ecquid and numquid, as interrogative particles, have the meaning of num, quid in this case having no meaning, but they must be carefully distinguished from the interrogative pronouns ecquid and numquid. En, or when followed by a q, ec is, like num, ne, and an, an interrogative particle, but is always prefixed to some other interrogative word.

(b.) In direct questions, num and its compounds numne, numnam, numquid, numquidnam, and the compounds with en or ec suppose that the answer will be 'no'; as, Num putas me tam dementem fuisse? But ecquid is sometimes used in an affirmative sense. In general the negative sense of these particles does not appear in indirect questions.

(c.) Ne properly denotes simply a question, but it is used sometimes affirmatively and sometimes negatively. When ne is attached, not to the principal verb but to some other word, a negative sense is produced; as, me istud potuisse facere putas? Do you believe that I would have done that? The answer expected is 'no.' When attached to the principal verb ne often gives the affirmative meaning, and the answer expected is 'yes.'—Nonne is the sign of an affirmative question; as, Canis nonne lupo similis est?—Utrum, in accordance with its derivation from iter, which of two, is used only in double questions whether consisting of two or more. It is sometimes accompanied by ne, which is usually separated from it by one or more words; as, Utrum, taceamus an pradicem? In later writers, however, utrumne is united into one word. Ne is rarely appended to interrogative adjectives, but examples of such use are sometimes found in poetry; as, uternē; quōnē malo; quantanē. In a few passages it is even attached to the relative pronoun.

(d.) An is not used as a sign of an indirect question before the silver age; when so used it answers to 'whether.' It is used by Cicero exclusively in a second or opposite question, where we use 'or'; as, Si sitis, nihil interest utrum aqua sit, an vinum; nec refert, utrum sit aureum poculum, an vitreum, an manus concoda. Sen. In direct interrogations, when no interrogative clause precedes, an, anne, an vero are likewise used in the sense of 'or,' that is in such a manner that a preceding interrogation is supplied by the mind; as, Invitus te offendī, an putas me delectari ledendis hominibus? Here we may supply before an putas, etc. the sentence, 'Do you believe this?'—An, after a preceding question, is rendered by 'not,' and it then indicates that the answer cannot be doubtful; as, A rebus gerendis senectus abstrahit. Quibus? An his, quas geruntur juveniū ac viribus? Is it not from those kinds of business, which? etc. Here we may suppose alium to be supplied before an his? Is it from other kinds of business, or from those? etc. Such questions may be introduced by nonne, but without allusion to an opposite question, which is implied in an.

(e.) To the rule that an, in indirect questions, is used exclusively to indicate a second or opposite question, there is one great exception, for it is employed in single indirect questions after such expressions as dubito, dubium est, incertum est; delibēro, hæsito, and especially after nescio or haud scio, all of which denote uncertainty, but with an inclination to the affirmative; as, Si per se virtus sine fortuna ponderanda sit, dubito an hunc primum omnium ponam, If virtue is to be estimated without reference to its success, I am not certain whether I should not prefer this man to all others. Nep. It is not Latin to say dubito annon for dubito an.—Nescio an, or haud scio an are used quite in the sense of 'perhaps,' so that they are followed by the negatives nullus, nemo, numquam, instead of ullus, quisquam and unquam. When the principal verb is omitted, an is often used in the sense of aut; as, Themistocles, quum ei Simonides, an quis alius, artem memorie polliceretur, etc. In such cases incertum est is understood, and in Tacitus is often supplied.—The conjunction si is sometimes used in indirect interrogations instead of num, like the Greek si, and it is so used by Cicero after the verb exprior.

NOTE 1. The conjunctions -ne, -que, -ve, are not used alone, but are always affixed to some other word, and are hence called enclitics.

NOTE 2. Some words here classed with conjunctions are also used as adverbs, and many classed as adverbs are likewise conjunctions; that is, they at the same time qualify verbs, etc., and connect propositions; as, Ceteris in rebus, quum venit calamitas, tum detrimentum accipitur, In other concerns, when misfortune comes, then damage is received.

NOTE 3. Conjunctions, like adverbs, are variously compounded with other parts of speech, and with each other; as, atque, (i. e. adque), iccirco or idcirco, (i. e. id-circa), ideo, namque, etc. In some, compounded of an adverb and a conjunction, each of the simple words retains its meaning, and properly belongs to its own class; as, etiam (et jam) and now; itaque, and so; neque or neq, and not.

INTERJECTIONS.

$ 199. An interjection is a particle used in exclamation, and expressing some emotion of the mind.

The most usual interjections are,

ah! ah! alas!
 aha! aha! ah! haha!
 apāgē! away! begone!
 ātāt! or atatte! oh! ah! alas! lo!
 au! or hau! ch! ah!
 eccē! lo! see! behold!
 ehem! ha! what!
 ehēu! ah! alas!
 ēho! ehodum! ho! soho!
 eiā! or heiā! ah! ah ha! indeed!
 ēn! lo! see! behold!
 eu! well done! bravo!
 engē! well done! good!
 euax! } huzzah! hurrah!
 euos! }
 ha! hold! ho!
 ha! ha! he! ha! ha!
 hei! ah! wo! alas!

hem! oho! indeed! well! hah! alas! alack!
 hen! oh! ah! alas!
 heus! ho! ho there! hark! halloo!
 hui! hah! ho! oh!
 iū! ho! hurrah! huzzah!
 ō! o! oh! ah!
 ōh! oh! o! ah!
 ōhē! ho! halloo! ho there!
 ōho! oho! aha!
 oi! hoy! alas!
 pāpā! strange! wonderful!
 phui! foh! fugh!
 phy! pish! tush!
 prō! or prōh! oh! ah!
 st! hist! whist! hush!
 tatæ! so! strange!
 væ! ah! alas! woe!
 vah! vaha! ah! alas! oh!

REMARK 1. An interjection sometimes denotes several different emotions. Thus vah is used to express wonder, grief, joy, and anger.

REM. 2. Other parts of speech may sometimes be regarded as interjections; as, pax! be still! So indignum, infandum, mālum, misērum, miserabile, nēfas, when used as expressions of astonishment, grief, or horror; and maie and maie, as expressions of approbation. In like manner the adverbs ax, profecto, cito, bēne, belle; the verbs quæso, præcor, oro, obsecro, amābo, āge, āgite, cēdo, addes, (for si audes), sis, sultis, (for si vis and si vultis), āgēs, āgēdum, and āgite quæ, and the interrogative quid? what? used as exclamations.

REM. 3. With the interjections may also be classed the following invocations of the gods : hercŭles, hercŭle, hercle ; or mehercŭles, mehercŭle, mehercle ; medius fŭlius, mecastor, ecaster, ecŭre, pol, edepol, equirŭne, per deum, per deum immortŭlem, per deos, per Jovem, prŏ (or prŏh) Jŭpiter, prŏ dŭi immortŭles, prŏ deum fidem, prŏ deum atque hominum fidem, prŏ deum immortŭlium (scil. fidem), etc.

SYNTAX.

§ 200. 1. Syntax treats of the construction of sentences.

2. A sentence is a thought expressed in words ; as, Cŭnes latrant, The dogs bark.

3. All sentences are either

(1.) DECLARATIVE ; as, Venti spirant, The winds blow :—

(2.) INTERROGATIVE ; as, Spirantne venti? Do the winds blow?—

(3.) EXCLAMATORY ; as, Quam vehŕmenter spirant venti! How fiercely the winds blow!—or (4.) IMPERATIVE ; as, Venti, spirŕte, Blow, winds.

4. The mood of the verb in the first three classes of sentences is either the indicative or the subjunctive ; in imperative sentences it is either the imperative or the subjunctive.

5. A sentence may consist either of one proposition or of two or more propositions connected together.

PROPOSITIONS.

§ 201. 1. A proposition consists of a subject and a predicate.

2. The subject of a proposition is that of which something is affirmed.

3. The predicate is that which is affirmed of the subject.

Thus, in the proposition, Equus currit, The horse runs, ŕquus is the subject and currit is the predicate.

NOTZ. The word affirm, as here used, includes all the various significations of the verb, as expressed in the several moods.

4. Propositions are either principal or subordinate.

5. A principal proposition is one which makes complete sense by itself ; as,

Phocion fuit perpŕtuo pauper, quum ditissimŭs esse posset, Phocion was always poor, though he might have been very rich.

6. A subordinate proposition is one which, by means of a subordinate conjunction, is made to depend upon or limit some part of another proposition; as,

Phocion fuit perpetuo pauper, quum ditissimus esse posset, Phocion was always poor, though he might have been very rich.

7. Subordinate propositions are used either as substantives, adjectives, or adverbs, and are accordingly called substantive, adjective or adverbial propositions or clauses.

8. Substantive clauses are connected with the propositions on which they depend by means of the final conjunctions ut, ne, quo, quin, etc., sometimes by quod, and, in clauses containing an indirect question, by interrogative pronouns, adjectives, adverbs and conjunctions. See §§ 262 and 265.

REMARK. A dependent substantive clause often takes the form of the accusative with the infinitive, and in that case has no connective; as, Gaudeo te valere.

9. Adjective clauses are connected by means of relatives, both pronouns and pronominal adjectives; as, qui, quâlis, quantus, etc. Adverbial clauses are connected either by relative adverbs of place and time, (§ 191, R. 1, (b.)), or by temporal, conditional, concessive, comparative, and sometimes by causal conjunctions.

10. A sentence consisting of one proposition is called a simple sentence; as,

Cadunt fôlia, The leaves fall. Semirâmis Babylônem condidit.

11. A sentence consisting of a principal and one or more subordinate propositions is called a complex sentence; as,

Qui fit, ut nemo contentus vivat? How happens it, that no one lives content?
Quis ego sim, me rogitas, You ask me, who I am.

12. A sentence consisting of two or more principal propositions, either alone or in connection with one or more subordinate propositions, is called a compound sentence; as,

Spirant venti et cadunt fôlia, The winds blow, and the leaves fall.

13. The propositions composing a complex or a compound sentence are called its members or clauses; the principal proposition is called the leading clause, its subject, the leading subject, and its verb, the leading verb.

SUBJECT.

§ 202. 1. The subject also is either simple, complex, or compound.

2. The simple subject, which is also called the grammatical subject, is either a noun or some word standing for a noun; as,

Aves volant, Birds fly. Tu legis, Thou readest. A est vâcâlis, A is a vowel. Mentiri est turpe, To lie is base.

3. The complex subject, called also the logical subject, consists of the simple subject with its modifications; as,

Conscientia bene actæ vitæ est jucundissima, The consciousness of a well spent life is very pleasant. Here conscientia is the grammatical, and conscientia bene actæ vitæ the complex, subject.

4. The compound subject consists of two or more simple or complex subjects to which a single predicate belongs; as,

Lūna et stellæ fulgēbant, The moon and stars were shining. Grammaticæ mūsicæ iunctæ fuerant, Grammar and music were united. Semper hōnos meque tuum laudesque mōnēbant.

REMARK. Words are said to modify or limit other words, when they serve to explain, describe, define, enlarge, restrict, or otherwise qualify their meaning.

5. Every sentence must contain a subject and a predicate, called its principal or essential parts: any sentence may also receive additions to these, called its subordinate parts.

Complex or Modified Subject.

6. The complex subject is formed by adding other words to the simple subject. All additions to the subject, like the subject itself, are either simple, complex, or compound.

I. Simple additions. The subject may be modified by adding:—

1. A single word:—

(1.) A noun in the same case; as,

Nos consules dēstimus, We consuls are remiss. Mācius augur multa narrāvit, Mucius the augur related many things.

(2.) A noun or pronoun in an oblique case, modifying or limiting the subject; as,

Amor multītūdinis commōvetur, The love of the multitude is excited. Cura mei, Care for me. Viribus usus, Need of strength.

(3.) An adjective, adjective pronoun, or participle; as,

Fūgit invidia ætas, Envious time flies. Mea māter est bēnigna. Dūcit agnāna Penhēstia fūrens. Litēra scripta mōnet.

2. A phrase consisting of a preposition and its case; as,

Sōpor in grāmīne. Oppida sine præsidiō. Receptio ad te.

3. A dependent adjective clause introduced by qui, quālis, quantus, etc.; as,

Lēve fit, quod bēne fertur, ōnus, The burden, which is borne well, becomes light. Litēre, quas scripsisti, acceptæ sunt. U, quālis (ille) hābēri vellet, tālis esset. Tanta est inter eos, quanta maxima esse pōtest, mōrum distantia.

II. Complex additions. The subject may be modified:—

1. By a word to which other words are added.

(1.) When the word to which other words are added is a noun or pronoun, it may be modified in any of the ways above mentioned.

(2.) When it is an adjective it may be modified:—

(a.) By an adverb either simple or modified; as,

Erat expectatio valde magna. Præsidium non nimis firmum.

(b.) By a noun in an oblique case; as,

Major pietate, Superior in piety. Contentionis capillus, Fond of contention. Patri similis, Like his father. Nūlus membra. Iuēnes patre digni.

(c.) By an infinitive, a gerund, or a supine; as,

Inuētus vinci, Not accustomed to be conquered. Vēnandi stūdēus, Fond of hunting. Mirābile dictu, Wonderful to tell.

(d.) By a phrase consisting of a preposition and its case; as,

Rūdīs in rēpublicā, Unskilled in civil affairs. Ab equitātē firmus, Ceter in pugnam. Prōnus ad fidem.

(e.) By a subordinate clause; as,

Mēlior est certa pax, quam sperāta victōria, A certain peace is better than an expected victory. Dubius sum, quid faciā.

(3.) When it is a participle, it may be modified like a verb. See § 203.

2. By a phrase consisting of a preposition and its case to which other words are added; as,

De victōria Cēsāris fama perferitur, A report concerning Cæsar's victory is brought.

REMARK 1. As the case following the preposition is that of a noun or pronoun, it may be modified like the subject in any of the foregoing ways.

REM. 2. The preposition itself may be modified by an adverb, or by a noun or adjective in an oblique case; as, Longe ultra, Far beyond. Multo ante noctem, Long before night. Sexennio post Vēios captos, Six years after the capture of Veii.

3. By a subordinate clause, to whose subject or predicate other words are added.

REMARK. These additions may be of the same form as those added to the principal subject or predicate of the sentence.

III. Compound additions. The subject may be modified:—

1. By two or more nouns in the same case as the subject, connected by a coördinate conjunction; as, Consules, Brūtus et Collatinus, The consuls, Brutus and Collatinus.

2. By two or more oblique cases of a noun or pronoun connected coördinately; as, Vitæque necisque potestas. Periculorum et laborum incitamentum.

3. By two or more adjectives, adjective pronouns, or participles, connected coördinately; as,

Græve bellum perditurnumque. Animi teneri atque molles.

4. By two or more adjective clauses connected coördinately; as,

Ei qui facere, et qui facta aliorum scribere, multi laudantur. Sall.

5. By two or more of the preceding modifications connected coördinately; as,

Genus hominum agreste, sine legibus, sine imperio, liberum, atque solitum.

REM. 1. A modified grammatical subject, considered as one complex idea, may itself be modified; as, Omnia tua consilia, All thy counsels. Here omnia modifies, not consilia, but the complex idea expressed by tua consilia. So Triginta naves longa. Præpositus finitimus res.

REM. 2. An infinitive, with the words connected with it, may be the logical subject of a proposition ; as, Virtus est vitium fugere, To shun vice is a virtue.

REM. 3. A clause, or any member consisting of two or more clauses, may be the logical subject of a proposition ; as,

E celo descendit 'Noce te ipsum.' Equum est, ut hoc facias.

REM. 4. The noun or pronoun which is the subject of a proposition is put in the nominative, when the verb of the predicate is a finite verb ; but when the verb is in the infinitive, the subject is put in the accusative.

NOTE 1. A verb in any mood, except the infinitive, is called a finite verb.

NOTE 2. In the following pages, when the term subject or predicate is used alone, the grammatical subject or predicate is intended.

PREDICATE.

§ 203. 1. The predicate, like the subject, is either simple, complex, or compound.

2. The simple predicate, which is also called the grammatical predicate, is either a single finite verb, or the copula sum with a noun, adjective, and rarely with an adverb ; as,

Sol lucet, The sun shines. Multa animalia rēpunt, Many animals creep. Brevis est voluptas, Pleasure is brief. Eurōpa est pēninsula, Europe is a pēninsula. Rectissime sunt apud te omnia.

3. The complex predicate, called also the logical predicate, consists of the simple predicate with its modifications ; as,

Scipio fudit Annibālis cōpias, Scipio routed the forces of Hannibal. Here fudit is the grammatical, and fudit Annibālis cōpias the logical predicate.—So, Rōmulus Rōmānæ conditor urbis fuit.

4. The compound predicate consists of two or more simple or complex predicates belonging to the same subject ; as,

Prōbitas laudātur et alget, Honesty is praised and neglected. Lēti vis rāpuit, rāpietque gentes. Lucius Catilina fuit magnā vi et animi et corpōris, sed ingenio malo pravōque.

Complex or Modified Predicate.

5. The complex predicate is formed by adding other words to the simple predicate. All additions to the predicate, like the predicate itself, are either simple, complex, or compound.

I. Simple additions. The predicate may be modified by adding:—

1. A single word ;—

(1.) A noun or adjective in the same case as the subject. This occurs after certain neuter verbs and passive verbs of naming, calling, etc. (See § 210, R. 3.) ; as, Servus fit libertinus, The slave becomes a freedman. Servius Tullius rex declaratus. Aristides justus est appellatus. Incēdo regina.

(2.) A noun or pronoun in an oblique case ; as,

Spe vivimus, We live by hope. Deus regit mundum, God rules the world.

(3.) An adverb either simple or modified; as,
Sæpe venit. He came often. Festina lente. Hasten slowly. Litteras facile discuntur. Chrêmes nimis graviter cruciatur adolescentulum.

(4.) An infinitive mood; as,

Cupit discere. He desires to learn. Audeo dicere. Ver esse cuperat.

2. A phrase consisting of a preposition and its case; as, Venit ad urbem. He came to the city.

3. A dependent substantive or adverbial clause; as,

Vereor ne reprehendar. I fear that I shall be blamed. Zēnōnem, quum Athēnis esset, audiebam frequenter. Fac cogites.

II. Complex additions. The predicate may be modified:—

1. By a word to which other words are added.

REMARK. These words are the same as in the corresponding cases of complex additions to the subject. See § 202, II.

2. By a phrase consisting of a preposition and its case, to which other words are added. See complex additions to the subject, § 202.

3. By a subordinate clause, to whose subject or predicate other words are added. See complex subject, § 202, II, 3.

REM. 2. Each of the words constituting a proposition may be modified by two or more additions not dependent on, nor connected with each other, and consisting either of single words, phrases, or dependent clauses; as, Agamemnonis belli gloria. Pāternum odium erga Rōmānos. Mens sibi conscia recti. Mea maxime interest, te cālere. Ago tibi grātias. Meipsum Inertiae condemno. Eos hoc mōneo. In quo te accūso. Mōnet eum, ut suspiciōnes vitet.

III. Compound additions. 1. The predicate may be modified by two or more words, phrases, or clauses, joined together by a coordinate conjunction. See Compound additions to the subject, § 202, III.

2. The leading verb is usually either in the indicative or imperative mood, but sometimes in the subjunctive or the historical infinitive.

3. The members of a compound sentence are connected by coordinate conjunctions; those of a complex sentence by some relative word, or by a subordinate conjunction.

4. Instead of a dependent clause connected by a conjunction, a noun and participle, or two nouns, sometimes stand as an abridged proposition; as,

Bello confecto discessit, i. e. quum bellum confectum esset, discessit, The war being finished, or when the war was finished, he departed. Nil desperandum, Teucro dūce.

5. An infinitive may be modified like the verb of a predicate.

6. Agreement is the correspondence of one word with another in gender, number, case, or person.

7. A word is said to govern another, when it requires it to be put in a certain case or mood.

8. A word is said to depend on another, when its case, gender, number, mood, tense, or person, is determined by that word.

9. A word is said to follow another, when it depends upon it in construction, whatever may be its position in the sentence.

APPOSITION.

§ 204. A noun, annexed to another noun or to a pronoun, and denoting the same person or thing, is put in the same case; as,

Urbs Rōma, The city Rome. Nos consules, We consuls. So Apud Herodotum, patrem historiæ, sunt innumerabiles fabulæ, In Herodotus, the father of history, etc. Cic. Lapides silices, flint stones. Liv. Ante me consulem, Before I was consul. Fons cui nomen Arethūsa est. Cic.

REMARK 1. (a.) A noun, thus annexed to another, is said to be in apposition to it. It is generally added for the sake of explanation, identification, or description; sometimes it denotes character or purpose; as, Ejus fugæ comitem me adiunxi, I added myself, as a companion of his flight; and sometimes the time, cause, reason, etc., of an action; as, Alexander puer, Alexander when a boy. Cato sēnex scribere historiā instituit. Suet.

(b.) A noun in apposition, like an adjective used as an epithet, (§ 205, N. 2.) assumes the attribute denoted by it as belonging to the noun which it limits, while the predicate-nominative affirms it. Hence both nouns belong to the same part of the sentence, whether subject or predicate. In cases of apposition, there seems to be an ellipsis of the ancient participle ens, being; qui est, who is; qui vocatur, who is called; or the like.

REM. 2. If the annexed noun has a form of the same gender as the other noun, it takes that form; as, Usus magister egregius. Plin. Philosophia magistra vitæ. Cic. If the annexed noun is of the common gender, the adjective qualifying it takes the gender of the preceding noun; as, Laurus fidiissima custos.

REM. 3. The annexed noun sometimes differs from the other in gender or in number; as, Duo fulmina belli, Scipiadas, cladem Libyæ. Virg. Milyæne, urbs nobilis. Cic. Tulliola, deliciæ nostræ. Id.;—and sometimes in both; as, Nate, meæ vires. Virg. Nos, animæ viles, inhumata infelæque turba. Id.

REM. 4. The substantive pronoun is sometimes omitted before the word in apposition to it; as, Consul dixi, scil. ego; (1) the consul said. And instead of the substantive pronoun, a possessive adjective pronoun is sometimes used; as, Tua domus, talis viri. Cic. See § 211, R. 3, (b.)

REM. 5. A noun may be in apposition to two or more nouns, and, in such case, is usually put in the plural; as, M. Antonius, C. Cassius, tribuni plēbis, M. Antonius, C. Cassius, tribunes of the people. Cæs. Publius et Servius Sullæ, Servii filii. Sall. Tib. et Gaius Gracchi. Cic. Orationes L. et C. Aureliorum Orestarum. Id. But sometimes in the singular; as, Cn. et L. Domitius. Cic.

(1.) So when the nouns are connected by cum, the annexed noun taking the case of the former; as, Dicaarchum vëro cum Aristozæno, doctos sâne homines, omittamus. Cic.

(2.) If the nouns are proper names of different genders, a masculine noun is annexed rather than a feminine, when both forms exist; as, Ad Ptolemæum Cleopatramque rēges legati missi sunt. Liv.

REM. 6. The annexed noun is sometimes in the genitive; as, Urbem Patavī locavit, The city of Patavium. Virg. Plurimus Eridāni amnis. Id. Arborem fici numquam vidērat. Cic. In oppido Antiochiæ. Id. Rupili et Persi par. Hor.

REM. 7. The name of a town in the genitive occurs with an ablative in apposition to it; as, Corinθi Achaia urbe; At Corinth, a city of Achaia. Tac. Antiochia, celebri urbe. Cic. See § 221, Note, and § 254, Rem. 8.

REM. 8. (a.) A proper name, after nomen or cognomen, with a verb followed by a dative, is put in apposition either to nomen, etc., or to the dative, the latter by a species of attraction; as, Fons, cui nomen Arethūsa est. Cic. Stirps virilis, cui Ascanium parentes dixerē nomen. Liv. Nomen Arctūro est mihi, I have the name Arcturus. Plaut. Cui nunc cognōmen Iūlo additur. Virg. Cui Egerio inditum nōmen. Liv.—(b.) The name may also be put in the genitive; as, Nōmen Mercūrii est mihi. Plaut. Q. Metellus, cui Macedonici nōmen inditum erat. Vell. Cf. R. 6.—(c.) In Illa atas, cui fecimus Aurea nōmen, Ov. Met. 15, 96, Aurea is used as an indeclinable noun, instead of Auream (scil. atātem); or Aureæ, dat. (scil. atātī).

REM. 9. A clause may supply the place of one of the nouns; as, Cogitet oratōrem institui—rem arduam, Let him reflect that an orator is training—a difficult thing. Quint.—So also a neuter adjective used substantively; as, Triste lūpus stabiliis, The wolf, a sad thing to the folds. Virg. Vārium et mutabile semper femina. Id.

REM. 10. Sometimes the former noun denotes a whole, and its parts are expressed by nouns in apposition to it; as, Onerariæ, pars maxima ad Ægimūrum, —aliæ adversus urbem ipsam delatæ sunt, The ships of burden were carried, the greatest part, to Ægimūrus,—others opposite to the city itself. Liv. Pictōres et poëtæ suum quisque opus a vulgo considerāri vult. Cic. In the construction of the ablative absolute, quisque remains in the nominative, though the word to which it is in apposition is in the ablative; as, Multis sibi quisque imperium petentibus. Sall. J. 18. So also, in Liv. 28, 29, quisque remains in the nominative although the word to which it is in apposition is in the accusative with the infinitive.

To this rule may be subjoined that which relates to the agreement of interrogative and responsive words.

REM. 11. The principal noun or pronoun in the answer to a question, must be in the same case as the corresponding interrogative word; as, Quis hērus est tibi? Amphitruo, scil. est. Who is your master? Amphitruo (is.) Plaut. Quid quæris? Librum, scil. quæro. What are you looking for? A book. Quotā hōra venisti? Sextā. At what hour did you come? At the sixth.

NOTE 1. Instead of the genitive of a substantive pronoun, the corresponding possessive pronoun is often used, agreeing with its noun; as, Cūjus est liber? Meus, (not Mei.) (See § 211, Rem. 8, (b.)) So cūjum for genitive cūjus? Cūjum pēcus? an Melibæi? Non; verum Ægonis. Virg.

NOTE 2. Sometimes the rules of syntax require the responsive to be in a different case from that of the interrogative; as, Quanti emisisti? Viginti minis. Damnātusne es furti? Imo alio crimine. See §§ 214, R. 1, and 217, R. 2.

ADJECTIVES.

§ 205. Adjectives, adjective pronouns, and participles, agree with their nouns, in gender, number, and case; as,

Bonus vir, A good man.

Benigna māter, A kind mother.

Triste bellum, A sad war.

Spe amissā, Hope being lost.

Bonos viros, Good men.

Vanæ lēges, Useless laws.

Minacia verba, Threatening words.

Hæc res, This thing.

So, Mea māter est benigna.

Hæc lēges vānæ sunt.

NOTE 1. Adjectives, according to their meaning, (§ 104), are divided into two classes—qualifying and limiting—the former denoting some property or quality of a noun; as, a wise man, lead is heavy; the latter defining or restricting its meaning; as, this man, ten cities. To the former class belong such adjectives as denote a property or quality, including all participles and participial adjectives; to the latter, the adjective pronouns, pronominal adjectives, and numerals.

NOTE 2. An adjective, participle, or pronoun, may either be used as an epithet to modify a noun, or, with the copula sum, may constitute a predicate. In the former case the quality is assumed, in the latter it is asserted. In both cases, the rule for their agreement is, in general, the same. See § 210, R. 1.

NOTE 3. Any word or combination of words added to a noun to modify or limit its meaning is of the nature of an adjective.

NOTE 4. In the following remarks, the word adjective is to be considered as including participles, either alone or combined with the auxiliary sum, and also adjective pronouns, unless the contrary is intimated.

REMARK 1. An adjective agrees also with a substantive pronoun, taking its gender from that of the noun for which the pronoun stands; as, Ipse capellus æger ægō, scil. ægō, Melibæus; Virg. Fortunāte puer, tu nunc eris alter ab illo. Id. Ū se totum ei tradēret. Nep. O me miserum (spoken by a man), miseram me (spoken by a woman). So salvi sumus, salvæ sumus, scil. nos, masculine or feminine.—In general propositions which include both sexes, the pronouns are considered masculine; as, Nos fruges consumere nati. Hor.

REM. 2. An adjective may belong to each of two or more nouns, and in such case is put in the plural. If the nouns are of the same gender, the adjective agrees with them in gender, as well as in number; as, Lupus et agnus siti compulsi, A wolf and a lamb, constrained by thirst. Phæd. Sicilia Sardinique amissæ. Liv.

When the nouns are of different genders,

(1.) If they denote living things, the adjective is masculine rather than feminine; as,

Pater mihi et mater mortui sunt, My father and mother are dead. Ter. So also uterque in the singular. Procumbit uterque, scil. Deucalion et Pyrrha. Ovid.

(2.) If they denote things without life, the adjective is generally neuter; as,

His genus, ætas, eloquentia præpe æqualia fuere, Their family, age, and eloquence, were nearly equal. Sall. Regna, impéria, nobilitates, honores, divitiæ in cæsu sita sunt. Cic. Huic bella, rapina, discordia civilis, grata fuere. Sall. Anima atque animus, quamvis integra recens in corpus eunt. Lucr.

NOTE. When nouns denoting things without life are of the same gender (either masculine or feminine), but of different numbers, the adjective is sometimes neuter; as, Cresco et vita et patrimonii partes, et urbs Barce concessa sunt. Just.; sometimes also when both nouns are in the singular number; as, Plerosque velocitas et regio hostibus ignara tutata sunt. Sall. Nox atque præda remorata sunt. Id.

(3.) If one of the nouns denotes an animate, and another an inanimate thing, the adjective is sometimes neuter, and sometimes takes the gender of that which has life; as,

Numida atque signa militaria obscurati sunt, The Numidians and the military standards were concealed. Sall. Romani regem regnumque Macedonia sua futura sciunt. Liv. Jane, fac æternos pacem pacisque ministros. Ovid.

EXC. to REM. 2. The adjective often agrees with the nearest noun, and is understood with the rest; as, Sociis et rege recepto, Our companions and king having been recovered. Virg. Agri omnes et maria. Cic. Cognitum est salutem, liberos, famam, fortunas esse carissimas. Cic.

NOTE. A noun in the singular, followed by an ablative with cum, has sometimes a plural adjective, the gender being the same as if the nouns were connected by et; as, Filiam cum filio accitos. Liv. Ilia cum Lauso de Nūmīdīe sātī. Ovid. Filiū Alexandri cum matrē in arcem custōdiendos mittit. Just.

REM. 3. (1.) An adjective qualifying a collective noun is often put in the plural, taking the gender of the individuals which the noun denotes; as,

Pars certāre parāti, A part, prepared to contend. Virg. Pars per agros dilapsi. nam quisque spem exsēquentes. Liv. Supplex turba erant sine iudice tūti. Ovid. This construction always occurs when the collective noun is the subject of a plural verb. See § 209, R. 11.

(2.) Sometimes, though rarely, an adjective in the singular takes the gender of the individuals; as, Pars arduus altis pulvērulentus equis fērit. Virg. Pars una dūcum—fractus morbo. Ovid.

(3.) Sometimes other nouns, which only in a figurative sense denote human beings, have by synēsis an adjective of a different gender from their own, referring to the words which they include; as, Lātium Ōpūdq̄ agro multātī, Latium and Capua were deprived of their land. Liv. Ōpita conjūrātōnis virgīs cēsī ac sēcūri percussī sunt. Id. Auxilia Irātī. Id. So after millia; as, Duo millia Tyriōrum, crētibz affixi. Curt. Cf. § 323, 3. (4.)

REM. 4. Two adjectives in the singular are sometimes joined to a plural noun; as, Māria Tyrrhēnum atq̄e Adriāticum, The Tuscan and Adriatic seas. Liv. Cum lēgiōnibz sēcundā et tertiā. Liv. Circa portas Collināz Esquillināzque. Id. But sometimes the noun is in the singular; as, Inter Esquiliūm Ōdintināzque portam. Id. Lēgio Martia et quarta. In comic writers, an adjective or participle in the singular is sometimes used with a plural pronoun; as, Nōbz prāsente. Plaut. Absente nōbz. Ter.

REM. 5. A participle which should regularly agree with the subject of a proposition, when placed after the noun of the predicate, (a) sometimes takes the gender and number of the latter; as, Non omnis error stultitia est dicenda, Not every error is to be called folly. Cic. Gens univērsa Vēnētī appellātī. Liv. (b.) Sometimes also it agrees with a noun following the subject and in apposition to it; as, Ōrīnthum, patres vestri, tōtius Grēciaz lūmen, extinctum esse voluerunt. Cic.; or (c) with the noun of a subordinate sentence; as, Illōrum urbem ut prōpugnācūlūm oppōsitū esse barbāris. Nep.

REM. 6. When the subject of an infinitive is omitted after a dative of the same signification, (§ 239, R. 1.) an adjective in the predicate, belonging to that subject, is sometimes put in the dative; as, Mihī negligentī esse non licuit, i. e. me negligentem esse mihi non licuit. Cic. Da mihī iusto sanctōq̄e cūlērī. Hor. A noun is sometimes expressed with the adjective; as, Vōbz necesse est fortibus esse vris. Liv. But the adjective often agrees with the omitted subject; as, Expēdit bonas esse vōbz, scil. vos. Ter. Sī citi Rōmāno licet esse Gādītānum. Cic.

REM. 7. (1.) An adjective is often used alone, especially in the plural, the noun, with which it agrees, being understood; as, Bōni sunt rārī, scil. hōmīnez, Good (men) are rare. Cēsar suos misit, scil. mīlites, Cēsar sent his (soldiers): Dextra, scil. manus, The right (hand). Impentur pinguis fērināz, scil. carnis. Virg. Hiberna, scil. castra. Altum, scil. mare. Quartāna, scil. febris. Immortāles, scil. Dī. Lucr. Amantium, scil. hōmīnum. Ter. Illum indignanti similem, similemque minanti aspīcēres, scil. hōmīnī. Virg. Tibi primas dēfēro, scil. partes. Cic. Respice prāteritū, scil. tempus, which is often omitted, as in ex quo, ex eo, and ex illo, scil. tempore. Cognōva ex meōrum omnium lītēris, scil. amicōrum. Cic. So patrilial adjectives; as, Missi ad Parthum Armēniumque lēgātī, scil. rēgem. In Tuscūlāno, scil. prādiō.

NOTE 1. The noun to be supplied with masculine adjectives is commonly hominēs, but when they are possessives, it is oftener amici, militēs, cives, or præpinqui.

NOTE 2. The noun to be supplied is often contained in a preceding clause.

(2.) An adjective in the neuter gender, without a noun, is often used substantively, where, in English, the word thing or things is to be supplied; as,

Bonum, a good thing; malum, a bad thing, or, an evil. So honestum, vetrum, turpe; and in the plural, bōna, māla, turpia, lōvia, calestia, etc. Labor omnia vincit, Labor overcomes all things. Virg.

NOTE 1. The Latins generally preferred adding res to an adjective, to using its neuter as a substantive. But sometimes, when res is used, an adjective or pronoun referring to it is put in the neuter instead of the feminine; as, Eārum rerum utrumque. Cic. Hūmānārum rerum fortūna plerūque regit. Sall. Illud te rōgo, sumptui ne parcas ullā in re, quod ad vālitādinem opus sit. Cic. Omnium rerum mors est extrēmum. Cic.

NOTE 2. Instead of thing or things, other words may sometimes be supplied, as the sense requires. With a preposition, neuter adjectives form adverbial phrases; as, A primo, At first. Plaut. Per mutua, Mutually. Virg. In primis, In the first place. Ad hoc, or Ad hæc, Moreover, besides.

(3.) Adjectives used substantively often have other adjectives agreeing with them; as, Alia omnia, All other (things.) Plin. Iniquissimī mei, My greatest enemies. Familiaris meus. Cic. Iniquus noster. Id. Iusta fānebria. Liv. Jocis omnia plēna. scil. sunt. Virg.

REM. 8. (a.) Imperatives, infinitives, adverbs, clauses, and words considered merely as such, may be used substantively, and take a neuter adjective in the singular number; as, Suprēmum vāle dixit, He pronounced a last farewell. Ovid. Dulce et dēcorum est pro patriā mōri. Hor. Velle suum cuique est. Pers. Cras istud quando venit? Mart. J. Rēdibo actūtum. A. Id. actūtum dū est. Plaut. Excepto quod non simul esses, cētera latus. Hor. (b.) In the poets and later prose writers the adjective, as in Greek, is sometimes in the neuter plural; as, Ut Ænēs pēlāgo jacētur—Ita tibi. Virg.

REM. 9. (a.) Adjectives and adjective pronouns, instead of agreeing with their nouns, are sometimes put in the neuter gender, with a partitive signification, and their nouns in the genitive; as, Multum temporis, for multum tempus; much time. Id. rei, for ea res; that thing. So, plus elōquentia, the other form not being admissible with plus. (See § 110, (b.)) Neuter adjectives are used in like manner in the plural; as, Vāna rerum, for vānæ res. Hor. Plerūque hūmānārum rerum. Sall. Cf. § 212, R. 3, N. 4. But in some such examples, the adjective seems to be used substantively, according to Rem. 7, (2); as, Acūta belli. Hor. Tellāris operta. Virg. Summa pectōris.

NOTE. The adjectives thus used partitively in the singular, for the most part, signify quantity. See § 212, Rem. 3, Note 1.

REM. 10. A neuter adjective is sometimes used adverbially in the nominative or accusative, both singular and plural; as, Dulce ridentem Lālgem amābo, dulce loquentem. Hor. Magnum stridens. Virg. Arma horrendum sonuere. Id. Multi deos cēntrātī sunt. Cic. Hōlie aut summum cras. Id. See § 192, II. 4, (b.)

REM. 11. (a.) A noun is sometimes used as an adjective; as, Nemo miles Rōmānus, No Roman soldier. Liv. Nemo fere adōlescens. Cic. Vir nemo bonus. Id. Cf. § 207, R. 31, (c.) Tibērim accōlis flūviis orbātum. Tac. Incōla turba. Ovid. The poets use in this manner the Greek patronymics in as and is; as, Pēlias hasta. Ovid. Laurus Parnāsia. Id. Ursa Libystis. Virg. Cf. also § 129, 8.

(b.) An adverb is also sometimes used as an adjective; as, Nēque enim ignāri sūmus ante mālōrum; i. e. antiquōrum or præteritōrum. Virg. Nunc hōminum mōres. Plaut.

REM. 12. (a.) An adjective or adjective pronoun, used partitively, stands alone, and commonly takes the gender of the genitive plural, which depends upon it; but when it is preceded by a noun of a different gender, to which it refers, it usually takes that gender, but sometimes that of the genitive; as, Elephanto belluū nullā est prudētiō, No beast is wiser than the elephant. Cic. Indus, qui est omnium flūminum maximus. Cic. Vēlocissimam omnium animalium est delphinus. Plin. See § 212, Rem. 2.—(b.) So also with de, ex, in, apud, inter, etc., with the ablative or accusative instead of the partitive genitive. See § 212, R. 2, N. 4.

(c.) When a collective noun follows in the genitive singular, (§ 212, R. 2.) the adjective takes the gender of the individuals which compose it; as, Vir fortissimus nostræ civitatis, The bravest man of our state. Cic. Maximus stirpis. Liv.

REM. 13. (a.) When a possessive pronoun or adjective is used instead of the genitive of its primitive or of its corresponding noun (see § 211, R. 3, (b.) and (c.) and R. 4), an adjective agreeing with that genitive is sometimes joined with such possessive; as, Solius meum peccātum corrigi non potest, The fault of me alone cannot be corrected. Cic. Noster duōrum ērentus. Liv. Tuum ipsius studiū. Cic. Pugna Rōmāna stabilitis suo pondere incumbētium in hostem. Liv.

(b.) Sometimes a noun in the genitive is expressed, in apposition to the substantive pronoun for which the possessive stands; as, Pectus tuum, hominis simplicis. Cic.

REM. 14. An adjective, properly belonging to the genitive, is sometimes made to agree with the noun on which the genitive depends, and vice versa; as, Edificatiōnis tuæ consiliū for tuum, Your design of building. Cic. Accusantes violātī hospitii fœdus, for violātum. Liv. Ad maiōra initia rerum dūcentibus fatis, for maiōrum. Id. Iis nominibus civitatum, quibus ex civitatibus, etc., for eārum civitatum. Cæs.

REM. 15. (a.) An adjective agreeing with a noun is sometimes used, instead of an adverb qualifying a verb, especially in poetry; as, Ecce venit Telamū propērus, Lo, Telamon comes in haste. Ovid. Læti pacem agitabāmus, for late. h. page Sall. Ænēas se matutinus agebat, for mane. Virg. Nec lūpus grēgibus nocturnus ambūlat, i. e. by night. Id.

(b.) So nullus is used for non; as, Mēmni tāmetsi nullus mōneas, Though you do not suggest it. Ter. Sextus ab armis nullus discēdit. Cic. Prior, primus, princeps, propior, proximus, solus, unus, ultimus, multus, totus, and some others, are used instead of their neuters, adverbially; as, Priori Rēmo augūrium vēnisse fertur. Liv. Hispania postrema omnium provinciūm perdomita est. Liv. Scævola solos novem menses Asiæ præfuit, Only nine months. Cic. Unum hoc dico, This only I say. Id. This is sometimes done, for want of an adverb of appropriate meaning; as, Pronus cecidit. Ovid. Frequentes convenerant. Sall.

(c.) In such expressions, tu, in the nominative, sometimes takes an adjective in the vocative, and vice versa; as, Sic venias hodiernæ. Tibull. Salve, primus omnium parens patriæ appellāte. Plin.

REM. 16. (a.) A noun is often qualified by two or more adjectives; and sometimes the complex idea, formed by a noun with one or more adjectives, is itself qualified by other adjectives, which agree in gender, etc. with the noun.

(b.) When several adjectives, each independently of the other, qualify a noun, if they precede it, they are almost always connected by one or more conjunctions; as, Multā et variā et copiosā oratiōne. Cic. If they follow it, the conjunction is sometimes expressed, and sometimes omitted; as, Vir altus et excellens. Cic. Actio, varia, vehemens, plena veritatis. Id.

(c.) But when one of the adjectives qualifies the noun, and another the complex idea formed by the first with the noun, the conjunction is always omitted; as, Periculosissimum civile bellum, A most dangerous civil war. Cic. Mālam domesticam disciplinam. Id. So with three or more adjectives; Externos multos clāros viros nominārem. Cic. Cf. § 202, III., R. 1.

REM. 17. The first part, last part, middle part, etc., of any place or time are generally expressed in Latin by the adjectives primus, mēdius, ultimus, extrēmus, intimus, infimus, imus, summus, suprēmus, rēliquus, and cētera; as, Mēdia nox, The middle of the night. Summa arbor, The top of a tree. Suprēmus montes, The summits of the mountains. But these adjectives frequently occur without this signification; as, Ab extrēmo complexu, From the last embrace. Cic. Infimo loco nātus, Of the lowest rank. Id.

REM. 18. The participle of the compound tenses of verbs, used impersonally in the passive voice, is neuter; as, Ventum est. Cic. Itum est in viscēra terræ. Ovid. Scribendum est mihi. See § 184, 2 and 3.

RELATIVES.

§ 206. REM. 19. (a.) Relatives agree with their antecedents in gender, number, and person, but their case depends on the construction of the clause to which they belong; as,

Puer qui lēgit, The boy who reads. Edificium quod extruxit, The house which he built. Litteræ quas dedit, The letter which I gave. Non sum quālis eram, I am not such as I was. Hor. So Deus cūjus mōnere vivimus, cui nullus est similis, quem colimus, a quo facta sunt omnia, est æternus. Addictus Herminippo, et ab hoc ductus est. Aquilo, quantus frangit ilices. Hor.

NOTE 1. This rule includes all adjectives and adjective pronouns which relate to a noun in a preceding clause. Its more common application, however, is to the construction of the demonstrative pronouns and the relative qui.

NOTE 2. When a pronoun refers to the mere words of a sentence, it is said to be used logically. Qui and is are so used, and sometimes also hic and ille.

(b.) The relative may be considered as placed between two cases of the same noun, either expressed or understood, with the former of which it agrees in gender, number, and person, and with the latter in gender, number, and case.

(1.) Sometimes both nouns are expressed; as,

Erant omnino duo itinēra, quibus itinēribus dōmo extrē possent, There were only two routes, by which routes they could leave home. Cæs. Crūdēlissimē bello, quāle bellum nulla unquam barbāria gessit. Cic. But it is most frequent with the word dies; as, Fōre in armis certo die, qui dies futūrus erat, etc. Cic. The repetition of the substantive is necessary, when, for any reason, it becomes doubtful to which of two or more preceding substantives the relative refers.

(2.) Usually the antecedent noun only is expressed; as, Animum rēge, qui, nisi pāret, impērat, Govern your passions, which rule unless they obey. Hor. Tantæ multitudinis, quantam cāpi urbs nostra, concursus est ad me factus. Cic. Quot cāpitum vivunt, totidem studiōrum millia. Hor.

(3.) Sometimes the latter noun only is expressed, especially when the relative clause, as is frequently the case, precedes that of the antecedent; as,

Quibus de rēbus ad me scripsisti, cōram vidēbimus; scil. de rēbus, In regard to the things of which you wrote to me, we will consider when we meet. Cic. In quem primum egressi sunt locum, Trōja vocātur; scil. locus. Liv. Quantū vi expēlunt, tantū defendunt. Quālesque visus eram vidēse viros, ex ordinē tales aspicio. Ovid.

(a.) The place of the antecedent is sometimes supplied by a demonstrative pronoun; as, Ad quas res aptissimè erimus, in iis potissimum elaborabimus. Cic. But the demonstrative is often omitted when its case is the same as that of the relative, and not unfrequently, also, when the cases are different. When the relative clause precedes that of the antecedent, is is expressed only for the sake of emphasis. Hence we find such sentences as, Maximè ornàmentum àmicitiæ tollit, qui ex eà tollit vèrècundiam. Cic. Terra quod accèpit, numquam sine usurà reddidit. Id.—The demonstrative adjectives and adverbs are in like manner often omitted before their corresponding relatives; talis before qualis, tantus before quantus, inde before unde, ibi before ubi, etc.

(b.) Sometimes the latter noun only is expressed, even when the relative clause does not precede; as, Quis non malàrum quas amor cùras habet, hæc inter obliviscitur? Hor.

(4.) Sometimes neither noun is expressed; this happens especially when the antecedent is signedly left indefinite, or when it is a substantive pronoun; as,

Qui bene lâtuit, bene vixit, scil. homo, (He) who has well escaped notice, has lived well. Ovid. Sunt quos curriculo pulvèrem Olympicum colligisse juvat, scil. hómīnes, There are whom it delights, i. e. Some delight. Hor. Non habeo quod te accūsem, scil. id propter quod. Cic. Non solum sapiens vidèris, qui hinc absis, sed etiam beatus, scil. tu. Cic.

(5.) The relative is sometimes either entirely omitted; as, Urbs antiqua fuit; Tyrus tenuere colóni, scil. quam or eam, There was an ancient city (which) Tyrian colonists possessed, Virg.; or, if once expressed, is afterwards omitted, even when, if supplied, its case would be different; as, Bocchus cum pèlâtibus, quos filius ejus adduxerat, nèque in priore pugná adfuèrant, Rómānos invadunt, for et qui non in priore, etc. Sall.

(6.) (a.) The relative sometimes takes the case of the antecedent, instead of its own proper case; as, Quam scribas et aliquid agas eòrum, quòrum consuesti, for quæ. Cic. Raptim quibus quisque potèrat elâtis, exhibant, for iis, quæ quisque efferre potèrat, elâtis. Liv.

(b.) The antecedent likewise sometimes takes the case of the relative, the substantive either preceding or following the pronoun; as, Urbem quam slatio vestra est, for urbs. Virg. Eunūchum quem dedisti nobis, quas turbas dedit! for Eunūchus. Ter. Naucratem quem convénire volui, in navi non erat. Plaut. Atque alii, quòrum cômædia prisca viròrum est, for atque alii viri, quòrum est. Hor. Illi, scripta quibus cômædia prisca viris est, for illi viri, quibus. Id. Quos pueros miseram, epistolum mihi attulerunt. Cic.

These constructions are said to occur by attraction.

(7.) (a.) An adjective, which properly belongs to the antecedent, is sometimes placed in the relative clause, and agrees with the relative; as, Inter jocos, quos inconditos jaciunt, for jocos inconditos, quos, etc. Amidst the rude jests which they utter. Liv. Verbis, quæ magna volant. Virg. Calore, quem multum habet. Cic.

(b.) This is the common position of the adjective, when it is a numeral, a comparative, or a superlative; as, Nocte quam in terris ultimam egit, The last night which he spent upon earth. Esculàpius, qui primus vulnus obligavisse dicitur. Cic. Constiliis pàre, quæ nunc pulcherrima Nautes dat sèniòr, Listen to the excellent advice, which, etc. Virg. Some instances occur in which an adjective belonging to the relative clause, is placed in that of the antecedent; as, Quum venissent ad vada Volaterràna, quæ nòminantur, Which are called Volaterran. Cic.

(8.) When to the relative or demonstrative is joined a noun explanatory of its antecedent, but of a different gender or number, the relative or demonstrative usually agrees with that noun; as,

Santonēs non longe a Tolosātium finibus adsunt, quæ civitas est in provinciâ, The Santones are not far distant from the borders of the Tolosates, which state is in the province. Cæs. Ante comitia, quod tempus hanc longe aberrat. 36 Sall. Rômæ fânũ Diânæ pópuli Lâtini cum pópulo Rômano fêcêrunt: ea erat confessio cûpũ rêrum Rômam esse; i. e. that thing or that act. Liv. Si omnia faciendâ sunt, quæ amîci vêlunt, non amicitia tâles, sed conjurâtiões putandæ sunt; i. e. such things or such connections. Cic. So, Ista quidẽm vis, Surely this is force. Ea ipsa causa bellũ fuit, for id ipsum. Hither also may be referred such explanatory sentences as, Qui meus amor in te est, Such is my love for you. Cic.

(9.) If the relative refers to one of two nouns, denoting the same object, but of different genders, it agrees with either; as, Flûmen est Arar quod in Rhodânũ influit. Cæs. Ad flûmen Oxum perventum est, qui turbidus semper est. Curt.

(10.) When, in a relative clause containing the verb sum or a verb of naming, esteeming, etc., a predicate-noun occurs of a different gender from the antecedent, the relative commonly agrees with the latter; but when the preceding noun is to be explained and distinguished from another, the relative agrees with the former; as,

Nâturæ vultus quem dicere Chaos, The appearance of nature which they called chaos. Ovid. Gênus hómĩnum quod Hêlôtēs vocâtur. Nep. Animal, quem vocâmus hómĩnem, The animal whom we call man. Cic. Locus in carcere, quod Tullianũ appellâtur. Sall. Pêcuniârũm acquisitiõ; eos esse belli cæcis nervos dictâns Mucianus. Tac.

(11.) The relative sometimes agrees with a noun, either equivalent in sense to the antecedent, or only implied in the preceding clause; as,

*Abundantia eârũm rêrum, quæ mortâles primâ pũtant, An abundance of those things, which mortals esteem most important. Sall. Cf. § 205, R. 7, (2.) N. 1. But sometimes when a neuter adjective used substantively has preceded, res with a relative follows; as, *Permulta sunt, quæ dici possunt, quæ re intelligâtur. Cic. Fâtâle monstrum, quæ, etc., scil. Cleopâtra. Hor. Cf. § 323, 3, (4.)

(a.) A relative or demonstrative pronoun, referring to a collective noun, or to a noun which only in a figurative sense denotes a human being, sometimes takes the gender and number of the individuals which the noun implies; as, Equatũm, quos. Sall. Gênus, qui prêmuntur. Cic. Sênâtus—ii. Sall.

(b.) A pronoun in the plural often follows a noun in the singular, referring not only to the noun but to the class of persons or things to which it belongs; as, Dêmoçritũm omittâmus; nihil est enĩm apud istos, quod, etc. i. e. with Democritus and his followers. Cic. Dionysius negâvit se jure illo nigro quod cænas caput erat, delectâtum. Tum is, qui illa corêrat, etc. Id.

(12.) The antecedent is sometimes implied in a possessive pronoun; as, *Omnes laudâre fortũnas meas, qui nâtum iâli ingênio prædĩtum habêrem; scil. mei, All were extolling my fortune, who, etc. Ter. Id mea minime rêfert, qui sum nâtu mazimus. Id. Nostrum consiliũ laudandum est, qui nôlêrĩm, etc. Cic.; or in a possessive adjective; as, *Servili tũmultu, quos, etc. Cæs.

(13.) (a.) Sometimes the antecedent is a proposition; the relative then is commonly neuter; as, Postremo, quod difficillimũ inter mortâles, gloriâ invidiam vicisti, Finally, you have overcome envy with glory, which, among men, is most difficult. Sall. Equidẽm exspectâbam jam tuas litêras, idque cum multis. Cic.

(b.) In such instances, id is generally placed before the relative pronoun, referring to the idea in the antecedent clause; as, Sive, id quod constat, Plâtônĩ studiũs audiendũ fuit. Cic. Diem consũmi vôlebãt, id quod fêcêrunt. Id.

(c.) Sometimes is, referring to a clause, agrees with a noun following; as, Idem velle atque idem nolle, est dẽmũ firma amicitia est. Sall.

(14.) Quod, relating to a preceding statement, and serving the purpose of transition, is often placed at the beginning of a sentence after a period, where it may be translated by 'nay,' 'now,' or 'and.' It is thus used especially before et, etsi, and nam; as, Quodsi illinc inanis profugisses, tamen ista tua fuga nefaria iudicaretur, i. e. and even if you had fled without taking any thing with you, still, etc. Cic. Verr. 1, 14. Quodsi, 'if then,' is especially used in introducing something assumed as true, from which further inferences may be drawn. Sometimes also it is equivalent to 'although.' Quodnam signifies 'if then—not'; as, Quodnam ego meo adventu illius cōatus aliquantulum repressissem, tam multos, etc. Quodetsi is 'nay, even if'; as, Quodetsi ingeniis magnis præditi quidam dicendi copiam sine ratione consequuntur, ars tamen est dux certior.—Quod is found also before quum, ubi, quia, quoniam, nē and ut, where the conjunction alone would seem to be sufficient; as, Quod etiam illum, cuius impio facinore in hac miseria projectus sum, eodem hoc simulantem videam. Sall. It is so used even before a relative in Cic. Phil. 10, 4, fin.—Quod, in such examples, seems to be an accusative, with propter or ad understood.

(15.) (a.) A relative is always plural, when referring to two or more nouns in the singular. If the nouns are of different genders, the gender of the relative is determined by Rem. 2, page 185; as, Ninus et Semiramis, qui Babylona condiderant, Ninus and Semiramis, who had founded Babylon. Vell. Crebro fundi et tibicine, quæ sibi sumptuerat. Cic. Ex summâ lætitiâ atque lasciviâ, quæ diuturna quies pepererat. Sall. Naves et captivos quæ ad Chium capta erant. Liv.

(b.) If the antecedents are of different persons, the relative follows the first person rather than the second or third, and the second rather than the third; as, Tu et pater, qui in convivio eratis. Ego et tu, qui eramus. Cf. § 209, R. 12, (7.)

(16.) The relative adjectives quôt, quantus, quâlis, are construed like the relative qui. They have generally, in the antecedent clause, the corresponding demonstrative words, tôt, tantus, talis; but these are also often omitted. Frequently also the order of the clauses is reversed, so that the relative clause precedes the demonstrative.

(17.) Qui, at the beginning of a sentence, is often translated like a demonstrative; as, Quæ quum ita sint, Since these (things) are so. Cic.

(18.) The relative qui with sum and either a nominative or the ablative of quality, is used in explanatory clauses, instead of pro, 'in accordance with,' or 'according to'; thus, instead of Tu, pro tuâ prudentiâ, quid optimum factu sit, videbis. Cic., we may say, quæ tua est prudentia, or, quâ prudentiâ es. So, Velis tantummôdo, quæ tua virtus, expugnabis. Hor. Quâ prudentiâ es, nihil te fugiet. Cic.

(19.) A relative clause is sometimes used for the purpose of denoting by circumlocution the person of the agent in a definite but not permanent condition; as, li, qui audiunt, or qui adsunt, i. e. the hearers, the persons present. So, also, a relative clause is used for the English expression 'above mentioned'; as, Ex libris quos dixi or quos ante (supra) laudavi: and the English 'so called,' or 'what is called,' is expressed by quem, quam, quod vocant, or by qui, quæ, quod vocatur, dicitur, etc. as, Nec Hermas hos, quos vocant, imponi (Athens) licebat. Cic. Vestra, quæ dicitur, vita, mors est. Id.

(20.) Relative and demonstrative adverbs (see § 191, R. 1), are frequently used instead of relative and demonstrative pronouns with prepositions; as, Is, unde te audisse dicis, i. e. a quo. Cic. Divitiæ apud illos sunt, aut ubi illi volunt, i. e. apud quos. Sall. Huic ab adolescentiâ bella intestina, cades, raptina, discordia civis, grâta fuisse, Ibiq; juventutem exercui, i. e. in his, in these things. Sall.

(21.) With quam qui and the superlative after tam the verb of the relative clause is sometimes omitted; as, Tam mihi gratum id erit, quam quod gratissimum. Cic. Tam enim sum amicus reipublicæ, quam qui maxime. Id. Tam sum mitis, quam qui lenissimus. Id. So also with ut qui without tam; as, Te semper sic colam et tuebor, ut quem diligentissime. Id.

DEMONSTRATIVES.

§ 207. REM. 20. The oblique cases of the personal pronoun of the third person (him, her, etc.) are commonly expressed in prose by the oblique cases of is, ea, id. Hic and ille, however, being more emphatic, take the place of is, ea, id in lyric poetry, and occasionally in prose also, when particular emphasis is intended. The cases of ipse, ipsa, ipsum, also, are employed for this purpose, when the individuality of the person is to be distinctly expressed. In reflexive sentences, the oblique cases of the pronoun of the third person, are regularly supplied by sui, abî, se; and it is only when the person of the leading subject is to be referred to with particular emphasis, that ipse is used instead of sui.

REM. 21. The demonstrative pronouns, is and ille, are sometimes used, especially with quidem, where a corresponding word in English is unnecessary; as, Sapientia ætatum vetus id quidem in nostris, sed tamen, etc. Cic. O hominem semper illum quidem mihi optum, nunc vero etiam suavem. Id. Quem neque fides, neque iurandum, neque illum misericordia, repressit, Whom neither fidelity, nor an oath, nor pity, has restrained. Ter. Is when used for the sake of emphasis seems sometimes in English to be superfluous; as, Male se res habet, quum, quod virtute effici debet, id tentatur pecuniâ. Cic.

REM. 22. Sic, ita, id, hoc, illud, are often used redundantly as a preliminary announcement of a subsequent proposition, and are added to the verb on which this proposition depends; as, Sic a maioribus suis acciperant, tanta populi Romini esse beneficia, ut, etc. Cic. Te illud admoneo, ut quotidie meditare, resistendum esse iracundiæ. Id. Hoc tibi persuadeas velim, me nihil omisisse. I wish you to be persuaded of this—that I have omitted nothing. These pleonastic additions have generally no influence on the construction of propositions, but in a few instances they are followed by ut; as, De cuius dicendi copîa sic acceptimus, ut, etc. Cic. Ita enim defini, ut perturbatio sit, etc. Id. In the phrase hoc, illud, or id agere ut, the pronoun is established by custom and is necessary. See § 278, 1, (a.)

REM. 23. (a.) Hic 'this' refers to what is near to the speaker either in place or time, ille 'that' to what is more remote. Hence hic sometimes refers to the speaker himself, and hic homo is then the same as ego. On this account hic is sometimes called the demonstrative of the first person. When reference is made to two things previously mentioned, hic commonly refers to the latter, ille to the former, and the pronouns are arranged in the same order, as the objects to which they relate; as, Ignavia corpus hebetat, labor firmat; illa maturationem senectutem, hic longam adolescentiam reddit. Sloth enervates the body, labor strengthens it; the former produces premature old age, the latter protracted youth. Cels.

(b.) But the order is often reversed, so that hic refers to the object first mentioned, and ille to the one mentioned last; as, Sic deus et virgo est; hic spe celer, illa timore. Ovid. So when alter...alter, 'the one...the other,' refer to two things mentioned before, the previous order is sometimes observed and sometimes reversed; but wherever there is ambiguity the order is reversed, so that the first alter refers to the last object. Sometimes hic...hic are used instead of hic...ille. So ille...ille sometimes denote 'the one...the other.'

(c.) Hic and ille have the same relation to time present and past as nunc and tunc, see § 277; and hence whatever, in speaking of present time, is expressed by hic and its derivative adverbs, hic, hinc, huc, and adhuc, is expressed by ille and its derivatives, when it is spoken of as belonging to past time.

REM. 24. Ille, when not in opposition to hic, is often used to denote that which is of general notoriety; as, Magno illi Alexandro similimus. Very like Alexander the Great. Vell. Medea illa. The celebrated Medea. Cic. Hence ille is sometimes added to other pronouns, to refer to something discussed before; as, Ardebant visere, quis ille tot per annos opes nostras sperasset. Tac. Ille is sometimes translated this; as, Unum illud dico, This only I say. Cic. Ille sometimes marks a change of persons, and may then be translated 'the other'; as, Vercingetorix obvium Cæsari præficiatur. Ille (scil. Cæsar) oppidum Novodunum oppugnare instituit. Cæs.

REM. 25. Iste properly refers to the person addressed, and for this reason is called the demonstrative of the second person.—Ille refers to the person spoken of, and is hence called the demonstrative of the third person. Thus iste liber is thy book, but ille liber is the book of which we are speaking. Hence, in letters, hic and its derivatives are used of the writer; iste and its derivatives of the person addressed; ille, etc., of some other person or thing. See § 191, R. 1. (c.) Iste from its frequent forensic use, and its application to the opponent, often denotes contempt.

REM. 26. (a.) Is does not, like hic, ille, and iste, denote the place or order of the object to which it relates, but either refers without particular emphasis to something already mentioned or to something which is to be defined by the relative qui. Hic, is, or ille, may be used in this way before the relative, but only hic or is after it; as, Qui docet, is discit, or hic discit, but not ille discit, unless some individual is referred to.

(b.) Is before a relative or ut has sometimes the sense of tālis, such, denoting a class; as, Nēque enim tu is es, qui quid sis nescias, Nor are you such a person, as not to know what you are. Cic.; sometimes it has the force of idem; as, ros —is. Cic. Manil. 12.

(c.) If the noun to which is refers is to receive some additional predicate, we must use et is, atque is, isque, et is quidem, and with a negative nec is; as, Vincula vērō, et ea sempiterna, etc. Cic. Unde in dōmo, et ea quidem angusta, etc. Id. Adolescentes aliquot, nec ii tēni loco orti, etc. Liv. Sed is is used when the additional predicate is opposed to the preceding; as, Sēvritatem in sēvritate prōbo, sed eam, sicut alia, modicam. Cic. The neuter et id, or idque, serves to introduce an addition to the preceding proposition; as, Quamquam te, Marce fili, annum jam audientem Cratippum, idque Athēnis, etc.

(d.) Is is not expressed when it would be in the same oblique case as the preceding noun to which it refers; as, Pater amat liberos et tamen castigat. Multos illustrat fortuna, dum vexat.

(e.) When in English 'that' or 'those' is used instead of the repetition of the preceding substantive, is is never used in Latin, and ille only in later authors. In such cases the noun is commonly not repeated in Latin, and no pronoun is used in its place; as, Philippus hostium manus saepe vitavit, subrum effugere non valuit, those of his own subjects. Curt. Sometimes the substantive is repeated; as, Judicia civitatis cum iudiciis principis certant. Vell. Sometimes a possessive adjective is used instead of the genitive depending on the omitted substantive; as, Tērentii fabulas studiōse lēgo, Plautinis minus delector: and sometimes instead of the genitive or a possessive adjective the name of the person itself is put in the case which the verb governs; as, Si cum Lycurgo et Dracōne et Solōne nostras lēges conferre volueritis. Cic.—In Cicero hic and ille, when the preceding substantive is understood, retain their demonstrative signification, and therefore do not merely supply the place of the omitted substantive; as, Nullam enim virtus aliam mercedem desiderat, præter hanc, i. e. the one of which I am speaking. Cic.

REM. 27. (a.) Idem, as denoting a subject which stands in equal relations to two different predicates, often supplies the place of item or etiam, 'also', 'at the same time', or of tamen, 'yet', if the things are apparently inconsistent; as, Musici, qui erant quondam iudem poëtae, Musicians, who formerly were poets also. Cic. Euphrates et Tigris magno aquarum divortio iter percurrunt; iudem (and yet) paulatim in arcibus coeunt.

(b.) Et ipse, on the other hand, denotes that the same predicate belongs to two subjects. It is rendered by 'too' or 'also'; as, Antoninus Commodus nihil paternum habuit, nisi quod contra Germānos feliciter et ipse pugnāvit, for item or ipse quodque. Entr.—So, also, nec ipse is used in the sense of 'neither'; as, Primis repulsis Maharbal cum majore robore virorum missus nec ipse eruptionum cohortium sustinuit. Liv.

(c.) Idem is sometimes repeated in the sense of 'at once,' denoting the union of qualities which might be thought incompatible; as, Fuere quidam qui idem ornate fidem versute dicere. There have been some who could speak at once elegantly and artfully. Cic.

(d.) 'The same as' is variously expressed in Latin, by idem with qui, ac or atque, quam, quodsi, ut or cum; as, Verres idem est qui fuit semper, Verres is the same as he has always been. Cic. Vita est eadem ac fuit. Liv. Disputationem exponimus iisdem fere verbis ut actum est. Cic. Eandem constituit potestatem quam si, etc. Cic. Eodem loco res est, quasi ea pecunia legata non esset. Id. Hunc ego eodem mecum patre gentium, etc. So also poetically with the datives; as, Eodem illis optu' quille est. Lucr. Cf. § 222, R. 7.

IPSE, INTENSIVE OR ADJUNCTIVE.

REM. 28. (a.) Ipse, when used with a substantive pronoun taken reflexively, agrees either with such pronoun or with the subject of the proposition, according as either is emphatic; as, Agam per me ipse, I will do it myself. Cic. Non ego mecum; (i. e. ut illi me consuleretur); me ipse conolor. Cic. Accusando eum, a cibus crudelitatem cosmet ipsi armis vindicatis. Liv.—On. Pompeium omnibus, Lentulum mihi ipsi antepono. Cic. Fac ut te ipsum custodias. Id. Deforme est de se ipsum predicare. Id.—But Cicero often construes ipse as the subject, even where the emphasis belongs to the object; as, Quid est negotii continere eos, quibus praesit, si te ipse contineas?

(b.) When ipse is joined with a possessive pronoun used reflexively, it usually takes the case of the subject; as, Meam ipse legem negligo; not meam ipsius, according to § 211, R. 2, (a). So, Si ex scriptis cognoscat ipsi suis potuerunt. Cic. Eam fraudem vestra ipsi virtute vitastis. Liv. But the genitive is necessary when the possessive does not refer to the subject; as, Tua ipsius causa hoc feci. And it is sometimes found where the case of the subject should be used; as, Conjecturam de tuo ipsius studio cepis, instead of ipse.—(c.) Ipse is sometimes used as reflexive without sui; as, Omnes boni, quantum in ipsis fuit, Oculum occiderunt. Cic.

(d.) Ipse, with nouns denoting time or number, expresses exactness, and may be rendered, 'just,' 'precisely'; or 'very,' 'only'; as, Dyrrhachio sum profectus ipso illo die, quo lex est data de nobis, on the very day. Cic. Triginta dies erant ipsi, quam has dabam litteras, per quos nullas a vobis acciperam, just thirty days. Id. Et quicquam dubitabit—quam facile imperio atque exercitu sociis et rectigilia conseruaturus sit, qui ipso nomine ac rumore defenderis, by his very name, or, by his name only. Id.

GENERAL RELATIVES.

REM. 29. Quicumque, quisquis, and the other general relatives (see § 189, 5, R.), are, in classical prose, always connected with a verb, and form the protasis. Quicumque is commonly used as an adjective, and quisquis as a substantive; but the neuter quodcumque is used as a substantive with a following genitive; as, Quodcumque militum; and, on the other hand, quisquis is rarely an adjective; as, Quisquis erit vitæ color. Hor.; and even the neuter quidquid is used in the same manner; as, Quisquis honores timuli, quidquid solamen humandi est. Virg. Quicumque seems sometimes even in Cicero equivalent to omnis or quisvis; as, Que sanari poterunt, quacumque ratione sanabo, What can be cured, I will cure by every possible means. Cic. Yet possum is rather to be supplied;—'in whatever way I can.' But in later writers quicumque is frequently used in the absolute sense for quisvis or quilibet; as, Ciceronem quicumque eorum fortiter opposuerim. Quint. Qualiscumque and quantuscumque are likewise used in an absolute sense by ellipsis; as, Tu non concipies quanticumque ad libertatem pervenire? At any price, be it ever so high. Sen. So quisquis is occasionally used, not as a relative, but as an indefinite pronoun.—Siquis often seems to stand as a relative, like the Greek ὅστις for ὅστις, 'whoever'; but it always contains the idea of 'perhaps'; as, Nuda fere Alpium cacumina sunt, et si quid est pabuli, obruunt nives. Liv.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

REM. 30. (a.) Aliquis and quispiam are particular and affirmative, corresponding to the English some one; as, Hereditas est pecunia, qua morte alicujus ad quempiam pervenit jure. An inheritance is property which, at the death of some one, falls to some (other) one by law. Cic. Multis sine doctrinâ aliquid omnium generum et artium consequuntur. Id.

(b.) Aliquis is more emphatic than the indefinite pronoun quis. (See § 137, (3.)) Hence aliquis stands by itself, but quis is commonly connected with certain conjunctions or relative words, but these are sometimes separated from it by one or more words. Sometimes, however, quis is used without such conjunctions or relatives; as, Morbis aut egestas aut quid ejusmodi. Cic. Detrahere quid de aliquo. Id. Injuriâ cui facere. Id. So, Dixerit quis, Some one might say. But even after those conjunctions which usually require quis, aliquis is used when employed antithetically and of course emphatically; as, Timēbat Pompeius omnia, ne aliquid vos timērētis. Cic. In English the emphasis of aliquis is sometimes expressed by 'really'; as, Sensus moriendi, si aliquis esse potest, is ad exiguum tempus durat. Cic.—Quispiam, also, is sometimes used like quis after si, etc., and sometimes stands alone; as, Queret fortasse quispiam.

REM. 31. (a.) Quisquam, 'any one,' and ullus, 'any,' are universal. Like unquam and usquam they are used in propositions which involve a universal negative, or which express an interrogation with a negative force, or a condition (usually with si or quasi); also, after comparatives, after the adverb vix, and the preposition sine; as, Nēque ex castris Cātīlinæ quisquam omnium discesserat, Nor had any one departed from the camp of Catiline. Sall. Nec ullo casu potest contingere, ut ulla intermissio fiat officii. Cic. An quisquam potest sine perturbatione mentis irasci? Id. Tētrior hic tyrannus Syracusanis fuit, quam quisquam supēriorum. Id. Vix quidquam spei est. Sen. But after the dependent negative particles ne, nēve, and the negative interrogative particle num, quis and not quisquam is used.

(b.) But quisquam and ullus after si are often used not in a negative sense, but instead of aliquis or quis, serving only to increase the indefiniteness which would be implied in the latter pronouns; as, Aut enim nemo, quod quidem magis crēdo, aut, si quisquam, ille sapiens fuit, if any man. Cic. Hence, ultimately, even without si, where the indefiniteness is to be made emphatic, quisquam, ullus, unquam and usquam were used; as, Quamvis quisquam erit, qui se defendere audeat, vires. Cic. Belum maxime omnium memorabile, quæ unquam gesta sunt, scripturus sum. Tac.

(c.) Ullus is properly an adjective, but quisquam is commonly used without a noun, except it is a word denoting a person; as, Quisquam civi, To any citizen. Cujusquam oratoris eloquentiam. Hence quisquam corresponds to the substantive nemo and ullus to the adjective nullus. Nemo is often used with other substantives denoting male persons so as to become equivalent to the adjective nullus; as, nemo pīctor, nemo adolescens, and even homo nemo. Cic. Quisquam is sometimes used in a similar manner; as, quisquam homo, quisquam civis. On the other hand nullus and ullus are used as substantives instead of nemo and quisquam, especially the genitive nullius and the ablative nullo.

REM. 32. (a.) Alius, like ullus, though properly an adjective, is sometimes used like a pronoun. It is often repeated, or joined with an adverb derived from it, in the same proposition, which may be translated by two separate propositions, commencing respectively with 'one...another'; as, Aliud aliis videtur optimum, One thing seems best to one, another to another. Cic. Aliis aliunde periculum est, Danger threatens one from one source, another from another; or, Danger threatens different persons from different sources. Ter. Dionysium aliter cum aliis de nobis locutum audiebam. Cic.—Alter is used in the same manner when only two persons are spoken of, but there are no adverbs derived from it; as, Alter in alterum causam confertur, They accuse each other.

(b.) Alius, repeated in different propositions, is also translated 'one...another'; as, Aliud agitur, aliud simulatur, One thing is done, another pretended. Cic. Alter loquitur, alter scribit, like alter ac or atque, He speaks otherwise than he writes. So Aliud loquitur, aliud scribit.

(c.) Uterque, 'each of two,' is always used by Cicero in the singular number, when only two individuals are spoken of. Its plural, utrique, is used only when each of two parties consists of several individuals; as, Macedones—Tyrus, utrique. But in other good prose writers the plural utrique is occasionally used in speaking of only two; as, Utrique Dionysii. Nep. Cf. § 209, R. 11, (4.)

REM. 33. (a.) Quidam differs from aliquis by implying that a person or thing, though indefinitely described, is definitely known; as, Quidam de collegis nostris, A certain one of our colleagues. Cic. Scis me quodam tempore Medipontum venisse tecum. Id.

(b.) Quidam is sometimes used for some, as opposed to the whole, or to others; as, Excesserunt urbe quidam, alii mortem sibi consciverunt, Some departed from the city, others destroyed themselves. Liv. Hence it is used to soften an expression, where in English we say 'so to speak,' etc.; as, Milvo est quoddam bellum naturale cum corvo, A kind of natural warfare. Cic. Fuit enim illud quoddam cæcum tempus servitutis. Id. Elænim omnes artes quæ ad humanitatem pertinent, habent quoddam commune vinculum et quasi cognationem quædam inter se continentur. Id.—Tanquam is used for the same purpose, and also ut ita dicam.

REM. 34. Quivis and quilibet, 'any one,' and cuivisquisque, 'each,' are universal and absolute; as, Omnia sunt ejusmodi quivis ut percipere possit, All are of such a nature that any one can perceive. Cic. Hic opud majores nostros adhibebatur peritus, nunc quilibet. Id. Natura innumquemque trahit ad discendum. A negative joined with them denies only the universality which they imply; as, Non cuivis homini contingit adire Cicerium, i. e. not to every man without distinction. Hor. Cuiquam would have made the negation universal.

REM. 35. (a.) Quisque signifies each, every one, distributively or relatively, and generally stands without a noun; as, Quod cuique obigit, id quisque teneat, Let each one keep what has fallen to each. Cic. Hence it is used particularly after relative and interrogative pronouns and adverbs; as, Scipio pollicetur sibi magnæ caræ fore, ut omnia civitatibus, quæ cuiusque fuissent, restituerentur. Cic. Ut prædici posset, quid cuique ærentiarum, et quo quisque fâto natus esset. Id. Cur fiat quidque quævis: recte omnino. Id. Quo quisque est sollertior, hoc docet laboriosius. Id. Ut quisque optime dicit, ita maxime dicendi difficultatem timet. Id. And hence the expression quotusquisque in the sense of 'how few among all.' It is also used distributively after numerals; as, Décimus quisque sorte lectus, Every tenth man. Quinto quoque anno, In every fifth year. So also after suus; as, Sui cuique liberi carissimi: suum cuique placet. (Respecting the order of the words, cf. § 279, 14: and respecting quisque in the nominative in apposition to a noun or pronoun in the ablative absolute or in the accusative with the infinitive, see § 204, R. 10.)

(b.) Quisque with a superlative, either in the singular or the plural, denotes universality, and is generally equivalent to omnes with the positive; as, doctissimus quisque, Every learned man, i. e. all the learned; but often, also, in connection with the verb, it retains the idea of a reciprocal comparison, and is to be rendered by the superlative; as, In omni arte optimum quidque rarissimum, The best is the rarest. Cic. Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur, The deepest rivers flow with the least sound. Curt. With primus, it denotes the first possible; as, Primo quoque tempore, As soon as possible. Cic.

POSSESSIVES.

REM. 36. (a.) The possessive pronouns meus, tuus, suus, noster, and vester, are joined to nouns, to indicate an action or possession of the persons denoted by their primitives; as, Tutus amor meus est tibi, My love is secure to you. Ovid. Tuam vicem dolere soleo. Cic.—These pronouns, as in English, when belonging to two substantives, are generally expressed but once, even when the substantives are of different genders; as, amor tuus ac iudicium de me.

(b.) But these pronouns are sometimes used when the persons to which they refer are the objects of an action, feeling, etc.; as, Nam nequæ tuâ negligentia, neque odio id fecit tui, For he did it neither through neglect nor hatred of you. Ter. See § 211, R. 3.

(c.) The possessive pronouns, especially when used as reflexives, are often omitted; as, Quo révertar? in patriam? scil. meam, Whither shall I return? to (my) country? Ovid. Dextrâ mûnera porrexit, scil. suâ. Id. But they are expressed when emphasis or contrast is intended, where in English 'own' might be added to the pronoun; as, Ego non dicam, tamen id poteritis cum animis vestris cõgitare. Cic.

(d.) When besides the person of the subject, that of a remote object also occurs in the proposition, the possessive pronoun will refer to the latter; as, Patris ænimum mihi reconciliasti, i. e. patris mei ænimum rather than tui.

(e.) As reflexives, meus, etc., are translated my, thy, his, her, its, our, your, their; or my own, thy own, his own, etc.

THE REFLEXIVES SUI AND SUUS.

§ 208. REM. 37. (a.) Sui and suus properly refer to the subject of the proposition in which they stand; as, Oppidâni factûs in se ac suos factum consciscunt, The citizens decide on a foul crime against themselves and their friends. Liv.

(b.) They continue to be used in successive clauses, if the subject remains the same; as,

Ipse se quisque diligit, non ut aliquam a se ipse mercêdem exigat caritatis suæ, sed quod per se sibi quisque cãrus est. Cic.

(1.) In dependent clauses, in which the subject does not remain the same, the reflexives are commonly used in references to the leading subject, when the thoughts, language, purposes, etc., of that subject are stated; as,

Ariovistus prædicavit, non sese Gallis, sed Gallos sibi bellum intulisse, Ariovistus declared that he had not made war upon the Gauls, but the Gauls upon him. Cæs. Homërum Colophoni civem esse dicunt suum, The Colophonians say that Homer is their citizen. Cic. Tyrannus petivit ut se ad amicitiam tertium ascriberent. Id. But sometimes, to avoid ambiguity, the cases of is or ille are used in such clauses in references to the leading subject; as, Helvëtii sese Allobroges coacturos existimabant, ut per suos fines eos ire peterentur. Cæs. Here suos refers to the subject of the dependent clause, and eos to Helvëtii, the subject of the leading clause. And sometimes, even in the same dependent clause, two reflexive pronouns are used, referring to different persons; as, Sytha petebant, ut regis sui filiam matrimonio sibi jungeret. Curt.

(2.) If, however, the leading subject, whose thoughts, etc., are expressed, is indefinite, the reflexives relate to the subject of a dependent clause; as,

Mœdæam prædicant (scil. homines) in fugâ fratris sui membra in iis locis, quæ se parens persëqueretur, dissipavisse. Cic. Ipsum regem tradunt operatum his sacris se abdidisse. Liv.

(3.) (a.) When the leading verb is in the passive voice, the reflexive often refers not to its subject, but to that which would be its subject in the active voice; as,

A Cæsare invitõr ut sim sibi legatus, i. e. Cæsar me invitat, I am invited by Cæsar to become his lieutenant. Cic.

(b.) So when the subject is a thing without life, the reflexive may relate to some other word in the sentence, which denotes a thing having life; as,

Cânium tam fida custodiã quid significat aliud, nisi se ad hominum commoditates esse generatos? Cic.

(4.) Instead of sui and suus, whether referring to a leading or a subordinate subject, ipse is sometimes used, to avoid ambiguity from the similarity of both numbers of sui, and also to mark more emphatically than suus, the person to whom it relates; as,

Jugurtha legatos misit, qui ipsi liberisque vitam petèrent. Jugurtha sent ambassadors to ask life for himself and his children. Sall. Ea molestissime ferre homines debent, quæ ipsorum culpâ contracta sunt.

(5.) In the plural number, with inter, se only is used, if the person or thing referred to is in the nominative or accusative; se or ipse, if in any other case; as,

Frâtres inter se quum formâ, tum moribus similes, Brothers resembling each other both in person and character. Cic. Fêras inter sêse conciliat adâtra. Cic. Incidunt aliquâ a doctis etiam inter ipsos mûtuò reprehensa. Quint.

(6.) (a.) When reference is made not to the subject of the proposition, but to some other person or thing, hic, is, or ille, is generally used, except in the cases above specified; as,

Themistocles servum ad Xerxem misit, ut ei nuntiâret, suis verbis, adversarios ejus in fugâ esse. Themistocles sent his servant to Xerxes, to inform him (Xerxes), in his (Themistocles') name, that his (Xerxes') enemies were upon the point of flight. Nep.

(b.) But when no ambiguity would arise, and especially when the verb is of the first or second person, sui and suus sometimes take the place of the demonstrative pronouns; as,

Suam rem sibi salvam sistam, I will restore his property entire to him. Plant.

(c.) On the contrary, the demonstratives are sometimes used for the reflexives; as, Helvêtii persuâdent Raurâcis, ut unâ cum ils proficiscantur, The Helvetii persuade the Rauraci to go with them. Cæs.—In some instances, a reflexive and a demonstrative are used in reference to the same person; as, Ita se gessit (scil. Ligârius) ut ei pacem esse expédiret. Cic. C. Claudii drantis per sui frâtris parentisque ejus mânes. Liv.—Sometimes the reflexives refer to different subjects in the same sentence; as, Ariovistus respondit, neminem secum sine sua pernâcie contendisse (Cæs.); where se refers to Ariovistus, and sua to neminem.

(7.) (a.) Suus often refers to a word in the predicate of a sentence, and is then usually placed after it; as,

Hunc cives sui ex urbe ejecerunt, Him his fellow-citizens banished from the city. Cic. Titârius quum prôcul Ambiorigem, suos cohortantem, conspexisset. Cæs.

(b.) Suus, and not hujus, is used when a noun is omitted; as, Octârius quem sui (scil. Amici) Cæsarem adlûbant, Octavius, whom his followers saluted as Cæsar.

(c.) Suus is also commonly used when two nouns are coupled by cum but not when they are connected by a conjunction; as, Ptolémæus amicos Demetrii cum suis rebus dimisit, Ptolemy dismissed the friends of Demetrius with their effects. Just.

(8.) Suus sometimes denotes fil, favorable; as,

Sunt et sua dóna parenti, There are likewise for my father suitable presents. Virg. Ut liberâtor ille populi Rómâni opprimeretur tempóra sua. Liv. Alphénus atebâtur populo sâne suo. Cic. Sometimes it signifies peculiar; as, Molles sua târa Sâbei, scil. mittunt, i. e. the frankincense for which their country was famous. Virg. Fessosque sopor suus occupat artus. Id.

NOMINATIVE.

SUBJECT-NOMINATIVE AND VERB.

§ 209. (a.) The noun or pronoun which is the subject of a finite verb is put in the nominative.

NOTE 1. (a.) A verb in any mood except the infinitive is called a finite verb. (b.) In historical writing the nominative is sometimes joined with the present infinitive instead of the imperfect indicative. Cf. R. 5.

(b.) A verb agrees with its subject-nominative, in number and person; as,

Ego lægo, I read.

Tu scribis, Thou writest.

Equus currit, The horse runs.

Nos lægimus, We read.

Vos scribitis, You write.

Equi currunt, Horses run.

NOTE 2. The imperative singular is sometimes used in addressing several persons; as, Huc nōtas adice septem, scil. vos, Thēbaidēs. Ovid. Met. 6, 182. So Adde dēfectionē Italia, scil. vos, militēs. Liv. 26, 41.

REMARK 1. (a.) The nominatives ego, tu, nos, vos, are seldom expressed, the termination of the verb sufficiently marking the person; as, Cūpio, I desire; vivis, thou livest; hābēmus, we have. See § 147, 3.

(b.) But when emphasis or opposition is intended, the nominatives of the first and second persons are expressed; as, Ego rēges ējēcī, vos tyrannos intrōductis, I banished kings, you introduce tyrants. Auct. ad Her. Nos, nos, dico aperte, consūles dēsumus. Cic. Tu es patrōnus, tu pāter. Ter. In indignant questions and addresses tu is expressed; as, Tu in fōrum prōdire, tu lucem conspīcere, tu in hōrum conspectum vēire cōnāris? Auct. ad Her.

REM. 2. The nominative of the third person is often omitted:—

(1.) When it has been expressed in a preceding proposition:—

(a.) As nominative; as, Mōsa prōstuit ex monte Vōsēgo, et in Oceānum influit. Cæs.; or (b) in an oblique case; as, Cursōrem misērunt, ut id nuntiāret, scil. cursor. Nep.; or (c) in a possessive adjective; as, Et vēreor quo se Jūnōnia vertant, Hospitia; haud tanto cessābit carāne rerū, scil. illa, i. e. Jūnō. Virg. Æn. I. 672.

(2.) When it is a general word for person or thing:—

Thus hōmīnes is often omitted before aiunt, dicunt, fērunt, etc.; as, Ut aiunt, As they say. Cic. Māxime admirantur eum, qui pecūniā non mōvētur. Id.—So bēne est, bēne habet or bēne agitur. It is well; as, Si vales, bēne est, ego valeo. Cic. Quum mēlius est, grātūlor dis. Afran. Optūme habet, Nothing can be better. Plaut. Bēne habet; jacta sunt fundāmēta dēfensionis. Cic. Bēne agitur pro noxia. Plaut.

NOTE 3. This omission of the nominative is common in the clause preceding a relative; as, Qui Bāvium non odit, amet tua carmina, Mævi, scil. hōmo. Let him who hates not Bavius, love your verses, Mævius. Virg. Vastātur agri quod inter urbem ac Fidēnas est, scil. id spātium. Liv. Sunt quos jūvat...scil. hōmīnes. There are (those) whom it delights. Hor. Est qui nec vēlētis pōcūla Massici spernit, scil. hōmo. Hor. Here sunt quos and est qui are equivalent to quidam, aliquis, or aliqui. So, Est quod gaudeas, There is (reason) why you should rejoice. Cic. Nēque erat cur fallere vellent. Ovid. Est ubi id valeat. Cic. Est, quum non est sātus, etc. Auct. ad Her. In the latter cases, the adverbs are equivalent to in quo, scil. lōco, tempōre.

—REM. 3. (1.) The nominative is wanting before verbs denoting the state of the weather, or the operations of nature; as, Fulgurat, It lightens. Plin. Ningit, It snows. Virg. Lucescēbat, It was growing light. Liv. Jam advesperascit. Cic.

—(2.) The nominative is also wanting before the third person singular of the passive of neuter verbs, and of active verbs used impersonally; as,

Fāvatur tibi a me, Thou art favored by me. Ejus orationi vehēmenter ab omnibus reclamatum est. Cic. Proinde ut bene vivitur, diu vivitur. Plaut. Ad exitum ventum est. Sen. Actum est de império. See § 184, 2: and cf. § 229, R. 5, (b.)

NOTE 4. A nominative, however, is expressed before the passive of some neuter verbs, which, in the active voice, are followed by an accusative; as, Pugna pugnata est. Cic. See § 232, (1.)

(3.) It is wanting also before the neuter of the future passive participle with est; as,

Si vis me flere dolendum est primum ipsi tibi, If you wish me to weep, you yourself must first grieve. Hor. Orandum est, ut sit mens sana in corpore sano. Juv. Ad villam revertendum est. Cic.

—(4.) The nominative is also wanting before the impersonal verbs miseret, pœnitet, pudet, tædet, and piget; as,

Eos ineptiarum pœnitet, They repent of their follies. Cic. Miseret te aliorum, tui te nec miseret nec pudet. Plautus. Me civitatis morum piget tædetque. Sall.—In such examples, the sense will sometimes permit us to supply fortuna, conditio, mémoria, etc. So in the expression, Venit in mentem, It came into mind; as, In mentem venit de speculo, scil. cogitatio, etc. Plaut.—An infinitive or a subjunctive clause sometimes forms the subject of these verbs; as, Te id nullo modo puduit facere, To do that by no means shamed you. Ter. Non pœnitet me, quantum profecerim. Cic.

(5.) The subject of the verb is sometimes an infinitive or a neuter participle (either alone or with other words), one or more propositions, or an adverb. (Cf. § 202, R. 2 and 3: and § 274, R. 5, (b).) The verb is then in the third person singular; as, Vacare culpā magnum est solatium, To be free from fault is a great consolation. Nēque est te fallere quidquam, To deceive you in any thing is not (possible). Virg. Mentiri non est meum. Plaut. Te non istud audivisse mirum est, That you have not heard that is wonderful. Cic. Summum jus, summa injuria, factum est jam tritum sermōne proverbium. Id. Ni degēnerātum in aliis huic quoque decōri offēciasset. Liv. (Cf. § 274, R. 5, (b).) Sin est ut vēlis manēre illam apud te. Ter. Nec profuit Hydræ crescere per damnum, geminasque resūmere vires. Ovid. Dic mihi, cras istud, Postūme, quando vēni? Tell me, Postumus, when does that to-morrow come? Mart. Pārūne campis atque Neptūno super fūsum est Lātini sanguinis? Hor.

(a.) This construction is especially common with impersonal verbs; as, Oratorem irasci non decet, That an orator should be angry, is not becoming. Cic. Hoc fieri et oportet et opus est. Id. Me pēdibus delectat claudere verba. Hor. Intérest omnium recte facere. Cic. Causa accidit, ut, id quod Rōmæ audierat, primus nuntiāret. Id. Sometimes a neuter pronoun is interposed between a proposition and its verb; as, Impūne facere quæ libet, id est rēgem esse. Sall. Cf. § 206, (13), (a.)

(6.) The nominative is also wanting before pōtest, cœpit or cœptum est, incipit, dēsinit, dēbet, sōlet, and vidētur, when followed by the infinitive of an impersonal verb; as,

Pigere eum facti capiti, It began to repent him (i. e. he began to repent) of his conduct. Just. Sapientia est una, quæ præceptrice, in tranquillitate vivi potest. Cic. Tuodere solæ divos impendit. Quint.

REM. 4. The verb is sometimes omitted; as,

Di meliōra piis, scil. dent or vellent, May the gods grant better things to the pious. Virg. Verum hac hæc tēnus, scil. diximus. Cic. Pertineo is understood in such expressions as nihil ad me, nihil ad rem; Quid hoc ad Epicūrum? What does this concern Epicurus? Quorsus hæc? i. e. quorsus hæc pertinet? What is that for?—Pārabo is to be supplied, in Quo mihi hanc rem? Of what use is this to me? and, Unde mihi aliquam rem? Whence am I to get any thing? as, Quo mihi bibliothēcas? Sen. Unde mihi lapidem? Hor. A tense of facio is often to be supplied, as in Recte ille, melius hi; Bēne Chrysippus, qui docet. Cic. Nihil per vim unquam Clodius, omnia per vim Milo. Id. Quæ quum dixisset, Cotta finem. Id. So, also in the phrases nihil aliud quam; quid aliud quam; nihil præterquam, which signify 'merely'; as, Tisaphernes nihil aliud quam bellum comparavit. Nep. This verb is in like manner omitted with nihil amplius quam; nihil minus quam, and in the phrase si nihil aliud.—At or inquit is sometimes omitted in introducing the direct words of another, and more frequently in relating a connected conversation; as, Tum ille; hic ego; huic ego. Dicit is sometimes omitted in quoting a person's words; as, Scite Chrysippus: ut gladii causā vaginam, sic præter mundum cetera omnia aliorum causā esse generāla. Cic.—After per in adjurations oro, rogo or precor is often omitted; as, Per ego vos deos patrios, vindicāte ab ultimo dedecore nomen gentemque Persarum; i. e. per deos patrios vos oro, vindicāte. Curt. This omission is most common with the copula sum; as, Nam Polydorus ego, scil. sum. For I am Polydorus. Virg. And so est and sunt are often omitted with predicate adjectives, and especially in proverbial phrases; as, Quot homines tot sententia. Ter. Omnia præclara rara, scil. sunt. Cic. So also est and sunt are often omitted in the compound tenses of the passive voice; as, Agro multatū, scil. sunt. Liv. Cf. § 270, R. 8.

NOTE 5. In Latin, as in English, a verb is often joined to one of two connected nominatives and understood with the other, and that even when the persons are different; as, magis ego te amo, quam tu me, scil. amas. After a negative verb a corresponding positive verb is sometimes to be supplied; as, after nēgo, dico, after vōto, jubeo, and in this case et takes the signification of sed. Cf. § 328, 1, (2.), (b.)

NOTE 6. Sometimes, when the verb of an appended proposition is omitted, its subject is attracted to the case of a noun in the leading proposition with which is joined a participle of the omitted verb; as, Hannibal Minucium, magistrum equitum, pari ac dictatorem dolo productum in prælium, fugavit, i. e. pārī ac dictatōr dolo prōductus fuerat. Nep. Hann. 5. So Liv. 34, 32.

REM. 5. In the historic style the nominative is sometimes found with the present infinitive; as, Intērim quōdiē Cæsar Æduos frumentum flagitare, Meanwhile Cæsar was daily demanding corn of the Ædui. Cæs. Nos pavidi trēpidare metu. Virg. Id horrendum ferri. Id.

NOTE 7. The infinitive in this construction is called the historical infinitive, and is used instead of the imperfect indicative to express in a lively manner a continued or repeated action or condition.

REM. 6. The relative qui may refer to an antecedent either of the first, second, or third person; and its verb takes the person of the antecedent; as,

Ego qui lægo, I who read. Tu qui scribis, Thou who writest. Equus qui currit, The horse which runs. Vos qui quæritis, You who ask.

REM. 7. (a.). Verbs in the first person plural, and the second person singular, are sometimes used to express general truths; as, Quam multa factis causâ amicorum! How many things we do (i. e. men do) for the sake of friends! Cic. Si vis me flere, dolendum est primum ipsi tibi, Whoever wishes me, etc. Hor.

(b.) Nos is often used for ego, and noster for meus; and even when the pronoun is not expressed, the verb is frequently put in the first person plural instead of the first person singular. The genitive nostri is used for mei, but nostrum always expresses a real plurality.

REM. 8. The accusative is sometimes used for the nominative by attraction. See § 206, (6.) (b.)

REM. 9. The verb sometimes agrees with the predicate-nominative, especially if it precedes the verb; as, Amantium ira amoris integratio est, The quarrels of lovers are a renewal of love. Ter. Lôca, quæ proxima Carthâginem, Numidia appellatur. Sall. And sometimes it agrees with the nearest subject of a subordinate sentence; as, Sed ei cetera semper omnia, quam decus atque potentia fuit. Sall. Cat. 25.

REM. 10. In cases of apposition, the verb commonly agrees with the noun which is to be explained; as, Tulliola, deliciæ nostræ, flagitat. Cic. But sometimes the verb agrees, not with the principal nominative, but with a nearer noun in apposition to it; as, Tungri, civitas Galliæ, fontem habet insignem, The Tungri, a state of Gaul, has a remarkable fountain. Plin. Corioli oppidum captum (est). Liv.

REM. 11. A collective noun has sometimes, especially in poetry, a plural verb; as, Pars epulis onerant mensas, Part load the tables with food. Virg. Turba ruunt. Ovid. Atria turba tenent; veniunt læce vulgus euntque. Id.

(1.) (a.) A plural verb, joined to a collective noun, usually expresses the action, etc., of the individuals which that noun denotes. In Cicero, Sallust, and Cæsar, this construction scarcely occurs in simple sentences; but it is often used, when the subject of the verb is expressed not in its own, but in a preceding clause; as, Hoc idem generi humano evenit, quod in terrâ collocati sint, because they (scil. homines) live on earth. Cic. In Livy it occurs more frequently; as, Locros omnis multitudo abeunt.

(b.) Abstract nouns are sometimes used collectively, instead of their concretes; as, nobilitas for nobiles, jacentus for jacentes, vicinia for vicini, servitium for servi, læcis armatura for læciter armati, etc. (c.) Miles, equus, pædes, and similar words are sometimes used collectively for the soldiery, the cavalry, etc.

(2.) When two or more clauses have the same collective noun as their subject, the verb is frequently singular in the former, and plural in the latter; as, Jam ne nocte quidem turba ex eo loco dilabebatur, refracturosque carcerem minabantur. Liv. Gens eodem, que te crudeli Dtunia bello insequitur, nos si pellant, nihil absque credunt. Virg.

(3.) Tantum, followed by a genitive plural, has sometimes a plural verb, like a collective noun; as, Quid huc tantum hominum incedunt? Why are so many men coming hither? Plaut.

(4.) A plural verb is sometimes used, though not by Cicero, after uterque and quisque, pars...pars, alius...alius, and alter...alterum, on account of the idea of plurality which they involve; as, Uterque eorum ex castris exercitum educunt, Each of them leads his army from the camp. Cæs. Intinus quisque libertorum vincti abreptique (sunt). Tac. Alius alium, ut prælium incipiant, circumspectant. Liv. Cf. § 207, R. 32, (c.)

NOTE 8. This construction may be explained by passages like the following, in which the plural is placed first, and then the singular, denoting its parts; Ceteri, suo quisque tempore, aderunt. Liv. Decemviri perturbati alius in aliam partem castrorum discurrunt. Id. See § 204, R. 10.

REM. 12. Two or more nominatives singular, not in apposition, generally have a plural verb; as, Fūror irāque mentem præcipitant, Fury and rage hurry on (my) mind. Virg. Dum ætas, mētus, māgister, prohibebant. Ter.

(1.) If the predicate belongs to the several nominatives jointly, the verb is always plural; as, Grammaticæ quondam ac mūsicæ junctæ fuerunt. Quint.

(2.) A verb in the singular is often used after several nominatives singular, especially if they denote things without life; as,

Mens enim, et ratio et consilium in senibus est. Cic. Beneficentia, liberalitas, bonitas, justitia funditus tollitur. Id.

NOTE 9. This construction is most common when the several nominatives, as in the preceding examples, constitute, as it were, but one idea. So also the compound subject Senatus populusque Romanus has always a predicate in the singular. The same construction sometimes, especially in the poets, occurs with names of persons; as, Gorgias, Thrasymachus, Protagoras, Prodicus, Hippias in honore fuit. Cic. Quin et Prometheus et Pelops parens duce laborum decipitur sono. Hor. When the nominatives denote both persons and things, the verb is commonly plural; as, Ottio consul et Pompeius obsunt. Liv.

(3.) When one of the nouns is plural, the verb is generally so; but sometimes it is singular, when the plural noun does not immediately precede it; as, Dii te penates patriæque, et patris imago, et domus regia, et in domo regale solum, et nomen Tarquinius creat vocatque regem. Liv.

(4.) When each of the nominatives is preceded by et or tum, the verb agrees with the last; as, Hoc et ratio doctis, et necessitas barbaris, et mos gentibus, et feris natura ipsa præscripsit. This, reason has dictated to the learned, and necessity to barbarians, and custom to nations, and nature itself to wild beasts. Cic. Et ego, et Cicero meus flagitabit. Id. Tum ætas viresque, tum divita gloria animum stimulabat. Liv. So when the subject consists of two infinitives; as, Et facere, et pati fortia, Romanum est. Cic. Unus et alter always takes a singular verb; as, Dicit unus et alter breviter. Cic. Unus et alter assultur pannus. Hor.

(5.) When the nominatives are connected by aut, sometimes the plural, but commonly the singular, is used; as,

Si Socrates aut Antisthenes dicere, If Socrates or Antisthenes should say. Cic. Ut quosque studium privatum aut gratia occupaverunt. Liv.

(a.) The plural is necessary with disjunctives, if the subject includes the first or second person; as, Quod in Decemviris neque ego neque Caesar habiti essemus. Cic.—(b.) With aut...aut and nec...nec the singular is preferred, but with seu...seu and tam...quam the verb is in the plural.

(6.) A nominative singular, joined to an ablative by the preposition cum, sometimes has a singular but more frequently a plural verb; as, Domitius cum Messala certus esse videbatur. Cic. Bocchus, cum peditibus, postram Romanorum aciem invadunt, Bocchus, with his foot-soldiers, attacks the rear of the Roman army. Sall. Ipsæ dux, cum aliquot principibus, capiuntur. Liv.

(7.) If the nominatives are of different persons, the verb is of the first person rather than the second or third, and of the second rather than the third; as,

Si tu et Tullia valemus, ego et Cicero valeamus, If you and Tullia are well, Cicero and I are well. Cic. Hæc neque ego neque tu fecimus. Ter. Ego populusque Romanus bellum iudico facioque. Liv.

(a.) Yet sometimes the verb agrees in number and person with the nearest nominative, and is understood with the other; as, Vos ipsi et senatus frequens restitit. This is always the case when the action of the verb is qualified with reference to each nominative separately; as, Ego misere tu feliciter vivis.

REM. 13. The interjections en, ecce, and O, are sometimes followed by the nominative; as, En Priamus! Lo Priam! Virg. En ego, vester Ascanius. Id. Ecce homo Catellus! Cic. Ecce tuus literas. Id. O vir fortis atque amicus! Ter.

PREDICATE-NOMINATIVE.

§ 210. A noun in the predicate, after a verb neuter or passive, is put in the same case as the subject, when it denotes the same person or thing; as,

(a.) When the subject is in the nominative; Ira furor brevis est, Anger is a short madness. Hor. Ego vocor Lyconides, I am called Lyconides. Plaut. Ego incedo regina, I walk a queen. Virg. Caius et Lucius fratres fuerunt. Cic.—So (b.) when the subject is in the accusative with the infinitive; Iudicem me esse volo. Cic.

(c.) Sometimes also a dative, denoting the same object, both precedes and follows a verb neuter or passive. See § 227, N.—And (d.) a predicate ablative sometimes follows passive participles of choosing, naming, etc.; as, Consulibus certioribus factis. Liv. See § 257, R. 11.

(e.) If the predicate noun has a form of the same gender as the subject, it takes that form; as, Licentia corruptrix est morum. Cf. § 204, R. 2.—(f.) But if the subject is neuter, the noun of the predicate, if it has both a masculine and a feminine form, takes the former; as, Tempus vitae magister est.

(g.) An infinitive may supply the place of a predicate nominative. See § 269, R. 4.

REMARK 1. (a.) Adjectives, adjective pronouns, and participles, standing in the predicate, after verbs neuter or passive, and relating to the subject, agree with it in gender, number, and case.

(b.) When the subject consists of two or more nouns, the gender and number of such predicate adjectives are determined by § 206, R. 2.

REM. 2. (a.) The noun in the predicate sometimes differs in gender and number from the subject; as, Sanguis erant lacrimae, Her tears were blood. Ovid. Captivi militum praeda fuerunt. Liv.

(b.) So when a subject in the singular is followed by an ablative with cum, the predicate is plural; as, Exsules esse iubet L. Tarquinius cum conjuge et liberis. Liv.

REM. 3. The verbs which most frequently have a noun, etc., in the predicate agreeing in case, etc., with their subject, are:—

(1.) The copula sum; as, Ego Jovis sum filius. Plaut. Disce esse pater. Ter. The predicate with sum may be an adverb of place, manner, etc.; as, Quod est longe aliter. Cic. Rectissime sunt apud te omnia, Every thing with you is in a very good condition. Id.; or a noun in an oblique case; as, Numen sine ture est. Ovid. Sunt nobis mitia poma. Virg.

(2.) Certain neuter verbs denoting existence, position, motion, etc.; as, vivo, existo, appareo, cado, eo, evado, fugio, incedo, jaceo, maneo, sedeo, sto, venio, etc. Thus, Rex circumbat pedes, The king went round on foot. Plin. Quos iudicabat non posse oratores evadere. Cic. Ego huic causae patronus existii. Cic. Qui sit, ut nemo contentus vivat?

(3.) The passive of verbs denoting,

(a.) To name or call; as, appellor, dicor, nominor, nuncior, perhibeor, salutor, scribor, inscribor, vocor. Thus, Cognomine Justus est appellatus, He was called by the surname Just. Nep. Aristaeus olivae dicitur inventor. Cic.

—(b.) To choose, render, appoint, or constitute; as, constituor, creor, declaror, designor, eligor, fio, reddor, renuncior. Thus, Dux a Romanis electus est Q. Fabius. Postquam ephēbus factus est. Nep. Certior factus sum.

—(c.) To esteem or reckon; as, censeor, cognoscor, credor, deprehendor, existimor, ducor, feror, habeor, iudicor, memōror, nūmēror, pator, repēror, videor. Thus, Crēdebar sanguinis auctor ego. Ovid. Mālm vidēri timīdus quam pārūm prūdēns. Cic.

NOTE 1. With several passives of the last class, when followed by a predicate-nominative, etc., an infinitive of sum is expressed or understood; as, Amens mihi fuisse videor, I think I was beside myself. Cic. But the dative of the first person is sometimes omitted after videor; as, Satis dōcuisset videor. Id.—Atilius prudens esse putabatur. Id. So with ducor (to be said), and perhibeor; as, Verus patriæ dicēris esse pater. Mart. Hoc ne locutus sine mercēde existimer. Phæd.

NOTE 2. Audio is sometimes used by the poets like appellor; as, Tu rexque paterque audisti coram. Hor.

REM. 4. A predicate-nominative is used after many other verbs to denote a purpose, time, or circumstance of the action; as, Cōmes additus Eolides, Eolides was added as a companion. Virg. Lēpus obambulat nocturnus. Id. Apparet liquido sublimis in æthere Nisus. Id. So with an active verb; Audivi hoc puer. Cic. Sapiens nil j'acit invitus. Id. Rempūblicam defendi adolēscens. Id. Cf. § 204, R. 1.

NOTE 3. Instead of the predicate-nominative, a dative of the end or purpose sometimes occurs (see § 227); sometimes an ablative with pro; as, audācia pro mūro est; and sometimes the ablatives lōco or in nūmēro with a genitive; as, ille est mihi pārentis lōco; in hostium nūmēro habētur.

REM. 5. The noun opus, signifying 'need,' is often used as a predicate after sum. It is, in such cases, translated by the adjectives needful, necessary, etc.; as, Dux nobis et auctor opus est. Cic. Multi opus sunt boves. Varr. (Dixit) aurum et ancillas opus esse. Ter. Usus also is occasionally so construed.

REM. 6. When the pronoun, which is the subject of an infinitive, is omitted, the case of the predicate is sometimes, in the poets, attracted into that of the subject of the verb on which the infinitive depends; as, Uxor invicti Jōvis esse nescis, i. e. te esse uxorē. Hor. Rētulit Ajax esse Jōvis prōnepos. Ovid.

GENITIVE.

GENITIVE AFTER NOUNS.

§ 211. A noun which limits the meaning of another noun, denoting a different person or thing, is put in the genitive; as,

Amor glōriæ, Love of glory; Arma Achillis, The arms of Achilles; Pater patriæ, The father of the country; Vitium iræ, The vice of anger; Nemōrum custos, The guardian of the groves; Amor habendī, Love of possessing.

NOTE 1. In the first example, amor denotes love in general; glōriæ limits the affection to the particular object, glory. Such universally is the effect of the genitive, depending upon a noun. Hence the limitation of a noun by a genitive resembles that which is effected by an adjective. In each the noun limited constitutes with its limitation only a single idea.

REMARK 1. The genitive denotes various relations, the most common of which are those of Source; as, Rādii solis, The rays of the sun;—Cause; as, Dolor podagræ, The pain of the gout;—Effect; as, Artifex mundi, The Creator of the world;—Connection: as, Pater consulis, The father of the consul;—Possession; as, Dōmus Cæsaris, The house of Cæsar;—Object; as, Cōgitatō dīcūjus rei, A thought of something;—Purpose; as, Apparātus triumphī, Preparation for a triumph;—A whole; as, Pars hōminum, A part of men; this is called the partitive genitive;—Character or Quality; as, Adolescens summæ audaciæ, A youth of the greatest boldness;—Material or Component Parts; as, Montes auri, Mountains of gold; Acerus scutidrum, A heap of shields;—Time; as, Frumentum dierum decem, Corn for ten days. Sall.

REM. 2. The genitive is called subjective or active, when it denotes either that to which a thing belongs, or the subject of the action, feeling, etc., implied in the noun which it limits. It is called objective or passive, when it denotes the object affected by such action, or towards which such feeling is directed; as, Subjective.

Facta virorum, Deeds of men.
Dolor animi, Grief of mind.
Junonis ira, The anger of Juno.

Objective.

Odium vitii, Hatred of vice.
Amor virtutis, Love of virtue.
Desiderium otii, Desire of leisure.

(a.) Whether a genitive is subjective or objective, is to be determined by the meaning of the words, and by their connection. Thus, prædientia Dei signifies God's providence, or that exercised by him; amor Dei, the fear of God, or that exercised towards him. The same or similar words, in different connections, may express both significations. Thus, metus hostium, fear of the enemy, may mean, either the fear felt by the enemy, or that felt by their opponents. So vulnus Ulixis (Virg. Æn. 2, 456.) denotes the wound which Ulysses had given; vulnus Æneæ, (Id. Æn. 12, 823.) that which Æneas had received.

(b.) The relation expressed by the English possessive case is subjective, while that denoted by of with its case is either subjective or objective.

(c.) The objective genitive is of very extensive use in Latin in the limitation of verbal nouns and adjectives, whatever may be the construction of the verbs from which such nouns and adjectives are derived, whether they take an accusative or some other case or even a preposition.

(d.) When ambiguity would arise from the use of the objective genitive, a preposition with an accusative or ablative is commonly used; as, Amor in rempublicam, for reipublicæ, Love to the state. Cic. Odium erga Romanos, for Romanorum. Nep. Cura de salute patriæ, for salutis. Cic. Prædator ex sociis, for sociorum. Sall. Sometimes both constructions are combined; as, Révèrentia adversus homines et optimi cuiusque et reliquorum. Cic. Off. 1, 28.

NOTE. A limiting genitive is sometimes used instead of a noun in apposition, especially with vox, nomen, verbum, etc.; as, vox voluptatis, the word pleasure; nomen amicitiae, the word amicitia; dōmīni appellatio. This is usual when the genus is defined by the species; as, arbor ficī, a fig-tree; flos violæ, a violet; virtus continentiae, the virtue of abstinence; and in geographical names; as, oppidum Antiōchiæ. Cf. § 204, R. 6.—Cicero frequently uses a genitive in this manner with genus and causa; as, Unum genus est eorum, qui, etc. Duae sunt causae, una pudoris, altera sceleris.—So, also, the genitive of gerunds; as, Triste est nomen ipsum cārendi, The very word to want is sad. Cic.

REM. 3. (a.) A substantive pronoun in the genitive, limiting the meaning of a noun, is commonly objective; as, Cura mei, Care for me. Ovid. Part tui, Part of thee. Id. Vestri curam agite. Curt. This genitive is used especially with verbal substantives in or, ix and io; as, Accusator mei. Cic. Nimia aestimatio sui. Id. Rationem et sui et aliorum habere. Id.

(b.) Instead of the subjective or possessive genitive of a substantive pronoun, the corresponding adjective pronoun is commonly used; as,

Liber meus, not liber mei, my book. Cura mea, My care, i. e. the care exercised by me. Cic. Tuas litteras exspecto. Id. Yet the subjective genitive of a substantive pronoun sometimes occurs; as, Tui unius studio, By the zeal of yourself alone. Cic.

(c.) And not unfrequently, also, an adjective pronoun occurs instead of the objective genitive; as, Mea injuria, Injury to me. Sall. So, Invidia tua, Envy of thee. Fiducia tua, Confidence in thee. Plaut. Spes mea, The hope placed in me. With causa the adjective pronoun, and never the genitive, is used; as, Mea causa, For my sake. Plaut.

REM. 4. (a.) Instead, also, of the subjective genitive of a noun, a possessive adjective is often used; as, Causa regis, for causa régis. Cic. Hærilis filius, for hæri filius. Id. Evandrius ensis, for Evandri. Virg. Herculeus labor, for Herculis. Hor. Civilis furor, for civium. Hor. So, also, for the objective genitive, Métus hostilis, Fear of the enemy. Sall. Id

(b.) The genitive of the person implied in the adjective pronoun or possessive adjective, or an adjective agreeing with such genitive, is sometimes added as an apposition; as, Vestrâ ipsorum causâ hoc fêci. In the poets and later prose writers a participle also is found agreeing with such implied genitive; as, Mea scripta vulgo recitare timentis. Hor. Cf. § 204, R. 4, and § 205, R. 18.

REM. 5. In the predicate after sum, and sometimes after other verbs, the dative is used like the objective genitive; as,

Idem amor exitium pëcôri (est), pëcôriaque mägistro. Virg. Vitis ut arbôribus dëcôri est, ut vitisbus ðvâ—Tu dëcus omne tuis. Virg. In this passage the dative dëcôri and the nominative dëcus are used with no difference of meaning. Cf. § 227, R. 4. Auctor fui sënâtui. Cic. Muræna légatus Lûculo fuit. Id. Erit ille mihi semper deus. Virg. Huic causæ patrônus exstisti. Cic. Huic ego me bello dâcem prôfiteor. Id. Se tertium (esse) cui fâtum fîret urbis pôtiri. Id.—Cum P. Africâno sënâtus ègit, ut légatus frâtri prôficiascërêtur. Id. Cæsar tégumenta gâleis milites ex viminibus facere jubet. Cæs. Trinôbantibus Cæsar impërat—frâmentum exorôtui. Id. Quod nèque insidia consûli prôcëdebant. Sall. Quem exitum tantis mälis spërârent? Id. Sanctus vir et ex sententia ambôbus, scil. qui fuit. Id. See § 227, R. 4.

NOTE. The dative in the preceding examples has been thought by some grammarians to depend on the nouns connected with it; as, exitum, dëcus, auctor, légatus, deus, patrônus, etc.; by others it has been held to depend on these nouns in connection with the verbs, and not upon either separately; but the better opinion seems to be that, which makes such datives grammatically dependent upon the verbs only, though logically connected also with the nouns.

(1.) Instead, also, of the possessive genitive, a dative of the person may follow a verb, when its act has relation to the body or possessions of such person; as,

Sese omnes flentes Cæsari ad pëdes prôjêcerunt, They all, weeping, cast themselves at the feet of Cæsar. Cæs. Cui corpus porrigitur, For whom the body, i. e. whose body, is extended. Virg. Tum vëro exarsit jüveni dôlor ossibus ingens. Id. Transfigitur scûtum Pulfônî. Cæs.

REM. 6. When the limiting noun denotes a property, character, or quality, it has an adjective agreeing with it, and is put either in the genitive or the ablative; as,

Vir exempli recti, A man of correct example. Liv. Adolescens summas audâciæ, A youth of the greatest boldness. Sall. Fossa pëdum viginti, A ditch of twenty feet, (i. e. in width). Cæs. Hamilcar sëcum duxit filium Hannibâlem annôrum nôvem. Nep. Athënenses dëligunt Përiclem, spectâtæ virtûtis virum. Just. Quinquâginta annôrum impërium. Id. Rer unius diëi. Cic. Pulchritüdine eximîâ fëmîna, A woman of exquisite beauty. Cic. Maximo natu filius, The eldest son. Nep. Le Cûllûna fuit magnâ vi et animi et corpôris, sed ingënio mâlo prævôque. Sall. Spëlunca infinitâ altitudîne. Cic.—Sometimes both constructions occur in the same proposition; as, Lentûlum nostrum, eximîâ spe, summæ virtûtis adolëscëntem. Cic.

(1.) A genitive sometimes supplies the place of the adjective; and the noun denoting the property, etc., is then always put in the ablative; as, Est bos cervi figurâ,...of the form of a stag. Cæs. Uri specie et colore tauri. Id. Frates palmi altitudine. Plin. Clavi digiti pollicis crassitudine. Cæs.

(2.) All the qualities and attributes of persons and things, whether inherent or accidental, may be thus expressed by the genitive and ablative of quality, provided the substantives are immediately connected; as, fossa quindécim pædum; homo antiquâ virtute. It hence follows that such genitives and ablatives, when used to express duration of time or extent of space, are distinguished from the cases in which the accusative is required, since the latter case always follows adjectives or verbs; as, fossa quindécim pædes lâta: puer decem annos natus. Cf. § 236.

(3.) Whether the genitive or the ablative of quality is preferable in particular cases, can frequently be determined only by reference to classical authority; but, in general, the genitive is used more frequently to express inherent qualities than such as are merely accidental, while the ablative is used indifferently for either purpose. In speaking of transitory qualities or conditions the ablative is always used; as, Magno timore sum, I am in great fear. Cic. Bono animo sum. Id. Quanto fuërim dolore meministi. Id. Maximo honore Servius Tullius erat. Liv. With plural substantives the genitive is rare; while in expressions of measure it is used rather than the ablative.

(4.) An accusative instead of a genitive of quality is used with sæcus (sex), gænus and pondo; as, Libërorum caput sæcus ad decem millia capta, i. e. of the male sex, instead of sexus virilis. Liv. So gænus, when joined with a pronoun, as hoc, id, illud, quod, or with omne, is used for hæjus, ejus, omnis, etc., gæneris; as, Oratiões aut aliquid id gænus scribere,—of that kind. Cic. Concrédere nūgis hoc gænus. Hor. So pondo is joined as an indeclinable word to the accusatives libram and libras; as, Dictator cõrtinam auream libram pondo in Capitolio Jovi donum posuit,...a pound in weight. Liv. Cf. § 236, R. 7.

(5.) The genitive mõdi with an adjective pronoun supplies the place of a pronoun of quality; as, cujusmõdi libri, the same as quales libri, what kind of books; hujusmõdi libri, i. e. tales libri, such books. So, also, gæneris is used, but less frequently.

(6.) With the genitive of measure are often connected such ablatives as longitudine, latitudine, etc., or in longitudinem, etc.; as, fossa decem pædum latitudine; but the genitive does not depend on these words.

(7.) Sum may be followed by either the genitive or the ablative of quality with an ellipsis of the word limited, which, with the genitive, is homo, res, negotium, proprium or proprius, etc., and with the ablative, præditus, instructus, ornatus, etc. Cf. Rem. 8, and §§ 244, and 249, I..

REM. 7. (1.) The limited noun is sometimes omitted; as, O miseræ sortis! scil. hõmines; O (men) of wretched fortune! Lucan. Ad Dianæ, scil. ædem. Ter. Hectõris Andrõmachæ, scil. uxor. Virg. Suspiciõnis vitandæ, scil. causâ. Tac. So filius or filia; as, Hannibal Gisgõnis.

(2.) The omitted noun may sometimes be supplied from the preceding words; as, Cujum pæcus? an Mælbæi? Non; vërum Ægõnis, scil. pæcus. Virg. An adjective is often expressed referring to the noun omitted; as, Nullam virtus alium mercëdem desiderat, præter hanc (scil. mercëdem) laudis. Cic.

REM. 8. The limited noun is often wanting in the predicate of a sentence after sum. This usually happens,

(1.) When it has been previously expressed; as,

Hæc dõmus est Cæsâris. This house is Cæsar's. Nomen auræ tam sæpe vocatum esse putans Nymphæ. Ovid. Naves inërvâriæ, quârûm minor nulla erat diuum millium amphõrum, i. e. quârûm minor nulla erat quam nâvis diuum, etc. Cic.

(2.) When it is a general word denoting a person, an animal, etc.; as,

Thucydides, qui ejusdem ætatis fuit, scil. homo, Thucydides, who was of the same age. Nep. Multum ei detraxit, quod alienæ erat civitatis, scil. homo or civis. Id. Primum stipendium meruit annorum decem septemque, scil. adolescens. Id. Summi ut sint laboris efficiunt, scil. animalia. Cæs. (Claudius) somni brevissimi erat. Suet. Mira sum alacritate. Cic. Vulgus ingenio mobili erat. Sall. Non est juris sui, He is not his own master. Lucan. Potestatis sua esse. Liv. Suorumque rerum erant. Id. Cf. Rem. 6, (7.)

(3.) When it is a general word denoting thing, for which, in English, the words part, property, duty, office, business, characteristic, etc., are commonly supplied; as,

Temèritas est florentis ætatis, prudentia senectutis, Rashness is (the characteristic) of youth, prudence of old age. Cic. Est hoc Gallicæ consuetudinis. Cæs. So, multitudo est; est lætitiæ, etc., which are equivalent to stultitia est, hostias est. Omnia hostium erant. A paucis emi, quod multorum esset. Sall. Qui.

(a.) This happens especially when the subject of the verb is an infinitive, or an entire clause, in which case, instead of the genitive of the personal pronouns, mei, tui, etc., the neuter of the possessives, meum, tuum, etc., are used; as, Adolescentis est majores natu revereri, It is (the duty) of a youth to reverence the aged. Ovid. Cujusvis hominis est errare, nullius nisi insipientis in errore perseverare. Cic. Pauperis est numerare pecus. Ovid. So especially moris est; as, Negavit moris esse Græcorum, ut in convivio vitrorum accumbent mulieres, the same as morem esse Græcorum. Cic. Nihil tam aquanda libertatis esse. Liv. So when the verb is omitted; Tamen officii duxit, exorare patrem, scil. esse. Suet. Non est mentiri meum. Ter. Tuum est, M. Cato, videre quid agatur.

(b.) Instead of the genitive of a substantive, also, the neuter of a possessive adjective derived from it is sometimes used; as, Humânium est errare, To err is human. Ter. Et facere et pati fortia Rômanum est. Liv.

(4.) The same construction sometimes occurs after facio, and some other verbs mentioned in § 230, esse being understood; as, Asia Rômanorum facta est, Asia became (a possession) of the Romans. Just. Agrum sua ditionis fecisse. Liv.

(5.) The limited noun is sometimes wanting, when it is a general word, though not in the predicate after sum; as, Magni formica laboris, scil. animal, The ant (an animal) of great labor. Hor. So Ei venit in mentem potestatis tuæ, scil. mémoria, or the like. Cic.

NOTE. When the noun which is wanting denotes a thing, grammarians sometimes supply negotium, officium, manus, opus, res, causa, etc. It is an instance of a construction common in Latin, to omit a noun when a general idea is intended. See § 205, Rem. 7, (2.)

REM. 9. The limiting noun also is sometimes omitted; as,

Tria millia, scil. passuum. In most cases of this kind, an adjective, adjective pronoun, or participle, is expressed in the genitive.

REM. 10. Two genitives sometimes limit the same noun, one of which is commonly subjective, and the other objective; as, Agamemnonis belli gloria, Agamemnon's glory in war. Nep. Illius administrationis provincie. Cic. Eorum diuturn consuetudine itineris nostri exercitus peragunt. Cæs. Orbitas reipublicæ talium virorum. Cic. Pro veteribus Helveticorum injuriis populi Rômani. Cæs.

REM. 11. Opus and usus are rarely limited by a genitive or accusative, but generally by an ablative, of the thing needed; as, Argenti opus fuit, There was need of money. Liv. Ad consilium pensandum temporis opus esse. Id. Proemii non semper usus est. Quint. Si quo operis edrum usus est. Liv. Puero opus est cibum. Plant. Usus est hominem astutum. Id. See § 243.

(5.) The meaning is often nearly the same, whether the partitive adjective agrees in case and number with a noun, or takes such noun after it in the genitive; as, Doctissimus Rōmānōrum, or, doctissimus Rōmānus: Alter consūlum, or alter consul. But the genitive cannot be used, when the adjective includes the same number of things as that of which the whole consists; as, Veniamus ad viros, qui duo supersunt; not quōrum duo, since these are all, though we say in English, 'of whom two survive.'

NOTE 1. (a.) The comparative with the genitive denotes one of two individuals or classes; the superlative denotes a part of a number greater than two; as, Māior frātrum, The elder of two brothers. Maximus frātrum, The eldest of three or more.

(b.) In like manner, ūter, alter, and neuter, generally refer to two; quis, alius, and nullus, to a whole consisting of more than two; as, Uter nostrum? Which of us (two)? Quis vestrum? Which of you (three or more)?

NOTE 2. Nostrum and vestrum are used as partitive genitives, in preference to nostri and vestri, and are always joined with omnium even when the genitive is a subjective one; as, Patria, quæ communis est omnium nostrum patrēs. Cic. But vestrum sometimes occurs in other connections also without a partitive meaning; as, Quis erit tam cupidus vestrum. Cic.

NOTE 3. The partitive word is sometimes omitted; as, Fies nobilium tu quoque fontium, scil. ūnus. Hor. Centes sestertium, scil. centēna millia.

NOTE 4. The noun denoting the whole, after a partitive word, is often put in the ablative, with the prepositions de, e, ex, or in, or in the accusative, with opud or inter; as, Nemo de iis. Alter ex censoribus. Liv. Unus ex multis. Cic. Acerrimus ex sensibus. Id. Thales, qui sapientissimus in septem fuit. Id. Primus inter omnes. Virg. Cræsus inter rēges opulentissimus. Sen. Apud Helveticos nobilissimus.

NOTE 5. The whole and its parts are frequently placed in apposition, distributively; as, Interfectōres, pars in fōrum, pars Syracūsas pergunt. Liv. See § 204, R. 10.

NOTE 6. Cuncti and omnes, like partitives, are sometimes followed by a genitive plural; as, Attulus Mācedōnum fere omnibus persuasit, Attulus persuaded almost all the Macedonians. Liv. Cunctos hominum. Ovid. Cunctas provinciārum. Plin.

NOTE 7. In the following passage, the genitive singular seems to be used like that of a collective noun: Totius autem iniustitiæ nulla captatio est, etc. Cic. Off. 1, 18. The phrase Rem nullo modo probabilem omnium (Cic. Nat. Deor. 1, 27,) seems to be used for Rem nullo omnium modorum probabilem.

REM. 3. The genitive denoting a whole, may depend on a neuter adjective or adjective pronoun. With these the genitive singular is commonly used; as,

Plus eloquentiæ, More (of) eloquence. Tantum fidei, So much fidelity. Id tempōris, That time. Ad hoc æditis. Sometimes the genitive plural; as, Id miseriarum. Ter. Armorum quantum. Cæs.

NOTE 1. (a.) Most neuter adjectives used partitively denote quantity; as, tantum, quantum, aliquantum, plūs, minus, minimū, dimidū, multum, nīmiū, paulum, plurimum, religuum; with the compounds and diminutives, tantulum, tantundem, quantulum, quantulumcumque, etc.; to which add mediū, summum, ultimū, aliud, etc. The pronouns thus used are hoc, id, illud, istud, idem, quod, and quid, with their compounds, aliquid, quidquid, quippiam, quidquam, quodcumque.

(b.) Most of these adjectives and pronouns may either agree with their nouns, or take a genitive; but the latter is more common. Tantum, quantum, aliquantum, and plūs, when they denote quantity, are used with a genitive only, as are also quid and its compounds, when they denote a part, sort, etc., and quid in the sense of quantum. Thus, Quantum crevit Nilus, tantum spei in annum est. Sen. Quid mulieris uxorē habēs? What kind of a woman... Ter.

Aliquid formæ. Cic. Quid hoc rei est? What does this mean? Ter. Quod auri, quod argenti, quod ornâmentorum fuit, id Verres abstulit.

NOTE 2. Neuter adjectives and pronouns, when followed by a genitive, are to be accounted substantives, and in this construction are found only in the nominative and accusative.

NOTE 3. Sometimes the genitive after these adjectives and pronouns is a neuter adjective, of the second declension, without a noun; as, Tantum boni, So much good. Si quid habes novi, If you have any thing new. Cic. Quid reliqui est? Ter. Nihil is also used with such a genitive; as, Nihil sinceri, No sincerity. Cic. This construction occurs very rarely with neuter adjectives in s of the third declension, and only in connection with neuters of the second declension; as, Si quidquam non dico civilis sed humani esset. Liv.

NOTE 4. In the poets and in the prose writers later than Cicero, neuter adjectives in the plural number are sometimes followed by a genitive, either singular or plural, with a partitive signification; as, Extrema imperii, The frontiers of the empire. Tac. Pontes et viarum angusta, The bridges and the narrow parts of the roads. Id. Opaca locorum. Virg. Antiqua fœderum. Liv. Cuncta camporum. Tac. Exercent colles, atque horum asperitima pascunt. Virg. Cf. § 205, R. 9.

REM. 4. The adverbs satis, satis, pàrum, nîmis, abunde, largiter, affâtim, and partim, used partitively, are often followed by a genitive; as,

Sat ratiônis, Enough of reason. Virg. Satis eloquentiæ, pàrum sapientiæ, Enough of eloquence, (yet) but little wisdom. Sall. Nîmis insidiarum. Cic. Terroris et fraudis abunde est. Virg. Auri et argenti largiter. Plaut. Copiarum affâtim. Liv. Quum partim illorum mihi familiarissimi essent. Cic.

NOTE 1. The above words, though generally adverbs, seem, in this use, rather to be nouns or adjectives.

NOTE 2. (a.) The genitives gentium, terrârum, loci, and locorum, with certain adverbs of place, strengthen their meaning; as, Usquam terrarum. Just. Usquam gentium, Any where whatever. Plaut. Ubi terrarum sumus? Where in the world are we? Cic. Abire quo terrarum possent. Liv. Ubi sit loci. Plin. Eo loci, equivalent to eo loco, In that place. Tac. Eodem loci res est. Cic. Nescire quo loci esset. Id. But the last three examples might perhaps more properly be referred to Rem. 3.

(b.) The adverbs of place thus used are ubi, ubnam, ubicumque, ubiubi, ubivis, ubique, unde, usquam, nusquam, quo, quocumque, quovis, quodquo, aliquo, hic, huc, eo, eodem. Loci also occurs after ibi and ibidem; gentium after longe; as, Ibi loci, In that place. Plin. Abes longe gentium. Cic. So, minime gentium, By no means. Ter. Vicinia in the genitive is used by the comic writers after hic and huc; as, Hic proxima viciniæ. Plaut. Huc viciniæ. Ter. Cf. § 221, R. 3, (4.)

NOTE 3. Huc, eo, quo, when used figuratively to express a degree, are joined also with other genitives; as, Eo insolentiæ furorisque processit, He advanced to such a degree of insolence and madness. Plin. Huc enim malorum ventum est. Curt. Hucine rerum venimus? Have we come to this? Pers. Eo miseriarum venire, To such a pitch of misery. Sall. Quo æmentis progressi sitis. Liv.

NOTE 4. The genitives loci, locorum, and temporis, appear to be redundant after the adverbs adhuc, inde, interea, postea, tum, and tunc, in expressions denoting time; as, Adhuc locorum, Till now. Plaut. Inde loci, After that. Lucr. Interea loci, In the mean time. Ter. Postea loci, Afterwards. Sall. Tum temporis, and tunc temporis, At that time. Just. Locorum also occurs after id, denoting time; as, Ad id locorum, Up to that time. Sall. Cf. R. 3.

NOTE 5. When the genitive ejus occurs after quoad, in such connections as the following: Quoad ejus facere poteris. Cic.; or passively, Quoad ejus fieri possit, As far as may be. Cic.; the ejus refers to the preceding clause; literally as much of it as possible.

NOTE 6. Pridie and postridie, though reckoned adverbs, are followed by a genitive, depending on the noun dies contained in them; as, Pridie ejus diēi, lit. On the day before that day, i. e. The day before. Cic. Pridie insidiarum, The day before the ambush. Tac. Postridie ejus diēi, The next day. Cæs. When they are followed by an accusative, ante or post is understood. Cf. § 238, 1, (6.)

NOTE 7. Adverbs in the superlative degree, like their adjectives, are followed by a genitive; as, Optime omnium, Best of all. Cic. ✕

GENITIVE AFTER ADJECTIVES.

§ 213. A noun, limiting the meaning of an adjective, is put in the objective genitive, to denote the relation expressed in English by of, in, or in respect to; as,

Avidus laudis , Desirous of praise.	Plēna timōris , Full of fear.
Appētens glōriæ , Eager for glory.	Egēnus aquæ , Destitute of water.
Mēmōr virtutis , Mindful of virtue.	Doctus fandi , Skilful in speaking.

So, Nescia mens fātī, The mind ignorant in regard to fate. Virg. Impōtens iræ, lit. Powerless in respect to anger, i. e. unable to control it. Liv. Hōmīnes expertes vērītātis, Men destitute of truth. Cic. Lactis abundans, Abounding in milk. Virg. Terra fēraz arbōrum, Land productive of trees. Plin. Tēnaz prōpōstī vir, A man tenacious of his purpose. Hor. Eger ānīmī, Sick in mind. Liv. Lōcus mēdius jūgūli summiq̄ue lācērti, i. e. between. Ovid. Mōrum dīversus. Tac. Opērum solūtus. Hor. Liber lābōrum. Id. Intēger vitæ scēlērissq̄ue pūrus, Upright in life, and free from wickedness. Hor. Vini pollens Liber. Plaut.

From the above examples, it will be seen that the genitive after an adjective is sometimes translated by other words besides of, in, or in respect to, though the relation which it denotes remains the same. Cf. 211, R. 12.

REMARK 1. The following classes of adjectives, which, as denoting a relation to a thing, are called relative adjectives (§ 104, 18), are frequently limited by a genitive; viz. (1.) Verbals in ax; as, cāpax, ēdax, fēraz, fūgax, pervicax, tēnaz, etc.—(2.) Participials in ns, and a few in tus, with their compounds; as, āmāns, appētēns, cūpiēns, efficiēns, pōtiēns, impōtiēns, sitiēns;—consultus, doctus, solūtus.—(3.) Adjectives denoting desire or aversion; as, dēcrus, avidus, cūpidus, stūdiōsus; fastidiōsus:—participation; as, particeps, affinis, consors, exsors, expers, inops:—knowledge, experience, capacity, and their contraries; as, callidus, compos, consciūs, gnārus, ignārus, pēritus, impēritus, impos, pōtēns, impōtēns, prūdēns, imprūdēns, expertus, inexpertus, consciūs, insciūs, nesciūs, insolēns, insolūtus, insuētus, rūdis, sollers:—memory and forgetfulness; as, mēmōr, innēmōr, etc.:—certainty and doubt; as, certus, incertus, ambiguus, dūbius, suspensus:—care and negligence; as, anxiūs, solliticiūs, prōvidiūs, imprōvidiūs, sēcūriūs:—fear and confidence; as, pāvidiūs, timidiūs, trēpidiūs, impāvidiūs, fidēns, interritiūs:—guilt and innocence; as, noxiiūs, reus, suspectus, compertus, mānifestus, innociūs, innocēns, insons:—plenty and want; as, abundans, plēniūs, dāves, sātus, laryus, inops, egēniūs, inānis, pauper, parciūs, solūtus, vāciūs.

(a.) In the poets and later prose writers, many other adjectives, particularly those which express mental emotions, are in like manner limited by a genitive, especially by ānīmī, ingēniī, mentis, iræ, militiæ, belli, lābōris, rērum, acti, futuri, mōrum, and fidei.

REM. 2. The limiting genitive, by a Greek construction, sometimes denotes a cause or source, especially in the poets; as, Lassus mārīs, et viarū, militiæque. Hor. Fessus viæ. Stat. Fessus mārīs. Hor. Attōnitus serpentis. Sil. Mens interrīta lēti. Ovid.

REM. 3. Participles in ns, when used as such, take after them the same case as the verbs from which they are derived; as, Se āmāns, Loving himself. Cic. Māre terram appētēns. Id.

REM. 4. Instead of the genitive, denoting of, in, or in respect to, a different construction is sometimes used after many of these adjectives; as,

(1.) An infinitive or a subjunctive clause; as, Certus ire, Determined to go. Ovid. Cantāre peritū. Virg. Fēlicior unguēre tēla. Id. Anxius quid facto opus sit. Sall. Vice mēmor quam sis sēvi brēvis. Hor.—So aliēnus, avidus, callidus, cupidus, firmus, frēquens, gnārus, impōtens, inops, latus, largus, liber, pollens, mēmor, dubius, etc.

(2.) An accusative with a preposition; as, Ad rem avidior. Ter. Avidus in direptionē. Liv. Animus cōpar ad praecepta. Ovid. Ad cāsum fortunamque felix. Cic. Ad fraudem callidus. Id. Diligens ad custodiendum. Id. Negligentior in patrem. Just. Vir ad disciplinam peritus. Cic. Ad bella rādix. Liv. Potens in res bellicas. Id. Alacer ad mālēficia. Cic. Inter bellum et pacem nihil mēdium est. Id.—So with ad, fertilis, firmus, infirmus, potens, sterilis, etc.—with in, cupidus, parvus, potens, prodigus, etc.

(3.) An accusative without a preposition, chiefly in the poets; as, Nūchus membra. Bare as to his limbs. Virg. Os, hūmērosque deo similis. Id. Cātera fulens. Hor. Cuncta pollens. Sen. Ag. See § 234, II.

(4.) An ablative with a preposition; as, Avidus in pecūniis, Eager in regard to money. Cic. Anxius de famā. Quint. Rādix in jure civili. Cic. Peritus de agriculturā Varr. Prudens in jure civili. Cic. Reus de vi. Id. Purus ab cultu hūmāno. Liv. Certior factus de re. Cic. Sollicitus de re. Id. Super acēlere suspectus. Sall. Inops ab amicis. Cic. Pauper in aere. Hor. Mōdicus in cultu. Plin. Ab ūquis sterilis. Apul. Cōpiōsus a frumento. Cic. Ab equitātē firmus. Id. So with in, immōdicus, parvus, ūber:—with ab, aliēnus, beātus, ex-torris, immānis, inops, liber, nūchus, orbis, vācuus.

(5.) An ablative without a preposition; as, Arte rādix, Rude in art. Ovid. Regni crimine insons. Liv. Compos mente. Virg. Prudens consilio. Just. Eger pedibus. Sall. Prastans ingēnio. Cic. Mōdicus sēvēritātē. Tac. Nihil insidiis vācuum. Cic. Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus. Plant. Mēdus Pol-luce et Castore. Ovid. Cf. Rem. 5.

In many instances, the signification of the accusative and ablative after adjectives differs, in a greater or less degree, from that of the genitive.

REM. 5. As many of the adjectives, which are followed by a genitive, admit of other constructions, the most common use of each, with particular nouns, can, in general, be determined only by recourse to the dictionary, or to the classics. Some have,

(1.) The genitive only; as, bēnignus, cōpar, exors, impos, impōtens, ineditā-bilis, irritus, libērālis, mōdicus, mūnificus, praelargus, and many others.

(2.) The genitive more frequently; as, compos, consors, egēnus, exhēres, expers, fertilis, indigus, inops, parvus, particeps, pauper, prodigus, prosper, sterilis.

(3.) The genitive or ablative indifferently; as, dives, fecundus, ferax, im-mūnis, inānis, immōdicus, jūvūsus, largus, nimius, opulentus, peritus, plenus, po-tens, purus, refertus, satur, ūber, vācuus.

(4.) The ablative more frequently; as, abundans, aliēnus, cassus, cōpiōsus, extorris, firmus, felus, frēquens, grātidus, grāvis, infirmus, liber, lūcuples, latus, macius, nūchus, onustus, orbis, pollens, siliātus, truncus, vālidus, vācuus.

(5.) The ablative only; as, beātus, creber, densus, mūtūlus, tūmidus, turgidus.

For the ablative after many of the preceding adjectives, see § 250.

REM. 6. Some adjectives usually limited by a dative, sometimes take a genitive instead of the dative; as, similis, dissimilis, etc. See § 222, R. 2.

REM. 7. Many adjectives in addition to the genitive or ablative denoting of or in respect to, take also another case to express a different relation; as, Mens sibi conscia recti. Cf. § 222, R. 3. Conscius has also sometimes the dative instead of the genitive of the thing; as, conscius huic faciñori. Cic.

GENITIVE AFTER VERBS

§ 214. Sum, and verbs of valuing, are followed by a genitive, denoting degree of estimation; as,

A me argentum, quanti est, sūmō, Take of me so much money as (he) is worth. Ter. Magni aestimābat pecūniam, He valued money greatly. Cic. Ager nunc plūris est, quam tunc fuit. Id. Tanti est, It is worth so much; and, absolutely, It is worth while. Cic. Hūjus non fācio, I don't care that for it.

REMARK 1. (a.) Verbs of valuing are joined with the genitive, when the value is expressed in a general or indefinite manner by:—

(1.) A neuter adjective of quantity; as, tanti, quanti, plūris, minōris, magni, permagni, plūrimi, maximī, minimī, parvi, tantidem, quancūque, quantivis, quantūlibet, but only very rarely multi and mājoris.

(2.) The nouns assis, flocci, nauci, nihili, plī, tērucii, and also pensi and hūjus.

(b.) But if the price or value of a thing is a definite sum, or is expressed by a substantive, other than assis, flocci, etc., it is put in the ablative. Cf. § 252.

REM. 2. The verbs of valuing are aestimo, existimo, dūco, fācio, fio, hābeo, pendo, pūto, depūto, taxo. Thus, Ut quanti quisque se ipse fāciat, tanti fiat ab amicis, That as much as each one values himself, so much he should be valued by his friends. Cic. Sed quia parvi id dūceret. Id. Hōmīnes si magni non putamus. Id. Non assis fācis? Catull. Nēque quod dixi, flocci existimat. Plaut.

NOTE 1. (a.) The phrase aqui boni, or aqui bonique fācio, or consūlo, I take a thing in good part, am satisfied with it, may be classed with genitives of value; as, Nos aequi bonique fācimus. Liv. So, Boni consūluit Plin.—(b.) A genitive of price is joined also to ceno, hābito, doceo, etc.; as, quanti hābitas? what rent do you pay for your house or lodging? quanti docei? what are his terms in teaching?

NOTE 2. After aestimo, the ablatives magno, permagno, parvo, nihilo, are sometimes used instead of the genitive; as, Dāta magno aestimas, accepta parvo. Sen. Pro nihilo, also, occurs after dūco, hābeo, and pūto; and nihil with aestimo and mōror. Cf. § 231, R. 5.

NOTE 3. The neuter adjectives above enumerated, and hūjus, may be referred to a noun understood, as prētiū, aeris, pondēris, mōmenti; and may be considered as limiting a preceding noun, also understood, and denoting some person or thing; as, Aestimo te magni, i. e. hōmīnem magni prētiū. Scio ejus ordīnū auctōritātem semper apud te magni fuisse, i. e. rem magni mōmenti. The words assis, etc., may also be considered as depending on an omitted noun; as, prētiū, rem, etc.

REM. 3. Statements of price, also, when general or indefinite, are put in the genitive after verbs of buying, selling, letting, and hiring; as, Mercatōres non tantidem vendunt, quanti emērunt. Cic. Nulla pestis hūmāno gēnēri plūris stēlit, quam ira. Sen.

NOTE 1. Verbs of buying, selling, etc., are emo, vendo, the neutral passive, veneo, consto, prāsto, and liceo, to be exposed for sale.

NOTE 2. With verbs of buying, selling, etc., the ablatives magno, permagno, plūrimo, parvo, minimō, and nihilo are often used instead of the genitive; as, Non pōtest parvo res magna constāre. Sen. Quanti emēre possum minimō? What is the lowest price I can buy at? Plaut. Sometimes also the adverbs cāre, bēne, and māle take the place of the genitive or ablative of price.

—§ 215. (1.) Misereor, miseresco, and the impersonals misereor, pœnitel, pūdet, tædet, and piget, are followed by a genitive of the object in respect to which the feeling is exercised; as,

Miseremini sociorum, Pity the allies. Cic. Miserescite regis, Pity the king. Virg. Mea mater, tui me miseret, mei piget, I pity you, and am dissatisfied with myself. Acc. Eos ineptiarum pœnitel. Cic. Frâtris me pūdet pigetque. Ter. Me civitatis morum piget tædetque. Sall. So the compound distædet; Haud quod tui me, neque dōmi distædeat. Plaut.; and the passive; Numquam suscepti negotii eum pertæsum est. Nep. Lentitudinis eorum pertæsa. Tac. Miseritum est me tuarum fortunarum. Ter. Odio te fratrum misereatur. Cic. Pūdet (me) deorum hominumque, I am filled with shame in reference both to gods and men. Liv.

NOTE 1. Miserescit is sometimes used in the same manner as miseret; as, Nunc te miserecat mei. Ter. Misereo, as a personal verb, also, occurs with a genitive; as, Ipse sui miseret. Lucr.

REMARK. The genitive after the above impersonals seems to depend on some general word constituting the grammatical subject of such verbs, and signifying, matter, business, fact, case, circumstances, conduct, character, etc., cf. § 211, R. 8, (3); and § 209, R. 3, (4.) Instead of the genitive with its omitted noun, an infinitive or clause with quod or with an interrogative particle is sometimes used as a subject; as, Non me hoc jam dicere pūdebit. Cic. Non pœnitel me quantum profecerim, I am not dissatisfied with my progress. Id. These verbs have also sometimes a nominative; as, Me quidem hæc conditio non pœnitel. Plaut. Non te hæc pūdent? Ter.

NOTE 2. Miseret occurs with an accusative of the object, instead of a genitive; as, Menedemi vicem miseret me. Ter. So, also, Pertæsus ignaviam suam. Suet.

NOTE 3. (a.) These impersonals, as active verbs, take also an accusative of the person exercising the feeling which they express. See § 229, R. 6.—(b.) And sometimes also the accusative of the neuter pronouns and of nilil, denoting to what degree the feelings are exercised; as, Sequitur ut nihil (adpientem,) pœniteat. Cic. Cf. § 232, (3.)

(2.) Sātāgo is sometimes followed by a genitive denoting in what respect; as,

Is sātāgi rērum suarum, He is busily occupied with his own affairs. Ter. This compound is often written separately, and in either case the genitive seems to depend upon sat. See § 212, R. 4. Agito, with sat, in like manner, is followed by a genitive; as, Nunc agitas sat tūte tuarum rērum. Plaut.

§ 216. Rēcorder, mēmīni, rēmīniscor, and oblīviscor, are followed by a genitive or accusative of the object remembered or forgotten; as,

Flāgitiorum suorum rēcorder. Cic. Omnes gradus ætatis rēcorder tua, I call to mind all the periods of your life. Id. Mēmīni vivorum, I am mindful of the living. Id. Nūmeros mēmīni, I remember the measure. Virg. Rēmīnisci vltēris fāmæ. Nep. Dulces moriens rēmīniscitur Argos. Virg. Rēmīnisci amicos. Ovid. Oblitus sui. Virg. Injūriarum oblīviscitur. Nep. Oblīviscor injūrias. Cic. Oblīviscere Graios. Virg.

REMARK 1. (a.) When the thing remembered or forgotten is expressed by a neuter pronoun or adjective, it is always put in the accusative. An accusative of the person with these verbs is unusual, except that mēmīni, when referring to a contemporary, always takes an accusative of the person; as, Cinnam mēmīni. Cic.

(b.) An infinitive or a dependent clause sometimes follows these verbs; as, Memento mihi supplicias ferre. Plaut. Esse quoque in fatis reminiscitur, affore tempus, quo mare, etc. Ovid. Oblii quid deceat. Hor. Memini te scribere. Cic. Quæ sum passura recordor. Ovid.

REM. 2. Recordor and memini, to remember, are sometimes followed by an ablative with de; as, Petimus ut de suis liberis recordentur. Cic. De palli memento. Plaut.

REM. 3. Memini, signifying to make mention of, has a genitive, or an ablative with de; as, Næque huius rei meminit. poetæ. Quint. Meministi de exstibus. Cic. With venit mihi in mentem, the person or thing may be made the subject of venit; as, Miseræ ubi venit in mentem mortis metus. Plaut. Venit hoc mihi in mentem; or an infinitive or subjunctive clause may supply the place of the subject:—for the genitive with this phrase, as in Solet mihi in mentem venire illius temporis, see § 211, R. 8, (5.) The genitive with recordor is very rare.

§ 217. Verbs of accusing, convicting, condemning, and acquitting, with the accusative of the person, are followed by a genitive denoting the crime; as,

Arguit me furti. He charges me with theft. Alium accusat probri. He accuses another of villany. Meipsum inertie condemno. Cic.

REMARK 1. (a.) To this rule belong the verbs of Accusing; accuso, ago, arcesso, arguo, cito, defero, increpo, incuso, installo, postulo, and more rarely alligo, anquiro, astringo, capto, increpto, urgeo, interrogo, reum ago or facio, alius diem dico, cum aliquo ago.—Convicting; convincio, coarguo, prehendo, teneor, obstringor, obligor.—Condemning; damno, condemno, infamo, and more rarely iudico, noto, plector.—Acquitting; absolvo, libero, purgo, and rarely solvo. To the verbs of accusing, etc., may be added the adjectives denoting guilt and innocence, which likewise take a genitive. Cf. § 213, R. 1, (3.)

(b.) The genitives which follow these verbs are, audacia, avaritia, cædis, falsi, furti, ignavia, impietatis, injuriarum, levitatis, majestatis, maleficii, mendacii, parricidii, peccati, peculatus, probri, proditiõnis, rei capitalis, repetundarum, sceleris, stulticia, temeritatis, timoris, vanitatis, veneficii, etc.

REM. 2. (a.) Instead of the genitive, an ablative with de is often used after accuso, defero, anquiro, arguo, postulo, damno, condemno, absolvo, and purgo; as, Accusare de negligentia. Cic. De vi condemnati sunt. Id. De repetundis est postulatus. Id. Sometimes with in, after accuso, coarguo, convinco, teneor, and deprehendor; as, In quo te accuso (Cic.); and after libero, with a or ab; as, A scelere liberati sumus. Cic. Accuso and damno with inter occur in the phrases inter sicarios accusare, etc., to charge with assassination.

(b.) With some of the above verbs, an ablative without a preposition is often used; as, Libere culpæ. Cic. Crimen quo argui posset. Nep. Proconsulem postulaverat repetundis. Tac. This happens especially with general words denoting crime; as, scelus, maleficcium, peccatum, etc.; as, Me peccato solvo. Liv. The ablatives crimine and nõmine, without a preposition, are often inserted before the genitive; as, Arcessere aliquem crimine ambitus. Liv. Nõmine sceleris conjurationisque damnati. Cic.; and when not so inserted they are to be understood.

(c.) Sometimes a clause takes the place of the genitive; as, Eum accusabant quod societatem fecisset. Nep. So the infinitive with the accusative. Quid? quod me—arguit serum accessisse? Ovid.

REM. 3. (a.) The punishment is commonly expressed by the genitive; as, capitis, mortis, nulla, pecunia, quadrupli, octupli; but sometimes by the ablative; as, capite, morte, multa, pecuniâ: and always by this case when a definite sum is mentioned; as, quindécim millibus arie: or the accusative with ad or in;

as, ad penam, ad bestias, ad metalla, in metallum, in expensas;—sometimes, though rarely, in the poets, by the dative; as, Damnatus morti. Lucr.—(b.) Voti or votum, and less frequently voto or votis damnari, signifies 'to be condemned to fulfil one's vow,' and is consequently equivalent to 'to obtain what one wishes.' So also in the active voice, Damnabis tu quoque vota. Virg. Perdo is used by Plautus as a verb of accusing, with capitis; Quem ego capitis perdam, will charge with a capital offence. So capite or capitis periclitari, Plaut., signifies 'to be in peril of one's life.' With plecto and plector, caput is used in the ablative only.—(c.) Damni infecti is put in the genitive (depending upon namine understood) after adiciendo, promitto, stipulari, repromitto, and caveo; as, Si quis in patrie demoliendo damni infecti promiserit. Cic.

REM. 4. Accuso, incuso, and instimulo, instead of the genitive, sometimes take the accusative, especially of a neuter pronoun; as, Si id me non accusas. Plaut. Quæ me incusaveras. Ter. Sic me instimulare falsum facinus. Plaut. See § 231, Rem. 5.

REM. 5. (a.) The following verbs of accusing, etc., are not followed by a genitive of the crime, but, as active verbs, by an accusative:—condemnare, carpere, corripio, crimino, culpo, excuso, multo, punio, reprehendo, sagillo, tazo, tradico, vituperare; as, Culpæ infecunditatem agrorum. Colum. Excusare errorem et dolorescentiam. Liv.

(b.) This construction also sometimes occurs with accuso, incuso, arguo, and inarguo; as, Ejus dicitur peritiamque accusarat. Nep. Culpam arguo. Liv. With multo, the punishment is put in the ablative only, without a preposition; as, Exstiliæ, morte multantur. Cic.

§ 218. Verbs of admonishing, with the accusative of the person, are followed by a genitive of the person or thing respecting which the admonition is given; as,

Milites temporis monet, He admonishes the soldiers of the occasion. Tac. Admonēbat alium egestatis, alium cupiditatis suæ. Sall.

NOTE. The verbs of admonishing are monéo, admoneo, commoneo, and commonefacio.

REMARK 1. Instead of the genitive, verbs of admonishing sometimes have an ablative with de; as, De sede Telluris me admoneo. Cic.—sometimes an accusative of a pronoun or adjective in the neuter gender; as, Eos hoc monéo. Cic. Illud me admoneo. Id.; and in the passive, Multa admoneamur. Id.—rarely also a noun in the accusative; as, Eam rem nos locus admonuit. Sall. 79

REM. 2. Instead of the genitive, verbs of admonishing are also often followed by an infinitive or clause; as, Soror alma monet succedere Lauso Turnum, His sister admonishes Turnus to take the place of Lausus. Virg. Monet, ut suspensiones vitet. Cæs. Sed eos hoc monéo, desinant furere. Cic. Monet rationem frumenti esse habendam. Hirt. Immortalia ne speres monet annus. Hor. Discipulos id unum monéo, ut, etc. Quint. Monéo quid facto opus sit. Ter. See § 273, 2.

§ 219. Refert and intérest are followed by a genitive of the person or thing whose concern or interest they denote; as,

Humanitatis refert, It concerns human nature. Plin. Refert omnium admoveri in malos. Tac. Intérest omnium recte facere, It concerns all to do right. Cic.

REMARK 1. Instead of the genitive of the substantive pronouns, the adjective pronouns mea, tua, sua, nostra, and vestra, are used; as,

Mea nihil refert, It does not concern me. Ter. Illud mea magni intérest, That greatly concerns me. Cic. Tua et mea maxime intérest, te valere. Cic. Magnus reipublice intérest quam mea. Id. Magni intérest Cicéronis, vel mea potius, vel mehercule utriusque, me intervenire dicenti. Id.

NOTE. Rēfert rarely occurs with the genitive, but often with the pronouns mea, tua, etc., and most frequently without either such pronoun or a genitive; as, quid rēfert? magni or magnopere rēfert.

REM. 2. In regard to the case of these adjective pronouns, grammarians differ. Some suppose that they are in the accusative plural neuter, agreeing with commōda or the like understood; as, Intērest mea, i. e. est inter mea, It is among my concerns. Rēfert tua, i. e. rēfert se ad tua, It refers itself to your concerns. Others think that they are in the ablative singular feminine, agreeing with re, causa, etc., understood, or in the dative. The better opinion seems to be, that they are in the accusative feminine for meam, tuam, suam, etc., that rēfert was originally rem fert, and that hence the e of rēfert is long.

REM. 3. Instead of the genitive, an accusative with ad is sometimes used; as, Ad hōnōrem meum intērest quam primum urbem me venire. Cic. Quid id ad me aut ad meam rem rēfert. Plaut.—sometimes, though rarely, an accusative without a preposition; as, Quid te igitur rētūit? Plaut—or a dative; as, Dic quid rēferat intra nātūre fines viventi. Hor.

REM. 4. The subject of these verbs, or the thing which is of interest or importance, is sometimes expressed by a neuter pronoun; as, Id mea minime rēfert. Ter. Hoc vehēmenter intērest reipūblica. Cic.; and sometimes by an infinitive with its accusative, or ut, or an interrogative particle with a subjunctive clause; as, multum mea intērest te esse diligētem, or ut diligens sis, or utrum diligens sis nec ne. When the infinitive alone is used with rēfert or intērest, the preceding subject is understood; as, omnium intērest recte facere, scil. se.

REM. 5. The degree of interest or importance is expressed by adverbs or by neuter adjectives, etc., in the accusative or genitive; as, modis, magnopere, vehēmenter, parum, minime, etc.; multum, plus, plurimum, nihil, aliquid, etc.; tanti, quanti, magni, permagni, pluris. But minimo rēfert is found in Juv. 5, 123.

§ 220. Many verbs which are usually otherwise construed, are sometimes followed by a genitive. This rule includes

1. Certain verbs denoting an affection of the mind; ango, discrucior, excrucio, fallo, pendeo, which are followed by animi; dēcipior, dēsipio, fallor, fastidio, incideo, miror, vereo; as, Absurde facis, qui angas te animi. Plaut. Me animi fallit. Lucr. Dēcipitur lābōrum. Hor. Dēsipiēbam mentis. Plaut. Iustitiæ prius mirer bellæ lābōrum. Virg.

2. The following, in imitation of the Greek idiom; abstineo, dēsino, purgo. Hor.; dēsino. Virg.; laudo, prōhibeo. Sil.; lēvo, participo. Plaut.; libero. Liv.; dissolvo. Tibull.; compare liber lābōrum; opērum vācuis; pūrus scēlērīs. § 213.

3. Some verbs denoting to fill, to abound, to want or need, to free, which are commonly followed by an ablative. Such are abundo, cāreo, compleo, expleo, impleo, ēgeo, indūgeo, sātūro, obsātūro, scāleo; as, Adolēscētem suā tēmētātis implet, He fills the youth with his own rashness. Liv. Animum explese flammæ. Virg. Egeo consilii. Cic. Non tam artis indigēt quam lābōris. Id. See §§ 249 and 250, (2.)

4. Pōtior, which also is usually followed by an ablative; as, Urbis pōtiri, To make oneself master of the city. Sall. Pōtiri regni (Cic.), hostium (Sall.), verum, To make oneself master of the world. Cic. Pōtio (active) occurs in Plautus; as, Eum nunc pōtuit servitūtis, He has made him partaker of slavery. In the same writer, pōtuit est hostium signifies, 'he fell into the hands of the enemy.' So, also, Aliquem compōtūre prædæ or voti. App. So, Rarum dūptus est. Tac. Dōminātiōnis dūpti. Id. Regnāvīt pōpūlōrum. Hor.

GENITIVE OF PLACE.

§ 221. 1. The name of a town in which any thing is said to be, or to be done, if of the first or second declension and singular number, is put in the genitive; as,

Habitat Miletū. He lives at Miletus. Ter. Quid Rōmæ faciā? What can I do at Rome? Juv. Hercules Tyri maxime colitur. Cic.

NOTE. For the construction of nouns of the third declension or plural number, see § 254. The following appears to be the best explanation that has been given of this diversity of construction, depending solely on the number or declension of the noun. The name of the town 'where' or 'in which' is probably neither in the genitive nor the ablative, but always, as in Greek, in the dative. Since the genitive and dative are alike in the singular of the first declension and the dative and ablative plural are the same in all declensions, such examples as Rōmæ and Athēnis present no difficulty. In the third declension the dative and ablative singular were anciently alike, and in such ablatives as Anzūri, Carthāgini, Lacedæmōni, the old form remains, see § 82, Exc. 5, (c.) In the second declension there was an old dative in oi, as in Greek, which was commonly changed to o, but sometimes to i: and the latter is still found in nulli, uni, etc., see § 107, and in the adjective pronouns; as, illī, etc.

REMARK 1. Names of islands and countries are sometimes put in the genitive, like names of towns; as, Ithacæ victre, To live in Ithaca. Cic. Corcyra sumus. Id. Omnes plerimum Cypri vixit, Timotheus Lesbī. Nep. Quum Mithridates domum Chersōnēsi habuit. Id. Crētas jussit considere Apollo. Virg. Rōmæ Numidique faciēdra ejus mēmorat. Sall.

REM. 2. (a.) Instead of the genitive, the ablative of names of towns of the first and second declension and singular number, is sometimes, though rarely, used; as, Rex Tyro decēdit, The king dies at Tyre. Just. Et Cōrintho et Athēnis et Lacedæmōne nunciata est victōria. Id. Pons quem ille Abydo fecerat. Id. Hujus exemplar Rōmæ nullum habemus. Vitruv. Non Libya, non ante Tyro. Virg. For the explanation of this apparent anomaly, see the preceding note; in accordance with which it may be remarked, that the adverbs of place, ibi, ibi, ibidem, alibi, alibi, hic, illuc, istic, etc., appear from their form to be ancient datives.—(b.) When the noun is qualified by an adjective, it is put, not in the genitive, but in the ablative with in; as, In ipsā Alexandriā. Cic. And poetically without in, Genus Longā nostrum dōminābitur Albā. Virg.—(c.) When urbs, oppidum, lucus, etc., follow the genitive of place as appositions, they are put in the ablative either with, or, more rarely, without, in; as, Archias Antiōchus nātus est, celebri quondam urbe. Cic. Cives Rōmānos Neapōli, in celebrissimo oppido sæpe victimus. Id. But when in urbe, etc., precede the name of a town, the latter also is put in the ablative; as, In oppido Citio. Nep.; and but very rarely in the genitive; as, Cassius in oppido Antiōchiæ est,—in the town of Antioch. Cic., where the genitive depends on oppido.

REM. 3. The genitives dōmi, militiæ, belli, and hūmi, are construed like names of towns; as, Tēnuit se dōmi, He staid at home. Cic. Vir dōmi clārus. Liv. Spargit hūmi jussos dentes,—on the ground. Ovid. Militiæ et belli are thus used, especially when opposed to dōmi; as, Una semper militiæ et dōmi fuit,—both at home and in the camp. Ter. So Dōmi militiæque. Cic. Et dōmi et militiæ. Id. Militiæ dōmique. Liv. Militiæ et dōmi. Ter. Belli dōmique, in war and in peace. Hor.

(1.) Dōmi is thus used with the possessives meæ, tuæ, suæ, nostræ, vestræ, and aliēnæ; as, Dōmi nostræ vixit, He lived at my house. Cic. Apud eum sic fui tamquam meæ dōmi. Id. Sacrificium, quod allēnæ dōmi fieret invisere. Id. But with other adjectives, an ablative, generally with a preposition, is used; as, In viduā dōmo. Ovid. Paternā dōmo. Id. Sometimes also with the possessives; as, Meā in dōmo. Hor. In dōmo suā. Nep. So, instead of hūmi, 'upon the ground,' hūmo is sometimes used, with or without a preposition; as, In hūmo drēnded. Ovid. Sēdere hūmo nūdd. Id.

(2.) When a genitive denoting the possessor follows, either dōmi or in dōmo is used; as, Diprēhensus dōmī Cēsāris. Cic. Dōmī illius fuisti. Id. In dōmo Cēsāris. Id. In dōmo ejus. Nep.

(3.) The ablative dōmo for dōmī also occurs, but not in Cicero; as, Ego id nunc expēior dōmo. Plaut. Dōmo se tēnere. Nep. Dōmo abditus. Suet. Bello for belli is found in Livy—Dōmī bellōque. So, also, hūmo for hūmī; Strātus hūmo. Stat. Figit hūmo plantas. Virg.: and in hūmo lūmen figit. Ovid.

(4.) Terræ is sometimes used like hūmī; as, Sacra terræ cēlāctimus. Liv. Projectus terræ. Virg. Ignēs terræ condit. Luc. So, also, arēnæ; Truncum reliquit arēnæ. Virg.: and vicinīæ; Proximæ vicinīæ hābitat. Plaut.

(5.) The genitive of names of towns, dōmī, militiæ, etc., is supposed by some to depend on a noun understood; as, urbe, oppido, castris, sōlo, lōco, tempore, etc., but see a different explanation above in Note.

GENITIVE AFTER PARTICLES.

II. Certain adverbs are followed by the genitive. See § 212, R. 4.

III. The genitive plural sometimes depends on the preposition tēnus; as, Cūndrum tēnus, As far as Cumæ. Coel. Orūrum tēnus. Virg. Lātērum tēnus. Id. Urbium Corcyræ tēnus. Liv.—For the ablative after tēnus, and for the place of the preposition, see § 241, and R. 1.

DATIVE.

§ 222. 1. The dative is the case of reference, as it denotes the object with reference to which the subject acts, or in reference to which it possesses any specified quality; or, in other words, the object for which, to the benefit or loss of which, any thing is or is done. Hence, in distinction from the dative of the end (§ 227) the dative of reference is called dativus commōdi et incommōdi, the dative of advantage and disadvantage; as,

Scrībo vōbis hunc librum, I write this book for you. Prōsum tibi, or Tibi utilis sum, I am useful to you.

2. Hence the dative of advantage and disadvantage may be used (a) with adjectives and particles whose meaning is incomplete unless the object is mentioned in reference to which the quality exists. (b) With verbs both transitive and intransitive. If transitive they take an accusative of the nearer and a dative of the remoter object, if intransitive they take a dative only. (c) With certain verbs compounded with prepositions, after which the dative is used instead of the case which the preposition, if separate, would govern. (d) After a few verbal substantives derived from verbs which govern a dative.

DATIVE AFTER ADJECTIVES.

3. A noun limiting the meaning of an adjective, is put in the dative, to denote the object to which the quality is directed; as,

Utilis agris, Useful to the fields Juv. Jucundus amicis, Agreeable to his friends. Murt. Inimicus quieti, Unfriendly to rest. Id. Charta inutilis scribendo, Paper not useful for writing. Plin.

NOTE. The dative is commonly translated by the prepositions to or for; but sometimes by other prepositions, or without a preposition.

REMARK 1. Adjectives signifying useful, pleasant, friendly, fit, like, inclined, ready, easy, clear, equal, and their opposites, also those signifying near, many compounded with con, and verbals in bilis, are followed by the dative; as,

Felix tuis, Propitious to your friends. Virg. Oratio ingrata Gallis, A speech displeasing to the Gauls. Cæs. Amicus tyrannidi, Friendly to tyranny. Nep. Labori inhâbilis, Unsuitable to labor. Colum. Patri similis, Like his father. Cic. Nihil tam est Lysiae diversum, quam Isocrâtes. Aptum temporî. Id. Malo pronus. Sen. Promptus seditiôni. Tac. Cuivis facile est. Ter. Mihi certum est. Cic. Par fratri tuo. Id. Falsa veris finitima sunt. Id. Oculi concordes corpori. Colum. Multis bonis flebilis. Hor. Mors est terribilis iis, quorum, etc. Cic.

(a.) The following are some of the adjectives included in Rem. 1, viz. grâtus, acceptus, dulcis, jucundus, latus, suavis; ingrâtus, insuavis, injucundus, molestus, grâvis, acerbus, odiosus, tristis;—âttlis, inutilis, bonus, adlâber, adlâtâris, fructuosus; cålâmitôsus, damnosus, funestus, noxius, pestifer, perniciosus, exitiosus;—amicus, benévôlus, cârus, familiâris, æquus, fidus, fidelis, propitiûs, secundus; inimicus, adversus, æmulus, alienus, contrârius, infestus, infidus, iniquus, iratus;—aptus, accommodâtus, appôsitus, habilis, idôneus, opportûnus; ineptus, inhâbilis, importûnus, inconveniens;—æquâlis, par, impar, dispar, similis, dissimilis, abstmilis, discolor;—pronus, prælivis, præpensus, promptus, parâtus;—facilis, difficilis;—âpertus, conspicuus, manifestus, perspicuus, obcûrus, certus, compertus, notus, ambiguus, dubius, ignôtus, incertus, insôlitus;—vicinus, finitimus, confinis, terminus, propior, proximus, cognâtus, concolor, concors, congruus, consanguineus, consensuêus, consôsus, convênies, contiguus, continuus, continens.

(b.) Many adjectives of other significations, including some compounds of ob, sub, and super, as obnoxius, obviûs, subjectus, supplex, and superates, are also followed by a dative of the object.

(c.) After verbals in bilis, the dative is usually rendered by the preposition by; as, Tibi credibilis sermo, A speech credible to you, i. e. worthy to be believed by you. Ovid.

(d.) The expression dicto audiens, signifying obedient, is followed by the dative; as, Syracusani nobis dicto audientes sunt. Cic. Audiens dicto fui jussis magistratuum. Nep. In this phrase, dicto is a dative limiting audiens, and the words dicto audiens seem to form a compound equivalent to obediens, and, like that, followed by a dative; thus, Nec plebs nobis dicto audiens atque obediens sit. Liv. So dicto obediens; as, Futura es dicto obediens, ammon, patri. Plaut.

REM. 2. (a.) The adjectives æquâlis, affinis, alienus, cognominis, communis, contrârius, fidus, insuetus, par, dispar, peculiâris, proprius, propinquus, sacer, similis, assimilis, constmilis, socius, vicinus, superstes, supplex, and some others, instead of a dative of the object, are sometimes followed by a genitive; as, Par hujus, Equal to him. Lucan. Proprium est orâtôris ornate dicere. Cic. But most of these words, when thus used, seem rather to be taken substantively; as, Æquâlis ejus, His contemporary. Cic.

(b.) Similis, assimilis, constmilis, dissimilis, par and dispar, take the genitive, when an internal resemblance, or a resemblance in character or disposition, is to be expressed, and hence we always find mei, tui, sui, nostri, vestri, similis; as, Plures reges Rômuli quam Nûmæ similes. Liv.

(c.) Amicus, inimicus, and familiâris, owing to their character as substantives, take a genitive even in the superlative; as, Homo amicissimus nostrorum hominum,—very friendly to our countrymen. Cic. On the other hand, hostis, though a substantive, is sometimes used like an adjective, being modified by an adverb, and taking an object in the dative; as, Expectantibus omnibus quamnam esset tam impius, tam demens, tam diis hominibusque hostis, qui, etc. Cf. § 277, R. 1.

REM. 3. Some adjectives with the dative are followed by another case denoting a different relation; as, Mens sibi conscia recti, A mind conscious to itself of rectitude. Virg. See § 218, R. 7.

REM. 4. Many adjectives, instead of the dative of the object, are often followed by an accusative with a preposition.

(1.) Adjectives signifying useful, fit, and the opposite, take an accusative of the thing with ad, but only a dative of the person; as, Homo ad nullam rem utilis. Cic. Locus aptus ad insidias. Id.

(2.) Adjectives denoting motion or tendency, take an accusative with ad more frequently than a dative; as, Piger ad poenas, ad præmia velox, Ovid; Ad aliquem morbum præclivior, Cic.; Ad omne facinus præcursus, Id.; Præonus ad fidem, Liv.;—sometimes with in; as, Clæ in pugnam. Sil.

(3.) Many adjectives, signifying an affection of the mind, may have an accusative of the object with in, erga, or adversus, instead of the dative; as, Fidelis in filios. Just. Mater acerba in suos partus. Ovid. Gratus erga me. Cic. Gratum adversus te. Id. So Disimilis in dominum. Tac.

(4.) Adjectives signifying like, equal, common, etc., when plural, are often followed by the accusative with inter; as, Inter se similes. Cic. Hæc sunt inter eos communia. Id. Inter se diversi. Id.

REM. 5. Propius and proximus, instead of the dative, have sometimes, like their primitive prope, an accusative; as, Quod vitium propius virtutem erat. Sall. P. Crassus proximus mare Oceanum hiemarat. Cæs. Ager, qui proximus finem Mægälopölitærum est. Liv. Cf. § 238, 1.

REM. 6. (a.) Some adjectives, instead of the dative, have at times an ablative with a preposition. Thus, par, communis, consentaneus, discors, with cum; as, Quem parem cum liberis fecisti. Sall. Consentaneum cum iis literis. Cic. Civitis secum discors. Liv. So alienus and diversus with a or ab; as, Alienus a me, Ter.; A ratione diversus, Cic.; or without a preposition; as, Alienum nostræ amicitia. Id.—(b.) Frætus, which regularly takes the ablative, is in Livy construed with the dative; as, fortunæ frætus; nulli rei frætus, etc. Cf. § 244.—(c.) The participial adjectives junctus and conjunctus, instead of the dative, take sometimes the ablative either with or without cum.

REM. 7. Idem is sometimes followed by the dative, chiefly in the poets; as, Jupiter omnibus idem. Virg. Invitum qui servat, idem facit occidenti. Hor. In the first example, omnibus is a dative of the object; in the second, the dative follows idem, in imitation of the Greek construction with αὐτός, and is equivalent to quod occidens, or quod facit is, qui occidit. Similis is construed in the same manner in Hor. Sat. 1, 8, 122. Idem is generally followed not by a case, but by qui, ac, atque, ut, quasi, or quam; sometimes by the preposition cum. Cf. § 207, R. 27, (d.) Similis and par are sometimes, like idem, followed by ac and atque.

REM. 8. Some verbal substantives are followed by the dative, when derived from verbs governing the dative; as, Justitia est obtemperatio scriptis legibus institutisque populorum. Cic. Traditio amicuj rei alteri. Id. Exprobratio cuicumque veteris fortune. Liv.

NOTE. A dative of the object often follows esse and other verbs, in connection with a predicate nominative or accusative, but such dative is dependent, not on the noun, but on the verb. Cf. § 227, R. 4.

DATIVE AFTER VERBS.

§ 223. A noun limiting the meaning of a verb, is put in the dative, to denote the object to or for which any thing is, or is done; as,

Mea domus tibi patet, My house is open to you. Cic. Pars optare libum tecto, A part choose a site for a building. Virg. Tibi seris, tibi metis, You sow for yourself, you reap for yourself. Plaut. Licet nemini contra patriam ducere exercitum, It is not lawful for any one to lead an army against his country. Cic. Hoc tibi promitto, I promise you this. Id. Heret latèri letâlis arundo. Virg. Surdo fabulam narras. Hor. Mihi responsum dedit. Virg. Sic vos non vobis fertis aratra, boves. Id. Omnihus bonis expedit salvam esse rempublicam. Cic. Aptat habendo ensem. Virg.

NOTE. The dative is thus used after all verbs, whether transitive or intransitive, personal or impersonal, and in both voices, provided their signification admits a reference to a remoter object, for whom or to whose benefit or injury any thing is done. In the passive voice, from their nature, neuter verbs can only be so construed impersonally. Cf. § 142, 1, and § 222, 2.

REMARK 1. The dative after many verbs is rendered not by to or for, but by other prepositions, or without a preposition. Many intransitive Latin verbs are translated into English by verbs transitive, and the dative after them is usually rendered like the object of a transitive verb.—Most verbs after which the signs to and for are not used with the dative, are enumerated in this and the following sections.

REM. 2. Many verbs signifying to favor, please, trust, assist, and their contraries, also to command, obey, serve, resist, threaten, and be angry, take a dative of the object.

NOTE. The neuter verbs comprehended in this rule generally express in the verbal form the meaning of those adjectives, which are followed by the dative, (cf. § 222, R. 1.) Thus, (a.) Illa tibi favet, She favors you, or is favorable to you. Ovid. Mihi placebat Pompeñius, minime displicebat. Cic. Qui sibi fidit. Hor. Non licet sui commodi causâ nocere alteri. Cic. Non invidetur illi etati sed etiam favetur. Id. Desperat salutis suae. Id. Næque mihi vestra decreta auxiliantur. Sall. Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique. Hor. Obedire et parere voluntati. Cic. Quoniam factioni inimicorum resistere nequiverit. Sall. Mihi minabatur. Cic. Irasci inimicis. Cæs.

(b.) So Adulor, assentior, blandior, commodo, faveo, gratificor, grator, gratilor, and its verbal gratulabundus, ignosco, indulgeo, lenocinor, palpor, parco, plaudo, respondeo, studeo, supplicastor; amulor, incommodo, invideo, noceo, obsum, officio;—arrideo, placeo; displiceo;—credo, fido, confido; despero, diffido;—adminicilor, auxilior, medeor, medicor, opitilor, patrocinor, prosum, subvenio, succorro; dæsum, insidior;—impéro, mando, modèror, præcipio, tempéro; ausculto, morigëror, obedio, obsecundo, obsequor, obtempéro; pareo, dicto audiens sum;—ancillor, famulor, ministro, servio, inservio, præstolor;—adversor, refragor, obsto, obrecto, relictor, renitor, repugno, resisto, and, chiefly in the poets, bello, certo, luctor, pugno;—minor, comminor, interminor;—trascor, succenseo, sûmâchor.—To these may be added æquo, dilæquo, convictor, dëgënero, exceßo, nubo, suppedito, prævaricor, recipio (to promise), renuncio, suadeo, persuadeo, dissuadeo, supplicor, vaco, videor, and sometimes misceo and lateo;—also the impersonals accidit, convénit, condacit, contingit, dæcet, dilet, expedit, licet, libet, or libet, liquet, placet, etc.—(c.) Intransitive verbs governing a dative are often used impersonally in the passive with the same case; as, mihi invidetur, I am envied. Mihi male dicitur, I am reviled. Mihi parcitur, I am spared. Hor. Hoc persuadetur mihi, I am persuaded of this.

(1.) (a.) Many of the above verbs, which, as intransitive, take the dative, sometimes become transitive and are followed by an accusative; as, adulor, ausculto, blandior, dëgënero, despero, indulgeo, lateo, medeor, medicor, modèror, obrecto, præstolor, prövideo, etc.; as, Adulâri aliquem. Cic. Hanc causâ dëgëneres. Ovid. Indulgeo me. Ter. Hujus adventum præstolans. Cæs. Pröviderè rem frumentariâ. Id.—Sometimes also by a preposition and the ablative or accusative; as, A Stölcis dëgënerârû Pânatius. Cic. De repüblicâ desperâre. Id. Obrectârunt inter se. Nep.—or by a dependent clause; as, Quæ desperat traciata nitescere posse, relinquit. Hor.

(b.) Others, as transitive verbs, have, with the dative, an accusative, expressed or understood; as, impéro, mando, ministro, minor, comminor, interminor, precipio, recipio, renuncio, etc.; as, Equites imperat civitatibus; where cogēdos is perhaps to be supplied. He enjoins upon the states the providing of cavalry. Cæs. See § 274, R. 5. Ministrare victum dāci. Varr. Dēflagratiōnem urbi et Italia toti minabatur. Cic.

(c.) Equo and daquo are construed with the accusative and either the dative or cum with the ablative.—Invideo takes either a single dative of the person or thing, a dative of the person and an accusative of the thing; as, Honorem mihi invident. Hor.; or, when invidere is used in the sense of pride, a dative of the person and an ablative of the thing; as, Non inviderunt laude sua mulieribus. Liv. In Horace, by a Greek construction, the genitive is once used instead of the accusative or ablative of the thing; as, Nēque ille sēpōssit cictris nec longa invidet avena.

(d.) Cēdo, used transitively, takes a dative of the person and an accusative of the thing; but sometimes the thing is expressed by the ablative; as, cēdere dāci possessionē hortorum. So, also, concedo tibi locum, or concedo tibi loco.

(2.) Many verbs which, from their significations, might be included in the above classes, are, as transitive verbs, only followed by an accusative; as, dilecto, jūvo, adjūvo, adjūto, ludo, offendo, etc.—Jūbeo is followed by the accusative with an infinitive, and sometimes by the accusative alone, or the dative with the infinitive or subjunctive; as, Jūbeo te bene sperāre. Cic. Lea jūbet ea quæ faciēdas sunt. Id. Ubi Britannico jussit exurgere. Tac. Quibus jussit, ut instantibus resistērent. Id.—Fido and confido are often followed by the ablative, with or without a preposition; as, Fidere cursu. Ovid. Cf. § 245.

§ 224. Many verbs compounded with these eleven prepositions, ad, antē, cōn, in, intēr, ob, post, prae, prō, sub, and supēr, are followed by the dative; as,

Annus cēptis, Be favorable to our undertakings. Virg. Rōmānis equitibus lītēras affēruntur, Letters are brought to the Roman knights. Cic. Anticellere omnibus, To excel all. Id. Anticellit iræ religionem. Nep. Audetque viris concurrere virgo. Virg. Exercitum exercitui, dūces dūcibus comparare. Liv. Imminet his aer. Ovid. Pecōri signum impressit. Virg. Nox praelio intervēnit. Liv. Interdixit histrionibus scenam. Suet. Meis commodis officis et obstat. Cic. Cum se hostium telis objēcissent. Id. Posthūmū mea seria ludo. Virg. Certāmini præsēdit. Suet. Hibernis Labienum præsposuit. Cæs. Gēnibus procumbere. Ovid. Miseris succurrere disco. Virg. Iis subsidia submillebat. Cæs. Timidis supervēnit Eggle. Virg.

NOTE 1. This rule implies that the compound retains the meaning of the preposition; and the dative following such compound is then used instead of the case governed by the preposition. When such compounds are transitive they have with the dative an accusative also, like other transitive verbs.

1. Accedo, accresco, accumbo, acquiesco, addequilo, adhæreo, addeco, adno, adno, adsto, adstipulo, adsum, adversor, affulgeo, allabor, allado, annuo, appæreo, applaudo, appropinquo, arripo, arrideo, aspiro, assentior, asstideo, asstuo, assuesco, assurgo;—addo, adhæreo, adicio, adjungo, admisceo, adverto, advoico, affero, affigo, alligo, appono, appico, aspergo.

2. Antecēdo, anticello, anteco, antesto, antevēnio, antevorto;—antefero, antehæreo, antepōno.

3. Cohæreo, collado, concino, congruo, consensio, consūno, consuesco, convito, and, chiefly in the poets, coeo, concumbo, concurro, contendo;—confæro, conjungo, comparo, compōno.

4. Inclodo, incūbo, incumbo, indormio, ingemisco, inhæreo, inlio, innascor, innitor, insideo, insisto, insto, inrado, insulto, invado, invigilo, illacrimo, illado, immineo, immorior, immoror, impendo, insum;—immisceo, imperio, impōno, imprimo, inclodo, includo, inado, infæro, ingero, inficio, insero, inspergo, insuesco, inuro.

5. Intecēdo, intercido, interclado, interdeco, intermico, intersum, intervēnio;—interdeco, interjicio, interpōno.

6. Obavidiſti, ſidero, ſidēquiti. obductor, obmurmāro, obreſpo, obſeto, obſiſto, obſtrepo, obſum, obtracſo, obtrēno, obverſor, occumbo, occurro, occuſo, officio;—obdiſco, obſicio, effero, offundo, oppono.
- 7 Poſtfero, poſthabeo, poſtpōno, poſtpōſito, poſtſcribo.
8. Praeſeſo, praecurro, praeco, praediſco, praemineo, praemiſco, praesideo, praesum, praediſco, praeverior;—praefero, praeficio, praepugno, praeproſpicio, praeproſeſo.
9. Prōcumbo, prōſſicio, prōpugno, proſpicio, prōſeſo.
10. Succedo, ſuccreſco, ſuccumbo, ſuccurro, ſufficio, ſuffragor, ſūddileo, ſubdiſceſo, ſubdrepo, ſubſum, ſubvenio;—ſubdo, ſubſicio, ſubſiſco, ſubſiſto, ſubſiſco, ſubſiſco, ſubſiſco.
11. Sūpercurro, ſūperſeſo, ſūperſum, ſūpercerneo, ſūperſeruo.

NOTE 2. In some verbs compounded with prepositions the meaning of the preposition is lost. Such compounds are either not followed by a dative, or the case depends, not on the preposition, but on the signification of the verb, according to § 223.

REMARK 1. (a.) Some verbs, compounded with ab, de, ex, circum, and contra, are occasionally followed by the dative; as, absum, dēsum, dēlabor, despero, excido, circundo, circumfundo, circumjaceo, circumjicio, contrādico, contrato; as, Serta capiti dēlapa, The garlands having fallen from his head. Virg. Numquid nummi exciderunt tibi? Plaut. Tigris urbi circumfunditur. Plin. Sibi desperans. Caes.—(b.) Circundo and circumfundo take either an accusative of the thing with a dative of the person, or an ablative of the thing with an accusative of the person; as, circundo alicui custodias, or circundo aliquem custodiis. Aspergo, inaspergo, dono, impertio, exuo, and induo, are construed in the same manner. Cf. § 251. R. 2.

REM. 2. Some verbs of repelling and taking away (most of which are compounds of dh, dā, or ex), are sometimes followed by the dative, though more commonly by the ablative; as, ābigo, abrōgo, absīndo, aufēro, ādāmo, arceo, dēfēdo, dēmo, dēpello, dērōgo, dētrāho, ērtipio, ēruo, excūto, eximo, extorqueo, extrāho, ezuo, prōhibeo, surrīpio. Thus, Nec mihi te ērtipient, Nor shall they take you from me. Ovid. Solstitium pēcōri dēfēndite. Virg. Hunc arcēbis pēcōri. Id. So rarely abrumpo, aliēno, fūrōr, and rāpio.

REM. 3. Some verbs of differing (compounds of di or dis) likewise occur with the dative, instead of the ablative with the preposition ab, or poetically with the ablative alone; as, différo, discrepo, discordo, dissentio, distideo, disto; as, Quantum simplex hilarisq; nepoti discrepet, et quantum discordet, parcus aváro. Hor. Disabit infido scurræ amicus. Hor. Græcis Tuscânica stibius differunt. Quint. Comædia differt sermóni. Hor. So likewise misceo; as, Mista modestiæ aráttas. Cic.

REM. 4. Many verbs compounded with prepositions, especially with ad, con, and in, instead of the dative, either constantly or occasionally take the case of the preposition, which is frequently repeated. Sometimes, also, a preposition of similar signification is used; as, Ad primum vocem timidas advertitis aures. Ovid. Nemo eum antecessit. Nep. Saxa rides sola coalescere calce. Lucr. Infuerunt omnia in ignem. Cæs. Silex incumbēbat ad amnem. Virg. Inimicus mōdērāmine nāvīs. Ovid. In Pansam frātem inimicus. Plin. Conferite hanc pārem cum illo bello. Cic. In this substitution of one preposition for another, ad is used for in, and in for ad; ab for ex; ad, anti, contra, and in, for ob; ad and anti for pro.

REM. 5. Neuter verbs of motion or of rest in a place, when compounded with the prepositions, ad, ante, cōn, in, etc., either take the dative, or, acquiring an active signification, are followed by the accusative; as, Helvētī reliquos Gallos virtūte praeceḃunt, The Helvetii surpass the other Gauls in valor. Cæs. Uterque, Isocrātem celsū praecurrī. Cic. So praece, praeſto, praevertō, praeſello. See § 233. (8.)

§ 225. I. Verbs compounded with sātis, bēne, and māle, are followed by the dative; as,

Et naturæ et legibus satisfeci, He satisfied both nature and the laws. Cic. Tibi di benediciant omnes, May all the gods bless you. Plaut. But also, Amicum erga bene feci. Id. Maledicui utrique. Hor. So satisdo, benedico, maledico.

NOTE. These compounds are often written separately; and the dative always depends not on satis, bene, and male, but on the simple verb. So, also, bene and male aliquid völo; as, Tibi bene ex animo völo. Ter. Illi ego ex omnibus optime völo. Plaut. Non sibi male vult. Petron. In like manner valere dico, and vale dico; as, Augustus discedens (e curia) sedentibus singulis valere dicebat. Suet. Tibi valledicere non licet gratis. Sen.—In late writers benedico and maledico sometimes take the accusative.

II. Verbs in the passive voice are sometimes followed by a dative of the agent, chiefly in the poets and the later prose writers; as, Quidquid in hac causâ mihi susceptum est. Cic. Næque cernitur ulli, Nor is he seen by any one. Virg. Nulla tuarum audita mihi næque visa sororum. Id. Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non intelligor ulli. Ovid. But the agent after passives is usually in the ablative with a or ab. See § 248, I.

III. The participle in dus is followed by a dative of the agent; as, Unda omnibus enaviganda, The wave over which (we) all must pass. Hor. Nobis, cum semel occidit brevis lux, Nox est perpetua ana dormienda. Catull. Adhibenda est nobis diligentia, We must use diligence. Cic. Vestigia summorum hominum sibi tuenda esse dicit. Id. Si vis me flere, dolendum est primum ipsi tibi. Hor. Faciendum mihi putavi, ut responderem. Id.

REMARK 1. The dative is sometimes wanting when the agent is indefinite; as, Orandum est, ut sit mens sana in corpore sano. Juv. Hic vincendum aut moriendum, milites, est. Liv. In such examples, tibi, vobis, nobis, hominibus, etc., may be supplied. Cf. § 141, R. 2.

REM. 2. The participle in dus sometimes, though rarely, has, instead of the dative of the agent, an ablative with a or ab; as, Non eos in deorum immortalium numero venerandos a vobis et colendos putatis? Cic. Hæc a me in dicendo prætereunda non sunt. Id.—The dative after participles in dus is by some referred to § 226.

IV. Verbs signifying motion or tendency are followed by an accusative with ad or in; as,

Ad templum Palladis ibant. Virg. Ad prætorem hominem traxit. Cic. Vergit ad septemtriones. Cæs. In conspectum venire. Nep.

So curro, dâco, fêro, festino, fâgio, inclino, lêgo, mitto, pergo, porto, præcipito, præpero, tendo, tollo, vado, verto.

REMARK 1. So likewise verbs of calling, exciting, etc.; as, Eurum ad se vocat. Virg. Provocasse ad pugnam. Cic. So animò, hortor, incito, invito, læcesso, stimulo, suscito; to which may be added attineo, conforino, pertineo, and specto.

REM. 2. But the dative is sometimes used after these verbs; as, Clamor est celo. Virg. Dum tibi literas meæ veniant. Cic. Grægem citridi compellere hibisco. Virg. Sedibus hunc refer ante suis. Id. After venio both constructions are used at the same time; as, Venit mihi in mentem. Cic. Venit mihi in suspitionem. Nep. Eum venisse Germanis in amicitiam cognoverat. Cæs. Præpinqw (to approach) takes the dative only.

REM. 3. Sometimes also verbs signifying motion are followed by an accusative of place without a preposition, a supine in um, an infinitive, or an adverb of place; as, Romam profectus est. Ite domum. Rus ibam. Lavinia venit historia. Virg. Næque ego te derisum venio. Plaut. Non nos Libyos populare penates venimus. Virg. Huc venit. Plaut. See §§ 237, 276, II. 271, N. 2.

REM. 4. After do, scribo, or mitto literas, the person for whom they are written or to whom they are sent, is put either in the dative or in the accusative with ad; as, Ex eo loco tibi literas ante dederamus. Cic. Vulturcius literas tibi ad Catilinam datus esse, dicebat. Id. Cæsar scribit Labieno cum, etc. Cæs. Ad me Cælius de te scripsit. Cic. But to give one a letter to deliver is also expressed by dare literas alicui, and also the delivery of the letter by the bearer.

§ 226. Est is followed by a dative denoting a possessor;—the thing possessed being the subject of the verb.

Est thus used may generally be translated by the verb to have with the dative as its subject; as, Est mihi domi pater, I have a father at home. Virg. Sunt nobis mælia poma, We have mellow apples. Id. Gratiâ nobis opus est tuâ, We have need of your favor. Cic. Innocentiæ plus periculi quam honoris est. Sall. An nescis longas rebus esse manus? Ovid. So with an infinitive as the subject, Nec tibi sil duros acuisse in prælia dentes. Tib. 4, 3, 3. The first and second persons of sum are not thus construed.

REMARK 1. Hence mihi est nomen signifies, I have the name, my name is, or I am called. The proper name is put either in the nominative, the dative, or the genitive. See § 204, R. 8. So also cognomen, cognomentum, and, in Tacitus, côcâbulum, est mihi.—Sometimes, also, a possessive adjective agreeing with nomen, etc., supplies the place of the proper name; as, Est mihi nomen Tarquinium. Gell. Mercuriâle impôsuere mihi cognomen. Hor.

REM. 2. The dative is used with a similar signification after fore, suppedit, abest, deest, and defit; as, Pauper enim non est, cui rerum suppedit usus. Hor. Si mihi cauda foret, cercopithæcus eram. Mart. Defuit ars vobis. Ovid. Non defore Arsacidis virtutem. Tac. Lac mihi non defit. Virg. Hoc unum illi abfuit. Cic.

REM. 3. With the dative of the person after est Sallust and Tacitus sometimes join, by a Greek idiom, vólens, câpiens, and invitis; as, Quia nèque plebi militiâ volenti (esse) putâbatur. Because the common people were not thought to like the war. Sall. Ut quibusque bellum invitis aut câpientibus erat, According as each liked or disliked the war. Tac.

DATIVE OF THE END OR PURPOSE.

§ 227. Sum, and several other verbs, are followed by two datives, one of which denotes the object to which, the other the end for which, any thing is, or is done; as,

Mihi maximas est cûræ, It is a very great care to me. Cic. Spéro nobis hanc conjunctionem voluptati fore, I hope this union will afford us pleasure. Id. Matri puellam dono dedit. Ter. Fabio laudi datum est. Cic. Vitio id tibi certunt. Plaut. Id tibi honori habetur. Cic. Maturavit collægæ venire auxilio. Liv. Cui bono fuit? To whom was it an advantage? Cic.

REMARK 1. The verbs after which two datives occur, are sum, fore, fit, do, dono, daro, habeo, relinquo, tribuo, certo; also curro, eo, mitto, præfiscor, venio, appôno, asigno, cêdo, compáro, pâteo, suppedito, êmo, and some others.

REM. 2. The dative of the end or purpose is often used after these verbs, without the dative of the object; as, Exemplo est formica, The ant is (serves for) an example. Hor. Absentium dona divisui fuere. Liv. Reliquit pignori putamina. Plaut. Quæ esui et potui sunt. Gell. Esse derisui, To be a subject of ridicule. Tac. Réceptui cedere, To sound a retreat. Cæs. Aliquid doti dicare, To set out as dowry. Cic.

REM. 3. (a.) The verb sum, with a dative of the end, may be variously rendered; as by the words brings, affords, serves, does, etc. The sign for is often omitted with this dative, especially after sum; instead of it, as, or some other particle, may at times be used; as, Ignavia erit tibi magno dâdēcōri, Cowardice will bring great disgrace to you. Cic. Hæc res est argūmento, This thing is an argument, or serves as an argument. Id. Hoc vitio mihi dant, This they set down as a fault in me. Unversos cūræ habuit. Suet. Una res erat magno ūtui. was of great use. Lucil. Quod tibi magnōpère cordi est, mihi vèhèmenter displicet, What is a great pleasure, an object of peculiar interest to you, etc. Id.

(b.) Sometimes the words fit, able, ready, etc., must be supplied, especially before a gerund or a gerundive; as, Quum solvendo civitatēs non essent, not able to pay. Cic. Dictes, qui ōnēri fērendo essent. Liv. Quæ restinguendo igni fōrent. Liv. Rādix ejus est vescendo. Plin.

REM. 4. Instead of the dative of the end, a predicate nominative or accusative is sometimes used; as, Natūrā tu illi pater es, By nature you are his father. Amor est exiliū pēcōri: or the purpose is expressed by the accusative with ad or in; as, Alcui cōtes est ad bellum. Cic. Se Rēmis in clientēlam dūcābant. Cæs.: or by the ablative with pro; as, Innocentia pro mālivolentiā dūci capit. Sall. Alcibus sunt arborēs pro cūbilibus. Cæs.

REM. 5. Instead, also, of the dative of the end or purpose, quo? to what end? for what purpose? why? sometimes occurs, with an accusative, which generally depends on a verb understood, or with an infinitive or a clause; as, Quo mihi fortunam, si non concēditur ūti? Hor. Quo tibi, Pasiphaë, prētiosas sūmere vestes? Ovid.

REM. 6. After do and other similar active verbs an accusative of the purpose is found in apposition; as, Lātini cōrōnam auream Jōvi dōnum in Cāptivūm mittunt. Liv. Alcui cōmitem esse dātum. Cic. Cf. § 204, R. 1; and § 230, R. 2.

NOTE. The dative, instead of the accusative, is sometimes used after the infinitive, when a dative precedes, and the subject of the infinitive is omitted; as, Vōbis necesse est fortibus esse viris. Liv. Maximo tibi et civi et dūci evādere contigit. Val. Max. See §§ 205, R. 6, and 239, R. 1.

DATIVE AFTER PARTICLES.

§ 228. Some particles are followed by the dative of the object; as,

1. Some adverbs derived from adjectives; as,

Prōpius Tibēri quam Thermōpŷlis. Nep. Proxime castris, Very near to the camp. Cæs. Prōpius stābūlis armenta tēnēnt. Virg. Congruenter nātūræ, convēnienterque vitæ, Agreeably to nature. Cic. Epicūrus quam sibi constanter convēnienterque dīcat, non libērat. Id. Nēmīni nīmum bēne est. Afran. Mihi numquam in citā fuit mēlius. Hor. Vitæ vitæ hōmīnum amice. Cic. Bēne mihi, bēne vōbis. Plaut. So, Mihi obviam vēnistī. Cic. In certāmina saxo comminus ire viro. Sil. Quæstōres provinciæ mihi præsto fuērunt. Cic. Sīmos est exadversum Milēto. App.

REMARK. Prōpius and proxime, like their primitive prōpe, are sometimes construed with a and the ablative; as, Prōpe a meis ædibus. Cic. Stellæ errantes prōpius a terris. Id. A Surā proxime est Philiscum, oppidum Parthōrum. Plin.

2. Certain prepositions, especially in comic writers; as, Mihi clam est, It is unknown to me. Plaut. Contra nobis. Id. But in such instances they seem rather to be used like adjectives.

3. Certain interjections; as, Hei mihi! Ah me! Virg. Vae mihi! Wo is me! Ter. Vae vicis esse! Liv. Vae misero mihi. Plaut. Hem tibi. Id. Ecce tibi. Cic.

NOTE. (a.) The dative of the substantive pronouns seems sometimes nearly redundant, but it always conveys the expression of a lively feeling, and is therefore termed dātivus ethicus; as, Fur mihi (as, ... in my opinion. Plant. An ille mihi liber, cui mulier imperat? Cic. Tongilium mihi educit. Id. Ubi nunc nobis deus ille magister? Virg. Ecce tibi Sebbus! Cic. Hem tibi talentum argenti! Philippium est. Plant. Sibi is sometimes subjoined quite pleonastically to suis; as, Suo sibi gladio hunc jugulo. Plant. Ignorans suo sibi servit patri. Id. Sibi suo tempore.

(b.) The following phrases also occur with volo and a reflexive pronoun: quid tibi vis? what do you want? quid sibi iste vult? what does he want? quid vult sibi hac oratio? what does this speech mean? quid hac sibi dona volunt? what is the meaning of these presents? or, what is their object?

ACCUSATIVE,

ACCUSATIVE AFTER VERBS.

§ 229. The object of a transitive verb is put in the accusative; as,

Lēgātos mittunt, They send ambassadors. Cæs. Animus movet corpus, The mind moves the body. Cic. Da veniam hanc, Grant this favor. Ter. Eum imitātis sunt, They imitated him. Cic. Piscem Syri venerantur. Id.

REMARK 1. A transitive verb, with the accusative, often takes a genitive, dative, or ablative, to express some additional relation; as,

Te convinco amentisæ, I convict you of madness. Cic. Da locum mellioribus, Give place to your betters. Ter. Solvit se Teucris luctu, Troy frees herself from grief. Virg. See those cases respectively.

REM. 2. Such is the difference of idiom between the Latin and English languages, that many verbs considered transitive in one, are used as intransitive in the other. Hence, in translating transitive Latin verbs, a preposition must often be supplied in English; as, Ut me cavere, That he should beware of me. Cic. On the other hand, many verbs, which in Latin are intransitive, and do not take an accusative, are rendered into English by transitive verbs; as, Ille mihi favet, He favors me: and many verbs originally intransitive acquire a transitive signification.

REM. 3. The verb is sometimes omitted:—

1. To avoid its repetition; as, Eventum senatus, quem (scil. dare) videbitur, dabit. Liv.

2. The interrogative interjection quid? what? depends on ais or censes. So also quid vero? quid igitur? quid ergo? quid enim? which are always followed by another question, and both questions may be united into one proposition, the first serving merely to introduce the interrogation. With quid postea? quid tum? supply sequitur. With quid quod, occurring in transitions, dicam de eo is omitted, but it may be rendered 'nay,' 'nay even,' 'but now,' 'moreover,' etc., without an interrogation.—Dicam is also to be supplied with quid multa? quid plura? ne multa; ne multis; ne plura. The infinitive dicere is also sometimes omitted; as, Nimis multa videor de me. Cic. Perge reliqua. Id.

REM. 4. The accusative is often omitted:—

1. When it is a reflexive pronoun; as, Nox precipitat, scil. se. Virg. Tum prora avertit. Id. Eo lavatum, scil. me. Hor.

The reflexives are usually wanting after aboleo, abstineo, accingo, adaquo, aequo, agglomerō, augeo, cēlō, congemino, continuo, dēclino, dēclino, dēclino, diffēro, dāro, trumpo, flecto, deflecto, facesso, incipio, inclino, insinuo, irrumpo, jungo, lavo, lazo, lenio, māuro, mollio, mōvo, māto, pōno, præcipio, prorumpo, quatio, rēmitto, retracto, sēdo, sisto, stabilio, suppedito, tardo, tēneo, tendo, trājicio, transmitto, turbo, vario, vergo, verto, dēverto, rēverto, vestio, vibro; and more rarely after many others.

2. When it is something indefinite, has been previously expressed in any case, or is easily supplied; as, Ego, ad quos scribam, nescio, scil. litteras. Cic. De quo et tecum ego diligenter, et scripsi ad te. Id. Bene fecit Silius. Id. Dacii in hostem, scil. exercitum. Liv.

REM. 5. An infinitive, or one or more substantive clauses, may supply the place of the accusative after an active verb; as,

Da mihi fallere. Hor. Reddes dulce loqui, reddes ridere decorem. Id. Cæpio me esse clementem. Cic. Athēnienses statuerunt ut naves conscenderent. Id. Vereor ne a doctis reprehendar. Id. Eucæ, Bacche, sonat. Ovid. Sometimes both constructions are united; as, Di Iram miserrantur inānem amborum, et tantos mortālibus esse labōres. Virg.—Respecting the infinitive with and without a subject-accusative after an active verb, see § 270–273; and for the subjunctive after such verbs, see § 273.

(a.) In such constructions, the subject of the dependent clause is sometimes put in the accusative as the object of the leading verb; as, Nosti Marcellum, quam tardus sit, for Nosti quam tardus sit Marcellus. Cic. Illum, ut vivat, optant. Ter. At te ego faciā, ut minus videas. Plaut.

(b.) An ablative with de may also supply the place of the accusative, by the ellipsis of some general word denoting things, facts, etc., modified by such ablative; as, De republicā vestrā paucis accipe. Sall. Compare a similar omission of a subject modified by de and the ablative, § 209, R. 3, (2.)

REM. 6. The impersonal verbs of feeling, misēret, pœnitet, pūdet, tædet, piget, misērescit, misērētur, and peritūsum est, are followed by an accusative of the person exercising the feeling, and a genitive of the object in respect to which it is exercised. Cf. § 215, (1.); as,

Eorum nos misēret, We pity them. Cic. The impersonal Vēritum est also occurs with such an accusative; Quos non est vēritum pōnere, etc. Cic.

REM. 7. Jūvat, delectat, fallit, fugit, præterit, and decet, with their compounds, take an accusative of the person; as,

Te hilari animo esse valde me jūvat, That you are in good spirits greatly delights me. Cic. Fugit me ad te scribere. Cic. Illud altērum quam sit difficile, te non fugit. Id. Nec vero Cæsārem fēellit. Cæs., Fācis, ut te decet. Ter. So also when used personally; as, Parvum parva decet. Hor.; but decet often takes the accusative of the person with the infinitive; as, Hanc maculam nos decet effigere. Ter.; and in comic writers a dative; as, Vobis decet. Ter.

For mea, tua, sua, nostra, vestra, after refert and interest, see § 219, R. 1: and for the accusative by attraction, instead of the nominative, see § 206, (6), (b.)

§ 230. Verbs signifying to name or call; to choose, render or constitute; to esteem or reckon, which in the passive voice have two nominatives, are followed in the active voice by two accusatives, one of the object and the other of the predicate. Cf. § 210, R. 3, (3.); as,

Urbem ex Antiōchi patris nōmine Antiōchiam vocāvit, He called the city Antioch, etc. Just. Lūdos faciō me, You make game of me. Plaut. Me consulem fecistis. Cic. Iram bene Ennius Iulium dixit insāniam. Id. Ancum Marcium regem populus creāvit. Liv. Sulpicium accusatorem suum nūmerābat, non compētītorem. Cic. Quum vos testes habeam. Nep.

NOTE 1. The following are among the verbs included in this rule, viz. appello, dico, nōmīno, nunciō, pērhībeo, sālūto, scribo and inscribo, vōco; cāpio, constituo, creō, dēclarō, dēligo, dēsīgnō, dico, elīgo, faciō, efficiō, insitituo, lēgo, prōdo, reddo, rēnunciō; dāco, dignor, existimō, habeo, iudico, nūmero, pūto, repērio, intelligo, invēnio, se præbere or præsistere, etc.

NOTE 2. An ablative with ex occurs, though rarely, instead of the accusative of the object; as, Fortūna me, qui liber fuēram, servum fecit, e summo infīmum. Plaut. Cf. Qui recta prava faciunt. Ter.

NOTE 3. An infinitive may supply the place of the objective accusative; as, Si simulasse vocat crimen. Ovid.—and sometimes of the predicate accusative also; as, Si rep̄r̄re v̄cas amittere certius; aut si scire tibi sit rep̄r̄re v̄cas. Id. So also an adjective may supply the place of the predicate accusative; as, Præbuit se dignum suis mājoribus. Cic. Cæsarem certiorē faciunt. Cæs.

REMARK 1. After verbs signifying to esteem or reckon, one of the accusatives is often the subject, and the other the predicate, of esse expressed or understood; as,

Eum Av̄rum possim̄s existimāre. Cic. Talem se imp̄r̄torem præbuit. Nep. Præsta te eum, qui mihi es cognitus. Cic. Mercurium omnium inventorem artium f̄erunt; hunc viarum atque itin̄rum dūcem arbitrantur. Cæs.; or an adjective supplies the place of the predicate accusative; as, Ne me existimāris ad m̄nendum esse propensiorē. Cic.

NOTE 4. Instead of the predicate accusative, (1) pro with the ablative sometimes follows p̄to, d̄co, and h̄beo, but denotes only an approximation; as, Aliquid pro certo h̄bere or p̄t̄re. Ea pro falsis d̄cūt. Sall. Aliquem pro hoste h̄bere. Cæs.—So also in with the ablative; as, Nihil præter virtutē in bonis h̄bere. Cic. Aliquem in nūmero hostium d̄cere. Cic.—and the ablative without in; as, Ut vos affinium lōco d̄cerem. Sall. So also e or ex with the ablative; as, (Ut) f̄aceret quod e rēpublicā fidēque suā d̄ceret. Liv.—Sometimes (2) the genitive; as, Officii duxit exor̄are filios patrem. Suet. (See § 211, R. 8, (3).) So with a genitive or an ablative of price or value; as, P̄t̄re aliquem nihilo. Cic. Non h̄beo nanci Marsum auḡrem. Enn—and sometimes (3) a dative; as, Quando tu me h̄bes desp̄cātui. Plaut.—or an adverb; as, Egre h̄buit, filium id pro p̄rente ausum. Liv. And (4) ad or in with the accusative; as, Lōca ad hibernacūla l̄gere. Liv. Aliquem in Patres l̄gere. Id.: or (5) the genitive depending on the ablative of cause, manner, etc.; as, Qui servitutē dēditionis nōmine appellant. Cæs.

REM. 2. Many other verbs, besides their proper accusative, take a second, denoting a purpose, time, character, etc.

Such are do, tribuo, sūmo, p̄to, pōno, adjungo, ascribo, cognosco, accio, fingo, significo, etc.; as,

Quare ejus fugā cōmitem me adjungērem. Cic. Hōminum opinio socium me ascribit tuis laudibus. Id. Quos ego sim toties jam dēdignāta m̄ritos. Virg. Hunc t̄gitor rēgem agnoscimus, qui Philippum dēdignatur patrem? Curt. Filiam tuam mihi uxorem posco. Plaut. P̄t̄i hanc S̄turnia m̄nus. Ovid. Such constructions may often be referred to apposition, or to an ellipsis of esse.

§ 231. Verbs of asking, demanding, and teaching, and cēlo (to conceal), are followed by two accusatives, one of the person, the other of the thing; as,

Hoc te rēhementer rōgo. Cic. Illud te d̄ro, ut, etc. Id. Rōgo te nummos. I ask you for money. Mart. Posce deos v̄niam. Ask favor of the gods. Virg. Quum l̄gent quis m̄sticam d̄cuerit Ep̄aminondam, When they shall read who taught Ep̄aminondas music. Nep. Antigōnus iter omnes cēlat, Antigonus conceals his route from all. Id. Dēpr̄t̄ari deos m̄la. Sen. Quōtidie Cæsar Eduos fr̄umentum fl̄gūt̄are. Cæs. Multa deos d̄rans. Virg.

REMARK 1. This rule includes the verbs of asking and demanding, fl̄gito, effl̄gito, obsecro, d̄ro, ex̄d̄ro, contendo, percontor, posco, r̄posco, const̄lo, pr̄cor, dēpr̄cor, rōgo, and int̄r̄rōgo, which, with the accusative of the person, take the accusative of the neuter pronouns hoc, id, illud, quod, quid, more frequently than that of a substantive; of teaching, dūceo, ēdūceo, dēdūceo, and ēdūdio, which last has two accusatives only in the poets. Adm̄neco and consūlo are rarely found with two accusatives; as, Consūlam hanc rem d̄micos. Plaut. Eam rem nos l̄cus adm̄nuit. Sall. / 3

REM. 2. Instead of the accusative of the person, verbs of asking and demanding often take the ablative with ab or ex; as, Non dēbēbam abs te has l̄tras poscere. Cic. V̄niam d̄remus ab ipso. Virg. Isud v̄lōbām ex te per cont̄r̄. Plaut.

REM. 3. (a.) Instead of the accusative of the thing, the ablative with de is sometimes used; as, Sic ego te eisdem de rebus interrogem. Cic. De itinere hostium senatum edocet. Sall. Basius noster me de hoc libro celavit. Cic. Cf. § 229, R. 5, (b.).—(b.) Sometimes also instead of the accusative of the thing an infinitive, or an infinitive or subjunctive clause is used; as, Deos precari debetis, ut urbem defendant. Cic. Ut doceam Rullum posthac tacere. Id. Docui id non fieri posse. Id. Doceant eum qui vir Sex. Roscius fuerit. Id.—(c.) With verbs of teaching, the instrument by means of which the art is practised is put in the ablative; as, Aliquem fidibus docere. Cic. Docere aliquem armis. Liv. Litteræ may be used either in the accusative or in the ablative; as, Te litteras doceo. Cic. Doctus Græcis litteris. Id.

REM. 4. Some verbs of asking, demanding, and teaching, are not followed by two accusatives; as, exigo, peto, postulo, quero, scitor, discitor, which, with the accusative of the thing, take an ablative of the person with the preposition ab, de, or ex; imbuo, instituo, instruo, etc., which are sometimes used with the ablative of the thing, generally without a preposition, and are sometimes otherwise construed; as, Instituere aliquem ad dicendum. Cic.

REM. 5. (a.) Many active verbs with the accusative of the person, take also an accusative denoting in what respect or to what degree the action of the verb is exerted.

(b.) The accusative of degree, etc., is commonly nihil, a neuter pronoun, or a neuter adjective of quantity; as, Non quo me aliquid juvare posses. Cic. Pauca pro tempore milites hortatus. Sall. Id adjuva me. Ter. Næque est te fallere quidquam. Virg. Cf. § 232, (8.)

REM. 6. By a similar construction, genus and seculus, 'sex,' are sometimes used in the accusative, instead of the genitive of quality; as, Nullas hoc genus vigiliæ vigilarunt. Gell. So, Omnes muliebres sæculi. Suet. Cf. 211, R. 6, (4.)

§ 232. (1.) Some neuter verbs are followed by an accusative of kindred signification to their own; as,

Vitam jucundam vivere, To live a pleasant life. Plant. Mitrum somniavi somnium, I have dreamed a wonderful dream. Id. Ferere hunc furorem. Virg. Istam pugnam pugnabo. Plant. Pugnare dicenda Mæsis prelia. Hor. Lusum insolentem ludere. Id. Si non servitum serviat. Plant. Quoror haud faciles questus. Stat. Juravi verissimum jussurandum. Cic. Ignotas jubet ire vias. Val. Flacc. So, also, Ire exsequias, To go to a funeral. Ter. Ire supplicias, To go to one's assistance. Ire infitias, To deny. This expression is equivalent to infittior, and may like that take an accusative; as, Si hoc unum adjunxero, quod nemo eat infittias. Nep.: or the accusative with the infinitive; as, Næque infittias tunc Siciliam nostram provinciam esse. Liv. Ut suum gaudium gauderemus. Cæsar ad Cic. Præfiscisci magnum iter. Cic. Pollux itque reditque viam. Virg. This accusative is usually qualified by an adjective. §

(2.) Verbs commonly neuter are sometimes used transitively, and are then followed by an accusative.

Accusatives are thus used with oleo and aspicio, and their compounds, reddoleo, respicio; as, Olet unguenta, He smells of perfumes. Ter. Olere peregrinum, To have a foreign smell. Cic. Orationes reddolentes antiquitatem. Id. Mella herbam eam sapiunt, The honey tastes of that herb. Plin. Uva picem respiciens. Id. So, Sitio honores. Cic. Carnem pluit. Liv. Claudius aleam studiosissime luit. Suet. Erumpere diu coercitam iram in hostes. Liv. Libros evigilare. Ovid. Præire verba. Liv. Nec vox hominem sonat. Virg. Sudare mella. Id. Morientem nomine clamat. Id. Quis post vina gravem militiam aut pauperiem crepat? Hor. Omnes una manet nox. Id. Ingrati animi crimen horreo. Cic. Ego meas quoror fortunas. Plant. Vivere Bacchanalia. Juv. Pastorem sallaret uti Cyclopa, rogabat. Hor. So the passive; Nunc agrestem Cyclopa movetur. Id. Xerxes quam mare ambulavisset, terram navigasset. Cic. Qui stadium currit. Id. Omnia jura migrare. Id. Te solo colloqui. Plant. Ea disserere mihî. Cic.

Cōrēdon ardebat Alexin. Virg. Stīgias jūrātimus undas. Ovid. Nāvīgat sequor. Virg. Currimus sequor. Id. Pascuntur sylvas. Id.

NOTE 1. Accusatives are found in like manner after ambūlo, calleo, dūleo, īquīto, ſeo, gaudeo, gēmo, glōrior, horreo, letor, lātro, nāto, palleo, pāveo, pāreo, depāreo, pōtēdo, quēror, rīdeo, ſūleo, ſūbūlo, tāceo, trēmō, trēpido, vādo, vēnio, etc.

(3.) Neuter verbs and sometimes adjectives also may be followed by an accusative denoting in what respect, or to what degree, the feeling, condition, etc., is manifested; as,

Nihil lāboro. Cic. Num id lacrimat virgo? Does the maid weep on that account? Ter. Multa alia peccat. Cic. Quicquid dētrant rēges, plectuntur Achivi. Hor. Nec tu id indignāri posses. Liv. Illud mīhi latandum video. Cic. Illud valde tibi assentiri. Id. Idem glōriāri. Id. Hęc glōriāns. Liv. Hoc stūdet ānīm. Hor.—So, Id opēram dō, I strive for this. Ter. Consilium pētis, quid tibi sim auctor. Cic. Quod quidam auctōres sunt, Which is attested by some authors. Liv. Nil nostri mīserēre? Virg.—Nihil Rōmāns plēbis similis. Liv. Sēnātus nihil sēne intentus. Sall. These limiting accusatives have commonly the force of adverbs, particularly nihil, which is used like an emphatic non in the sense of 'in no way,' 'in no respect.' So non nihil, 'to some extent,' 'in some measure.'

NOTE 2. In the above and similar examples, the prepositions cō, propter, per, ad, etc., may often be supplied. This construction of neuter verbs is most common with the neuter accusatives id, quid, quidquam, aliquid, quicquid, quod, nihil, nonnihil, idem, illud, tantum, quantum, enī, multa, pauca, alia, cētera, omnia, etc. Cf. § 256, R. 16, N.

§ 233. Many verbs are followed by an accusative depending upon a preposition with which they are compounded.

(1.) Active verbs compounded with trans, ad, and circum, have sometimes two accusatives, one depending upon the verb, the other upon the preposition; as,

Omneē equitātum pontem transducit, He leads all the cavalry over the bridge. Cæs. Agēsillāus Hellepontum cōpiās trājecit. Nep. Petrēius jusjūrandum dedit Afrānium. Cæs. Roscillum Pompēius omnia sua præsidia circumduxit. Id. So, Pontus scōpulos sup̄erjācit undam. Virg. So, also, advertō and inducō with ānīm; as, Id ānīm advertit. Cæs. Id quod ānīm induxerat paulisper non tenuit. Cic. So, also, injicio in Plautus—Ego te mātum injiciam.

(2.) Some other active verbs take an accusative in the passive voice depending upon their prepositions; as, Māgicās accingier artes, To prepare oneself for magic arts. Virg. In prose writers the ad is in such cases repeated; as, accingi ad consiliātum. Liv. Classis circumvehitur arcem. Id. Quod anguis dōmī vectem circumjectus fuisset. Cic. Lōcū pratervectus sum. Id.

(3.) Many neuter verbs, especially verbs of motion, or of rest in a place, when compounded with prepositions which govern an accusative, become transitive, and accordingly take an accusative; as,

Gentes quē mēre illud adjācent, The nations which border upon that sea. Nep. Obsequitāre agmen. Curt. Incēdunt mēstos lōcos. Tac. Translūi flammās. Ovid. Succēdere tecta. Cic. Lūdōrum diēbus, qui cognitiōnem intervēnerant. Tac. Adire prōvinciam. Suet. Cōveat ne prēlium īneat. Cic. Ingrēdi iter pēdibus. Cic. Ep̄scūri horti quos mōdo prætēribāmus. Id.

NOTE. To this rule belong many of the compounds of ambūlo, cēdo, curro, eo, īquīto, ſeo, grādior, labor, no and nāto, rēpo, sādio, scādo, vādo, vēhor, vēnio, vōlo;—sūbō, jāceo, sēdeo, sistō, sto, etc., with the prepositions included in § 224, and with ex.

REMARK 1. Some neuter verbs compounded with prepositions which govern an ablative, in like manner become transitive, and are followed by an accusative; as, Nēmīnem convēni, I met with no one. Cic. Qui societatem coëris. Id. Aversari hōnōres. Ovid. Ursi arborem aversi deripunt. Plin. Edormi crāpulam. Cic. Egressus exsilium. Tac. Evaditque celer ripam. Virg. Excēdere nūmērū. Tac. Exire limen. Ter. Tibur aquae fertilē praefluunt. Hor.

REM. 2. After verbs both active and neuter, compounded with prepositions which take an accusative, the preposition is often repeated, or one of similar signification is used; as, Cæsar se ad nēmīnem adjunxit. Cic. Multitudinem trans Rhēnum in Galliam transducere. Cæs.—In Galliam invāsit Antōnius. Cic. Ad me dāre quosdam mēmīni. Id. Orātor peragrat per ānimos hōmīnum. Id. Ne in senātum accēderem. Id. Rēgina ad templum incessit. Virg. Juxta gēntiōrem adstat Lāvīnia. Id. Fines extra quos egredi non possim. Cic. A dative instead of the accusative often follows such compounds, according to § 224. Circum is not repeated.

NOTE. Some verbal nouns and verbal adjectives in bundus are followed by an accusative, like the transitive verbs from which they are derived; as, Quid tibi huc receptio ad te est meum virum? Wherefore do you receive my husband hither to you? Plaut. Quid tibi, mātum, me, aut quid ego agam, cārāto 'st? Id. Quid tibi hanc dātio est? Id. Quid tibi hanc nōtio est, inquam, amīcam meam? Quid tibi hanc dīgito tactio 'st? Id. Hanno vitābundus castra hostium consulesque. Liv. Mithridātes Rōmānum mēditābundus bellum. Just. Mitrabundi vānam spēcīem. Liv. Pōpūlābundus agros. Sisenn. Carnificem imāgitābundus. App.

§ 234. A verb in the passive voice has the same government as in the active, except that the accusative of the active voice becomes the nominative of the passive.

NOTE 1. The accusative of the person with the infinitive, after verbs of saying and commanding, may become the subject of the passive voice; as, Active, Dico rēgem esse justum;—Passive, Rex dicitur justus esse. Act. Jūbeo te rēdire;—Pass. Jūberis rēdire: the construction in the passive being the same as though rēgem and te had depended immediately upon dico and jūbeo.—So, also, when the accusative of the person is the object of the verb and the infinitive stands as the accusative of the thing. Cf. § 270, N.

I. When a verb, which in the active voice takes an accusative both of the person and of the thing, is changed to the passive form, the accusative of the person becomes the nominative, and the accusative of the thing is retained; as,

Rōgātus est sententiam, He was asked his opinion. Liv. Interrogātus causam. Tac. Sēgetes alimentāque dēbita dives poscebātur hūmus. Ovid. Mōtus docēri gaudet Iōnicos mātūra virgo. Hor. Omnes belli artes edoctus. Liv. Nosse hoc cēlātō tam diu? Ter. Multa in extis mōnemur. Cic.

NOTE 2. The accusative of the thing after doctus and edoctus is rare; and after cēlāri it is generally a neuter pronoun; as hoc or id cēlābar; of this I was kept in ignorance; but it is found also with the person in the dative; as, Id Alcibiadi diūtius cēlāri non potuit. Nep. Alcib. 5. Cēlo, and especially its passive, generally takes de with the ablative.

REMARK 1. (a.) Induo and exuo, though they do not take two accusatives in the active voice, are sometimes followed by an accusative of the thing in the passive; as, Induitur atras vestes, She puts on sable garments. Ovid. Thōrāca indūtus. Virg. Exūta est Rōma sēnectam. Mart. So indūcor and cingor; as, Ferrum cingitur. Virg. So rēcingitur anguem. Ovid.

(b.) When two accusatives follow an active verb compounded with trans, the passive retains that which depends upon the preposition; as, Belgæ Rhēnum antiquitus transducti. Cæs.

REM. 2. The future passive participle in the neuter gender with est, is sometimes, though rarely, followed by an accusative; as, Multa nobis rebus quum sit agendum. Lucr. Quam (viam) nobis ingrediendum est. Cic.

II. Adjectives, verbs, and perfect participles, are sometimes followed by an accusative denoting the part to which their signification relates; as, Nūdus membra, Bare as to his limbs. Virg. Os hūmērosque deo similis. Id. Clārī gēnus. Tac. Tribūni suam vicem anxii. Liv. Trēmī artus. Virg. Cētera parce puer bello. Id. Sibila colla tāmentem. Id. Explēri mentem nēquit. Id. Grīneus eruitur oculōs. Ovid. Picti scūta lābici. Virg. Collis frontem lēniter fastigātus. Cæs. Animum incensus. Liv. Oblitus faciē suā crudōre. Tac.

REMARK 1. In this construction an ablative is often joined with the perfect participle; as, Miles fractus membra lābore. Hor. Dextērū gēnū lapide ictus. Suet. Adversum fēmur trāgūlā graviter ictus. Liv.

REM. 2. This is a Greek construction, and is usually called the limiting or Greek accusative. It is used instead of an ablative of limitation, (§ 250,) and occurs most frequently in poetry.

REM. 3. A limiting accusative instead of the ablative is found also in a few ordinary expressions, as in partim (for partem), vicem, magnam and maximam partem, instead of magnā or maximā ex parte, or the adverb fere; as, Maximam partem lacte vivunt. Cæs. Magnam partem ex iambis nostra constat oratio. Cic. Livy has magna pars, viz. Nūmidæ, magna pars agrestes.—So cētera and rēliqua are joined to adjectives in the sense of cēteris, 'for the rest,' 'in other respects'; as, Proximum regnum, cētera egregium, ab una parte haud editis prosperum fuit. Liv. So cētera similis, cētera bonus. A te bis terve summum lūras accēpi. Cic.—So, also, in the expressions id temporis; id, hoc or idem atātis, illud hōra, for eo tempore, eā atāte, etc.; id gēnus, omne gēnus, quod gēnus.

III. Some neuter verbs which are followed by an accusative, are used in the passive voice, the accusative becoming the subject, according to the general rule of active verbs; as, Tertia vicitur aetas. Ovid. Bellum militabitur. Hor. Dormitur hiems. Mart. Multa peccantur. Cic. Aditur Gnossius Mīnos. Sen. Ne ab omnibus circumisiteretur. Cæs. Hostes invadi posse. Sall. Campus obitur aquā. Ovid. Plūres inveniuntur grātias. Cic. Ea res alitur. Id.

ACCUSATIVE AFTER PREPOSITIONS.

§ 235. (1.) Twenty-six prepositions are followed by the accusative.

These are ad, adversus or adversum, antē, apud, circā or circum, circiter, cis or citra, contrā, ergā, extrā, infra, intēr, intrā, juxta, ob, pēnēs, pē, post, pōnē, præter, prōpē, propter, sēcundum, suprā, trans, ultrā; as,

Ad templum non æquas Palladis ibant,—to the temple. Virg. Adversus hostes, Against the enemy. Liv. Germāni qui cis Rhēnum incolunt,—this side the Rhine. Cæs. Quum tantum rēsidēt intra mūros māli. Cic. Prīncipio tērū impērium pēnēs rēges erat. Just. Templum pōnam propter aquam. Virg. Inter agendum. Id. Ante dōmandum. Id. Respecting the signification of some of the preceding prepositions see § 195, R. 5, etc.

REMARK 1. Cis is generally used with names of places; citra with other words also; as, Cis Taurum. Cic. Cis Padum. Liv. Paucos cis menses. Plaut. Citra Veliā. Cic. Citra satiētatem, Not to satiety. Col. Citra fātigationem. Cels. Citra Trōjāna tempora. Ovid.

REM. 2. Inter, signifying between, applies to two accusatives jointly, and sometimes to a single plural accusative; as, Inter me et Scipiōnem. Cic. Inter nātos et pārentes. Id. Inter nos, Among ourselves. Id. Inter falcārios, Among the scythe-makers. Cic. When it denotes time it signifies during, and more rarely at; as, Inter ipsum pugnas tempus. Liv. Inter cēnam. Cic.

REM. 3. Ante and post are commonly joined with concrete official titles, when used to indicate time, rather than with the corresponding abstract nouns; as, ante or post Cicerōnem consūlem, rather than ante or post consūlātum Cicerōnis.

(2.) In and sub, denoting motion or tendency, are followed by the accusative; denoting situation, they are followed by the ablative; as,

Via dūcit in urbem, The way conducts into the city. Virg. Noster in te amor. Cic. Callimāchi epigramma in Cleombrōtū est—on or concerning Cleombrōtus. Id. Exercitus sub iūgū missus est, The army was sent under the yoke. Cæsar. Magna mei sub terras ibit imāgo. Virg. Mediā in urbe, In the midst of the city. Ovid. In his fuit Ariovistus. Cæsar. Bella sub Iliadis mœnibus gērere, To wage war under the Trojan walls. Ovid. Sub nocte silenti. Virg.

REM. 4. The most common significations of in, with the accusative, are, into, to, towards, until, for, against, about, concerning,—with the ablative, in, on, upon, among. In some instances, in and sub, denoting tendency, are followed by the ablative, and, denoting situation, by the accusative; as, In conspectu meo audet vñire. Phæd. Nātiones quas in amicitiam pōpuli Rōmāni, ditiōnemque essent. Id. Sub iūgo dictātor hostes misit. Liv. Hostes sub montem consēdisse. Cæsar.

REM. 5. In and sub, in different significations, denoting neither tendency nor situation, are followed sometimes by the accusative, and sometimes by the ablative; as, Amor crescit in hōras. Ovid. Hostilem in mōdum. Cic. Quod in bōno servo dici posset. Id. Sub eā conditione. Ter. Sub pœnā mortis. Suet.

REM. 6. In expressions relating to time, sub, denoting at or in, usually takes the ablative; as, Sub adventu Rōmāndrum. Liv. Sub lūce. Ovid. Sub tempore. Lucan. Denoting near, about, just before or just after, it takes the accusative; as, Sub lūcem. Virg. Sub lūmina prima. Hor. Sub hoc hērus inquit. Id.

REM. 7. In is used with neuter adjectives in the accusative in forming adverbial phrases; as, In unīversum, In general. In tōtū, Wholly. So, in plēnum; in incertum; in tantum; in quantum; in majus; in melius; in omnia, in all respects, etc.

(3.) Sūper, when denoting place or time, is followed by the accusative, and sometimes poetically by the ablative; but when it signifies on, about, or concerning, it takes the ablative. With the accusative sūper signifies over, above, besides or in addition to; with numerals, more than; as,

Sūper labentem culmina tecti, Gliding over the top of the house. Virg. Sūper tres mōdios. Liv. Sūper morbum etiam fāmes affecit exercitum. Id. Sūper tēnēro prosternit grāmine corpus, He stretches his body on the tender grass. Virg. Multa sūper Priāmo rōgitans sūper Hectōre multa, concerning Priam, etc. Id.

REM. 8. The compound dēsūper is found with the accusative, and insūper with the accusative and the ablative.

(4.) Subter generally takes the accusative, but sometimes, in poetry, the ablative; as, Subter terras, Under the earth. Liv. Subter densā testūdine. Virg.

(5.) Clam is followed by either the accusative or the ablative; as,

Clam vos, Without your knowledge. Cic. Clam patrem. Ter. Clam matrem suam. Plaut. Clam vobis. Cæs. Neque potest clam me esse. Plaut. Clam uxore meâ. Id. Its diminutive clanculum is once followed by the accusative, clanculum patres. Ter.

REM. 9. The adverbs versus or versum and usque are sometimes annexed to an accusative, principally of place, which depends on ad or in, and sometimes the preposition is omitted; as, Ad Oceanum versus proficisci. Cæs. Fugam ad se versum. Sall. In Galliam versus castra mœvere. Id.—Usque ad Numan- tiam. Cic. Usque in Pamphylum. Id. Ad noctem usque. Plaut.—Brundisium versus. Cic. Terminos usque Libye. Just. Usque Ennam profecti. Cic. Versus is always placed after the accusative.—Usque occurs more rarely with sub and trans with the accusative; as, Trans Alpes usque transfertur. Cic. Usque sub extrêmum brunnæ imbrem.—Versus also rarely follows ab, and usque either ab or ex with the ablative; as, Ab septemtrione versus. Varr. A fundam- ento usque mœvisti mœre. Plaut. Usque ex ultimâ Syriâ. Cic. Usque a puertitiâ. Ter. Usque a Rómulo. Cic. Usque a mâne ad vespèrum. Plaut.

REM. 10. Prepositions are often used without a noun depending upon them, but such noun may usually be supplied by the mind; as, Multis post annis, i. e. post id tempus. Cic. Circum Concordiâ, scil. œdem. Sall. Ex 11

REM. 11. The accusative, in many constructions, is supposed to depend on a preposition understood; as, Quid opus est plarâ? i. e. propter quid? why? i. q. cur? or quâre? Cic. So, Quid me ostentem? Id. But it is not easy, in every case, to say what preposition should be supplied. For the accusative without a preposition after neuter verbs, see § 232. For the accusative of limitation, see § 234, II.

ACCUSATIVE OF TIME AND SPACE.

§ 236. Nouns denoting duration of time, or extent of space, are put, after adjectives and verbs, in the accusative, and some- times after verbs in the ablative; as,

ACC. Appius cæcus multos annos fuit, Appius was blind many years. Cic. Biduum Læoticæ fui. Id. Dies totos de virtute disserunt. Id. Te jam annum audientem Cratippum. Id.—Décrêverunt intercalarium quinque et quâdringenta dies longum. Id.—Quum abessem ab Amâno iter unius diæ. Id. Tres pœceat cœli spâtiûm non amplius ulnas. Virg. (Cf. § 256, R. 6.) A portu stadia centum et viginti processimus. Cic.—Duas fossas quindêcim pœdes latus perduxit,—two ditches fifteen feet broad. Cæs. Fossas quinos pœdes altas. Id. Fôrâmina longa pœdes tres sêmis. Cato. Orbem olearium crassum digitos sex fâcto. Id.—Abt. Vixit annis undêtriginta. Suet. Quâtuordêcim annis exsilium tulerâvit. Tac. Triginta annis vixit Panætius. Cic.—Exercitus Rômânus tridui itinêre ab- fuit ab amne Tânai. Tac. Æsculâpii templum quinque millibus passuum dis- tans. Liv.

NOTE 1. The ablative denoting extent of time and space is rarely used by Cicero, and less frequently than the accusative by other writers.

NOTE 2. The accusative denoting extent of space sometimes follows the ab- verbs longe, alte, etc.; as, Campestris locus alte duos pœdes et sêmissem infô- diendus est. Colum. Vercingêtôrîz locum castris dêligit ab Avarico longe millia passuum sêdêcim. Cæs.

NOTE 3. (a.) Old, in reference to the time which a person has lived, is expressed in Latin by natus, with an accusative of the time; as, Decessit Alexander mensem unum, annos tres et triginta natus. Just. (b.) A person's age may also be expressed without natus by a genitive of the time closely connected with his name, according to § 211, R. 6; as, Alexander annôrûm trium et triginta decessit. (c.) Older or younger than a certain age is ex- pressed by prefixing to the accusative or genitive of the definite age the adverbs plus or minus, or the adjectives major or minor, either with or without quam. See § 256, R. 6 and 7.—Sometimes, also, the ablative depends on the comparative; as, Minor viginti quinque annis natus. Nep. Minor triginta annis natus. Cic. Biennio quam nos major. Id. Cf. § 256, R. 16. (1.)

REMARK 1. Nouns denoting time or space, used to limit other nouns, are put in the genitive or ablative. See § 211, R. 6.

REM. 2. A term of time not yet completed may be expressed by an ordinal number; as, Nos vicēsimū jam diem pōtīmur hēbescere diem hōrum auctōritātis. Cic. Pūnico bello duodēcimum annum Itālia arēbatur. Liv. Hence in the passive, Nunc tertia vivitur setas. Ovid.

REM. 3. The accusative or ablative of space is sometimes omitted, while a genitive depending on it remains; as, Castra quæ abērant bidui, scil. spātium or spātio. Cic.

REM. 4. To denote a place by its distance from another, the ablative is commonly used; as, Millibus passuum sex a Cæsaris castris consēdit. Cæs.; but sometimes the accusative; as, Tria passuum millia ab ipsā urbe castra pōsuit. Liv. The only words used for this purpose in the ablative alone are spātio and intervallo; as, Quindēcim ferme millium spātio castra ab Tārento pōsuit. Id.

NOTE 4. For abhinc and a cardinal number, with the accusative or ablative of past time, see § 253, R. 2. For the ablative denoting difference of time or space, see § 256, R. 16.

REM. 5. A preposition is sometimes expressed before an accusative of time or space, but it generally modifies the meaning; as, Quem per dēcem annos aluimus, during ten years. Cic.

REM. 6. When the place from which the distance is reckoned is not mentioned, ab is sometimes placed before the ablative of distance, as if this depended on the preposition; as, A millibus passuum duobus castra pōsuerunt, Two miles from the place, or, Two miles off. Cæs.

REM. 7. An accusative of weight also occurs when expressed by libram or libras in connection with pondo. Cf. § 211, R. 6. (4.)

ACCUSATIVE OF PLACE.

§ 237. After verbs expressing or implying motion, the name of the town in which the motion ends is put in the accusative without a preposition; as,

Rēgulus Carthāginem rediit, Regulus returned to Carthage. Cic. Capuam flecti iter, He turns his course to Capua. Liv. Calpurnius Rōmam proficiscitur. Sall. Rōmam erat nunciātum. Cic.

REMARK 1. The accusative, in like manner, is used after iter with sum, habeo, etc.; as, Iter est mihi Lānūvium. Cic. Cæsarem iter habere Capuam. Id. And even after sum alone; as, Omnia illa mūnicipia, quæ sunt a Vibōne Brundisium. Cic. So with a verbal noun; as, Adventus Rōmam. Liv. Reditus Rōmam. Cic.

REM. 2. (a.) The preposition to be supplied is in, denoting to or into, which is sometimes expressed; as, In Ephēsum abiit. Plaut. Ad, before the name of a town, denotes direction towards it; as, Iter dirigere ad Mūtinam. Cic.; and also its vicinity; as, Adōlescentulus miles præfectus sum ad Capuam; i. e. in castra ad Capuam. Id. So, Lælius cum classe ad Brundisium venit. Cæs. Cæsar ad Gēnevam pervēnit. Id. Quum ego ad Hērāclēam accēderem. Cic.

(b.) When urbs, oppidum, locus, etc., follow the names of towns as appositions, they generally take a preposition; as, Dēmārātus se contulit Turquinos, in urbem Etrūriæ flōrentissimam. Cic. Ad Cirtam oppidum iter constituunt. Sall.—So also when the name of the town is qualified by an adjective; as, Magnus Iter ad doctas præficiisci cōgor Athēnas. Prop. But the poets and later prose writers sometimes omit the preposition; as, Ovid, Her. 2, 83.

REM. 3. Instead of the accusative, a dative is sometimes, though rarely, used; as, Carthāgini nuncios mittam. Hor. Cf. § 225, IV. and R. 2.

REM. 4. Dōmus in both numbers, and rus in the singular, are put in the accusative, like names of towns; as,

Ite dōmum, Go home. Virg. Galli dōmos dētrant,—had gone home. Liv. Bus dō, I will go into the country. Ter.

NOTE. (a.) When dōmus is limited by a genitive or a possessive adjective pronoun, it sometimes takes a preposition: with other adjectives, the preposition is generally expressed; as, Non introeo in nostram dōmum. Plaut. Veniisse in dōmum Leccæ. Cic. Ad eam dōmum præfecti sunt. Id. In dōmos supēras ascendere cūra fuit. Ovid. Rarely, also, when not limited; as, Sōcrātes philōsophiam in dōmos intrōdūxit. Cic. So, lārem suum. App., or ad lārem suum. Cic. Cārticas in Albense rus inferre. Plin. Quum in sua rūra vēnerunt. Cic. With the possessor's name in the genitive, either dōmum or in dōmum is used; as, Pompōniū dōmum vēnisse. Cic. In dōmum Mæliū tēla infērantur. Liv.

(b.) Dōmus is sometimes used in the accusative after a verbal noun; as, Dōmum reditiōnis spe sublātā. Cæs. So, Itio dōmum. Cic. Concursus dōmum. Cæs. Cf. R. 1.

REM. 5. (a.) Before the names of countries and of all other places in which the motion ends, except those of towns, and dōmus and rus, the preposition is commonly used; as, Ex Asiā transis in Eurōpam. Curt. Te in Epirum vēnisse gaudeo. Cic. But it is sometimes omitted; as, Dēveniunt speluncam. Virg. Dēvenire lōcos. Id. Tūmulum antiquæ Cērēis sēdemque sacrātam vēntus. Id. Ibis Cērōpius portus. Ovid. So, also, before names of countries, especially those ending in us; as, Ægyptus, Bospōrus, Chersōnēsus, Eptrus, Pēloponnēsus, etc. So, also, Illīricum præfectus. Cæs. Mācēdōniam pervēnit. Liv. Africam transitūrus. Id. So, Tacitus construes even names of nations, when used, as they often are, for those of countries; as, Ductus inde Cangos exercitus. Ibāros ad patrium regnum pervādīt. So, Virgil, Nos ibimus Afros.—Pliny has, Insūlas Rubri Māris nāvigant.

(b.) Before the names of small islands the preposition is frequently omitted; as, Pausāniam cum classe Cyprum misērunt. Nep.: but rarely before the names of the larger islands; as, Sardīnia, Britānnia, Crēta, Eubæa, Sicilia.

(c.) Before accusatives of any words denoting locality after verbs of motion, the poets omit the preposition; as, Itāliam—Laviniaque vēnit Itōra. Virg.—The old accusative fōras is used, like names of towns, to denote the place whither, while fōris denotes the place where; as, Vāde fōras. Mart. Exi fōras. Plaut.

ACCUSATIVE AFTER ADJECTIVES, ADVERBS, AND INTERJECTIONS.

§ 238. 1. (a.) The adjectives prōpior and proximus, with their adverbs prōpius and proxime, like their primitive prōpe, are often joined with the accusative, as,

Ipe prōpior montem suos collocat. Sall. Crassus proximus märe Oceānum hiēmārat. Cæs.—Lībyes prōpius märe Africum agnābant. Sall. Proxime Hispāniam Mauri sunt. Id.

(b.) The adverbs prīdie and postrīdie are also often followed by the accusative; as, Prīdie cum diem. Cic. Prīdie itus. Id. Postrīdie ludos. Id.—(c.) An accusative sometimes follows intus and cōminus; as, Intus dōmum. Plaut. Agrestes cōminus tre sues, scil. in. Prop.

REMARK 1. The accusative with pridē and postridē is by some referred to ante and post understood. For the genitive after these words, see § 212, R. 4, N. 6.—Respecting versus, usque, exadversus (-um) and secus with the accusative, see § 195, R. 3: and § 235, R. 3.

REM. 2. The adverb bēne, by the elipsis of edēre jūbeo, is sometimes followed by the accusative in forms of drinking health; as, Bēne vos, bēne nos, bēne te, bēne me, bēne nostram etiam Stēphānium! Plaut. Bēne Messālam, a health to Messala. Tibullus It is also construed with the dative. See § 228, 1.

2. In exclamations, the noun or pronoun which marks the object of the feeling is put in the accusative either with or without the interjections, O! ah! heu! eheu! ecce! en! hem! pro! or vā! as,

En quātuor aras! ecce duas tibi Daphni! Behold four altars! lo, two for thee, Daphnis! Virg. Eccum! eccos! eccillum! for ecce eum! ecce eos! ecce illum! Plaut. O praeclārum custodem! Cic. Heu me infēlicem! Ter. Pro Deūm hōminūque fidem! Cic. Ah me, me! Catullus Eheu me miserum! Ter. Hem astūtias! Id. Vā te! Plaut. Vā me! Sen. Miseram me! Ter. Hōminem gravem et civem egrēgium! Cic. Cf. § 228, 3.

NOTE. The accusative after interjections is supposed to depend on some verb of emotion to be supplied.

SUBJECT-ACCUSATIVE.

§ 239. The subject of the infinitive mood is put in the accusative; as, Mōleste Pompeium id ferre constābat, That Pompey took that ill, was evident. Cic. Eos hoc nōmine appellari fas est. Id. Miror te ad me nihil scribere, I wonder that you do not write to me. Cn. Mag. in Cic. Campos jubet esse pātentes. Virg.

NOTE 1. In historical writing the present infinitive has sometimes its subject in the nominative. Cf. § 209, R. 5.

REMARK 1. The subject of the infinitive is omitted when it precedes in the genitive or dative case; as, Est adōlescentis mājores nātū vēreri, scil. eum. Cic. Expēdit bonas esse vōbis, scil. vos. Ter.; and rarely when it precedes in the accusative; as, Ea pōpulus lātāri et mērito dicere fieri; and also when its place is supplied by a possessive pronoun expressed or understood; as, Non fui consilium (meum)—servilibus officiis intentum cōtatem dēre (scil. me). Sall.

REM. 2. A substantive pronoun is also sometimes omitted before the infinitive, when it is the subject of the preceding verb; as, Pollicitus sum susceptūrum (esse), scil. me, I promised (that I) would undertake. Ter. Sed reddere posse negābat, scil. se. Virg.

REM. 3. The subject of the infinitive is often omitted, when it is a general word for person or thing; as, Est aliud irācundum esse, aliud irātum, scil. hōminem. Cic. See § 269, R. 1.

REM. 4. The subject-accusative, like the nominative, is often wanting. See § 209, R. 3. The subject of the infinitive may be an infinitive or a clause. See § 269, R. 3.

NOTE 2. For the verbs after which the subject-accusative with the infinitive is used, see § 272. For the accusative in the predicate after infinitives neuter and passive, see § 210.

VOCATIVE.

§ 240. The vocative is used, either with or without an interjection, in addressing a person or thing.

REMARK 1. The interjections O, heu, and pro (proh), also ah, au (hau), hem, eho, ehodum, eia (heia), hem, heus, hui, io, and ohe, are followed by the vocative; as,

O formosae puer! O beautiful boy! Virg. Heu virgo! Id. Pro sancte Jupiter! Cic. Ah stulte! Ter. Heus Syre! Id. Ohe libelle! Mart. Ehodum bone vir. Ter.—Urbe, mi Rufe, cole. Cic. Quinctili Vare, legiones redde. Suet. Quo mortuare ruis! Hor. Macte virtute esto. Cic.

REM. 2. The vocative is sometimes omitted, while a genitive depending upon it remains; as, O miseris sortis! scil. hominibus. Lucan.

NOTE. The vocative forms no part of a proposition, but serves to designate the person to whom the proposition is addressed.

ABLATIVE.

The ablative denotes certain relations of nouns and pronouns, all of which are expressed in English by means of prepositions. In Latin this case is sometimes accompanied by a preposition, and sometimes stands alone. Cf. § 87, 6.

ABLATIVE AFTER PREPOSITIONS.

§ 241. Eleven prepositions are followed by the ablative.

These are a, (or ab, abs), absque, de; cōram, pālam, cum, ex, (e); sine, tēnus, prō, and prae; as,

Ab illo tempore, From that time. Liv. A scribendo, From writing. Cic. Cum exercitu, With the army. Sall. Certis de causis, For certain reasons. Cic. Ex fuga, From flight. Id. Pālam populo. Liv. Sine labore. Cic. Oppulo tēnus. Virg. Cantabit vācuus cōram lātōne viator. Juv. cf. § 196, 5.

NOTE. Of the prepositions followed by the ablative, five signify removal or separation, viz. a (ab or abs), de, e (or ex), absque and sine.

REMARK 1. Tēnus is always placed after its case. It sometimes takes the genitive plural. See § 221, III.—Cum is always appended to the ablative of the personal pronouns me, te, se, nōbis, and vōbis, and commonly to the ablatives of the relative pronoun, quo, quā, quibus, and quī. Cf. § 183, 4, and § 186, R. 1.

REM. 2. The adverbs prōcul and simul are sometimes used with an ablative, which depends on the prepositions a or ab, and cum understood; as, Prōcul mārī, Far from the sea. Liv. Simul nōbis hābitat. Ovid. Prōcul dubio. Suet. The prepositions are frequently expressed; as, Prōcul a terrā. Cic. Prōcul a patriā. Virg. Tecum simul. Plaut. Vobiscum simul. Cic.—So, rarely, aque. Qui me in terrā aque fortunātus erit. Plaut. Cf. Nōi aque omnia tēcum. Id.

REM. 3. Some of the above prepositions, like those followed by the accusative, are occasionally used without a noun expressed; as, Quum cōram simus. Cic. Cum fratre an sine. Id. Cf. § 235, R. 10.

REM. 4. The ablative follows also the prepositions in and sub, when they answer to the question 'where?' super, when it signifies 'on' or 'concerning'; and sometimes clam and subter. Cf. § 235, (2).—(5.)

REM. 5. In is generally joined with the ablative after verbs of placing, as, pōno, lōco, collōco, stātuo, constituo, and consido; as, Et sile tābentes artus in litōre pōnunt. Virg.—So, also, after verbs signifying to have, hold, or regard; as, habeo, dico, nūmero, etc.—After verbs of assembling, concealing, and including, in is followed by either the accusative or the ablative.—After dēfigo, inscribo, inculpo, incido, and inetro, in is usually joined with the ablative.

§ 242. Many verbs compounded with ab, de, ex, and super, are followed by an ablative depending upon the preposition; as,

Abesse urbe, To be absent from the city. Cic. Abire scāibus, To depart from their habitations. Tac. Ut se maledictis non abstineant. Cic. Dētrādunt nāves scōpulo, They push the ships from the rock. Virg. Nāvi ēgressus est. Nep. Eccedere finibus. Liv. Cæsar prælio supersedere adiuvit. Cæs. Tributo ac deducto supersessum est. Cic. So the adjective extorris; as, Extorris patriâ, dōmo. Sall. And so the verbal eruptio; as, Mūtinâ eruptio. Cic.

REMARK 1. The preposition is often repeated, or one of similar signification is used; as, Dētrādere de tuâ famâ numquam cōgltāvi. Cic. Ex oculis abiit. Liv. Entre a patriâ. Cic. Entre de viâ. Id. Cf. § 224, R. 4.

REM. 2. These compound verbs are often used without a noun; but, in many cases, it may be supplied by the mind; as, Equites dēgressi ad pedes, scil. equis. Liv. Abire ad Deos, scil. viâ. Cic.

REM. 3. Some verbs compounded with ab, de, and ex, instead of the ablative, are sometimes followed by the dative. See § 224, R. 1 and 2. Some compounds, also, of neuter verbs, occur with the accusative. See § 233, R. 1.

ABLATIVE AFTER CERTAIN NOUNS, ADJECTIVES, AND VERBS.

§ 243. Opus and usus, signifying need, usually take the ablative of the thing needed; as,

Auctoritate tuâ nobis opus est, We need your authority. Cic. Nunc knimis opus, nunc pectore firmo. Virg. Nāves, quibus consiliū usus non esset, Ships, for which the consul had no occasion. Liv. Nunc viribus usus, nunc manibus raptis. Virg.

REMARK 1. (a.) Opus and usus are sometimes followed by the ablative of a perfect participle; as, Mātūrato opus est, There is need of haste. Liv. Usus facto est mihi. Ter. Ubi summus impetrator non adest ad exercitum, citius, quod non facto est usus, fit, quam quod facto est opus. Plaut. After opus, a noun is sometimes expressed with the participle; as, Opus fuit Hirtio convento,—of meeting, or, to meet, § 273, R. 5. Cic. Opus sibi esse dōmīno ejus invento. Liv.—or a supine is used; as, Ita dictu opus est, It is necessary to say, I must say. Ter.—Instead of the ablative with opus est, an infinitive, either alone or with a subject accusative, or ut with a subjunctive clause, sometimes occurs; as, Opus est te animo valere. Cic. Mihi opus est, ut lavem. Id.

(b.) Opus and usus, though nouns, are seldom limited by the genitive. In a few passages they are construed with the accusative. See § 211, R. 11.

REM. 2. Opus is sometimes the subject and sometimes the predicate of est; usus, which seldom occurs except in ante-classic poets, is, with only rare exceptions, the subject only. The person to whom the thing is needful is put in the dative; (§ 226.) With opus the thing needed may either be the subject of the verb in the nominative or accusative, or follow it in the ablative; as, Dux nobis opus est. Cic. Verrēs multa sibi opus esse aiebat. Id.; or, Duce nobis opus est. The former construction is most common with neuter adjectives and pronouns; as, Quod non opus est, asse carum est. Cato apud Sen.—In the predicate opus and usus are commonly translated 'needful' or 'necessary.' Cf. § 210, R. 5.

NOTE. For the ablative of character, quality, etc., limiting a noun, see § 211, R. 6

§ 244. Dignus, indignus, contentus, præditus, and frētus, are followed by the ablative of the object; as,

Dignus laude, Worthy of praise. Hor. Vox populi majestate indigna, A speech unbecoming the dignity of the people. Cæs. Bestias eo contentas non quarunt amplius. Cic. Homo scelere præditus. Id. Plerique ingenio frēti. Id.—So, Aequum est me atque illo. Plaut.

REMARK 1. The adverb digne, in one passage, takes the ablative; Peccat iter nostrum cruce dignius. Hor.—Dignor, also, both as the passive of the obsolete digno, and as a deponent verb, is followed by an ablative of the thing. As a deponent it takes also an accusative of the person; as, Haud equidem tali me honore dignor. Virg.—Pass. Qui tali honore dignati sunt. Cic. Conjunctio, Anchisa, Veneris dignate superbo. Virg.—Sometimes as a deponent, instead of the ablative of the thing, it is followed by an infinitive clause; as, Non ego grammaticas ambire tribus et pulpita dignor. Hor. And both dignor and dēdignor are followed by two accusatives, one of the object the other of the predicate. See § 230, R. 2.

REM. 2. (a.) Dignus and indignus are sometimes followed by the genitive; as, Suscipe cogitationem dignissimam tuas virtutis. Cic. Indignus avorum. Virg.; and dignus sometimes takes a neuter pronoun or adjective in the accusative; as, Non me censes scire quid dignus siem? Plaut. Frētus is in Livy construed with the dative. Cf. § 222, R. 6, (b.)

(b.) Instead of an ablative, dignus and indignus often take an infinitive, especially in the passive; as, Erat dignus amari. Virg.; or a subjunctive clause, with qui or ut; as, Dignus qui impēret. Cic. Non sum dignus, ut figam pālum in parietem. Plaut.; or the supine in u; as, Digna atque indigna relātus vociferans. Virg. Contentus is likewise joined with the infinitive; as, Non hæc artes contenta paternas edidicisse fuit. Ovid.—So, Naves pontum irrumpere frētus. Stat.

§ 245. I. Utor, fruor, fungor, pōtior, vescor, and their compounds, are followed by the ablative; as,

Ad quem tum Jāno supplex his vōcibus ūsa est,—addressed these words. Virg. Fruī voluptate, To enjoy pleasure. Cic. Fungitur officio, He performs his duty. Id. Oppido pōtiti sunt. Liv. Vescitur aurā. Virg. His rebus perfruor. Cic. Lēgibus abūti. Id. Dēfuncti imperio. Liv. Gravi opère perfungimur. Cic. O tandem magnis pēlāgi dēfunctē periculis. Virg.

The compounds are abutor, deutor, perfruor, dēfungor, and perfungor.

NOTE. Utor may take a second ablative, as an apposition or a predicate, like the predicate accusative, (§ 230, R. 2), and may then be translated by the verb to have; as, Ille faciā me ūtūre patre, He shall have in me an indulgent father. Ter.

REMARK. In early writers these verbs sometimes take an accusative; as, Quam rem mēdici ūtuntur. Varr. Ingenium frui. Ter. Datātes militāre mūnus fungens. Nep. Gentem aliquam urbem nostram pōtūram patem. Cic. Sacras lauros vescar. Tibull. In prolōgis scribēdis opēram abūstur. Ter.—Pōtior is, also, found with the genitive. See § 220, 4.

II. 1. Nitor, innitor, fido and confido, may be followed by the ablative without a preposition; as, Hastā innixus. Liv. Fidēre cursu. Ovid. Naturā vci confidebant. Cæs.

2. Misceo with its compounds takes, with the accusativē of the object, the ablative of the thing mingled with; as, Miscēre pābila sālē. Coll. Aguas neotāre. Ovid. Aer multo calōre admixtus. Cic.

3. Assuesco, assuefacio, consuesco, insuesco, and sometimes acquiesco, take either the dative or the ablative of the thing; as, Aves sanguine et prædiā assueita. Hor. Nullo officio aut disciplinā assuefactus. Cæs. Cf. § 224.

4. Vivo and epilor, 'to live or feast upon,' are followed by the ablative; as, Dāpibus epilāmur optimis. Virg. Lacte atque pecōre vivunt. Cæs.

5. Sto signifying 'to be filled or covered with,' and also when signifying 'to cost,' is followed by the ablative without a preposition; when signifying 'to persevere in, stick to, abide by,' 'to rest or be fixed on,' it is followed by the ablative either with or without in; as, Jam pulvère calum stare vident. Virg.—Multo sanguine ac vulneribus ea Pænis victōria stetit. Liv. Stare conditionibus. Cic. Omnis in Ascānio stat cāra pārentis. Virg.—Consisto, 'to consist of' or 'to rest upon,' is followed by the ablative either alone or with ex, de, or in; as, Consistat mātēries sōlido corpōre. Lucr. Homo ex ānimo constat et corpōre. Cic.

REMARK 1. Fido, confido, misceo, admisceo, permisceo, and assuesco often take the dative.

REM. 2. When a preposition is expressed after the above verbs, sto, fido, confido, mitto, inmitto, and assuesco take in or ad; acquiesco, in; and misceo with its compounds, cum.

§ 246. Perfect participles denoting origin are often followed by the ablative of the source, without a preposition.

Such are nātus, prōgnātus, sātus, crētus, crētus, lātus, gēnitus, gēnērātus, ortus; to which may be added frīundus, descended from.

Thus, Nāte ded! O son of a goddess! Virg. Tantālo prōgnātus, Descended from Tantalus. Cic. Sātus Nēreide, Sprung from a Nereid. Ovid. Crētus rēge. Id. Alcānore crēti. Virg. Edite rēgibus. Hor. Dūs gēnite. Virg. Argōlīco gēnērātus Alēmōne. Ovid. Ortus nullis mājōribus. Hor. Celesti sēmine frīundī. Lucr.

REMARK 1. The preposition is also rarely omitted after the verbs creo, gētro, and nascor; as, Ut patre certo nascēre. Cic. Fortes creantur fortibus. Hor.

REM. 2. After participles denoting origin, the preposition ex or de is usually joined to the name of the mother; and in a few passages ex or ab is joined to the name of the father; as, Prōgnāti ab Dīte patre. Cæs. In speaking of one's ancestors ab is frequently used; as, Plērosque Belyas esse ortos a Germānis. Id.

REM. 3. Origin from a place or country is generally expressed by a patril adjective; as, Thrasībūlus Athēniensis, Thrasylbulus of Athens. Livy often uses ab; as, Turnus Herdōnius ab Ariciā. Cæsar prefers the ablative alone; as, On. Māgius Crēmōnā; and in this manner is expressed the tribe to which a person belongs; as, Q. Verres Rōmiliā,—of the Roman tribe.

ABLATIVE OF CAUSE, ETC.

§ 247. Nouns denoting the cause, manner, means, and instrument, after adjectives and verbs, are put in the ablative without a preposition.

NOTE. The English prepositions with the ablative of cause, manner, means, and instrument are by, with, in, etc.

1. The cause. (1.) Adjectives which have a passive signification, as denoting a state or condition produced by some external cause, may take such cause in the ablative; as,

Campāni fuerunt siperbi bōnitāte agrōrum. Cic. Animal pābulo letum. Sen. Prælio fessi lassique, Weary and faint with the battle. Sall. Hōmines agrī grāvi morbo. Cic.

(2.) Neuter verbs expressing an action, state or feeling of the subject originating in some external cause, may take that cause in the ablative; as,

Interiit fame. He perished with hunger. Laude Mianā dōlet. Cic. Lator tuā dignitate. Id. Gaude tuo bono. Id. Suā victoriā gloriāri. Cæs. Aquillōnibus laborant quercēta. Hor.—So with bene est and the dative; as, Mihi bene erat non piscibus urbe petitis, sed pullo atque hædo. Hor. Ubi illi bene sit ligno, aquā calidā, cibo, vestimentis, etc. Plaut.

NOTE 1. After such adjectives and neuter verbs, a preposition with its case often supplies the place of the simple ablative.

NOTE 2. In exclamations of encouragement or approbation, the defective adjective macte, macti, either with or without the imperative of esse (esto, este, estote), is joined with an ablative of cause, especially with virtute.

NOTE 3. After neuter verbs and adjectives denoting emotions, especially those of care, grief, and sorrow, the accusative vicem, with a genitive or a possessive pronoun, is used, instead of the ablative vice, to signify 'for' or 'on account of'; as, Remittimus hoc tibi, ne nostram vicem irascāris. That you may not be angry on our account. Liv. Tuam vicem sæpe dōleo, quod, etc. Cic. Suam vicem magis anxius, quam ejus, cui auxilium ab se petebatur. Liv.

REMARK 1. When the cause is a voluntary agent, it is put in the accusative with the preposition ob, propter, or per; as, Non est æquum me propter vos decipi. Ter. These prepositions, and a, or ab, de, e or ex, and præ, are also sometimes used when the cause is not a voluntary agent; as, Ob adulterium cæsi. Virg. Nec loqui præ morore potuit. Cic.

REM. 2. (a.) After active verbs, the cause, unless expressed by an ablative in u from substantives having no other case; as, Jussu, rogatu and admonitu, is seldom expressed by the simple ablative, but either by a preposition, or by causā, gratiā, ergo, etc., with a genitive; as, Lēgibus propter metum parat. Cic. Ne ob eam rem ipsos despiceret. Id. Donari virtutis ergo. Id. Si hoc hōnoris mei causā suscepēris. Id. But with causā, etc., the adjective pronoun is commonly used for the corresponding substantive pronoun; as, Te obesse meā causā, moleste fero. Cic. Cf. § 211, R. 3, (b.)

(b.) When the cause is a state of feeling, a circumlocution is often used with a perfect participle of some verb signifying 'to induce'; as, Cupitātate ductus, inductus, incitatus, incensus, inflammatus, impulsus, motus, captus, etc. Mihi benē-volentiā ductus tribuebat omnia. Cic. Livy frequently uses ab in this sense; as, Ab ira, a spe, ab odio, from anger, hope, hatred.

2. The manner. Cum is regularly joined with the ablative of manner, when expressed simply by a noun, not modified by any other word; and also when an adjective is joined with the noun, provided an additional circumstance, and not merely an essential character of the action, is to be expressed. Thus:

Cum voluptate aliquem audire. Verres Lampæcum venit cum magnā calāmitate civitatis. Cic. Hence also when the connection between the subject and the noun denoting the attribute is only external; as, Præcedere cum veste purpureā: in distinction from Nudis pedibus incedere; Aperto capite sedere, etc., which express circumstances or attributes essential to the subject.

But modus, ratio, mos, ritus, etc., signifying manner, never take cum, and it is omitted in some expressions with other substantives; as, Hoc modo scripsi; Constituerunt quā ratione ageretur; More bestiarum vagari; Latronum ritu vivere; Equo animo fero; Maximā fide amicitias coluit. Summā æquitate res constituit; Viam incredibili celeritate confecit; Librum magnā cura diligentique scripsit; the action of the verb being intimately connected with the circumstance expressed by the ablative. So in some expressions with substantives alone; as, Stilentio præterire or facere aliquid; Læge agere; Jure and injuriā facere; Magistratus vitio creatus; Recte et ordine fit.

REM. 3. The manner is also sometimes denoted by de or ex with the ablative; as, De or ex industria, On purpose. Liv. Ex integro, Anew. Quint.

8. The means and instrument. An ablative is joined with verbs of every kind, and also with adjectives of a passive signification, to express the means or instrument; as,

Amicos observantiā, rem parsimōniā retinuit, He retained his friends by attention, his property by frugality. Cic. Auro ostrōque dēcori. Virg. Ægrecit mēdendo. Id. Cornibus tauri, apri dentibus, morsu leones se tūtantur. Cic. Cæsus est virgis. Id. Trabs saucia sēcūri. Ovid. For the ablative of the means after verbs of filling, etc., see § 249, I.

REM. 4. When the means is a person, it is seldom expressed by the simple ablative, but either by per, or by the ablative opérā with a genitive or a possessive pronoun; as, meā, tuā, suā, opérā, which are equivalent to per me, per te, per se, and denote both good and bad services. Beneficio meo, etc., is used of good results only; as, Beneficio meo patres sunt. Sall. But persons are sometimes considered as involuntary agents, and as such expressed by the ablative without a preposition; as, Servos, quibus silvas publicas depopulatus erat. Cic.—When per is used to express the means, it is connected with external concurring circumstances, rather than with the real means or instrument. Hence we always say vi oppidum cepit, but per vim ei bona eripuit.

REM. 5. The material instrument is always expressed by the ablative without a preposition; as, Conficere ceruvum sagittis; gladio aliquem vulnerare; trahere pectus ferro.

§ 248. The ablative is used with passive verbs to denote the means or agent by which any thing is effected, and which in the active voice is expressed by the nominative. This ablative is used either with ab or without it, according as it is a person or a thing.

I. The voluntary agent of a verb in the passive voice is put in the ablative with a or ab; as,

(In the active voice,) Clodius me diligit, Clodius loves me (Cic.); (in the passive,) A Clodio diligor, I am loved by Clodius. Laudatur ab his, culpatur ab illis. Hor.

REMARK 1. (1.) The general word for persons, after verbs in the passive voice, is often understood; as, Præbitas laudatur, scil. ab hominibus. Juv. So after the passive of neuter verbs; as, Discurritur. Virg. Toto certatum est corpore regni. Id. Cf. § 141, R. 2.

(2.) The agent is likewise often understood, when it is the same as the subject of the verb, and the expression is then equivalent to the active voice with a reflexive pronoun, or to the middle voice in Greek; as, Quum omnes in omni genere scelerum voluntur, scil. a se. Cic.

REM. 2. Neuter verbs, also, are sometimes followed by an ablative of the voluntary agent with a or ab; as,

M. Marcellus perit ab Annibale, M. Marcellus was killed by Hannibal. Plin. Ne vir ab hoste cadat. Ovid.

REM. 3. The preposition is sometimes omitted; as, Nec conjuge captus. Ovid. Collitur linigera turba. Id. Pereat meis cæcis Argivis. Hor.

For the dative of the agent after verbs in the passive voice, and participles in dus, see § 226, II. and III.

II. The involuntary agent of a verb in the passive voice, or of a neuter verb, is put in the ablative without a preposition, as the cause, means, or instrument; as, Maximo dolore conficior. Cic. Frangi cupiditate. Id. Æacides telo jaces Hector. Virg.

NOTE. The involuntary agent is sometimes personified, and takes a or ab; as, A voluptatibus deseri. Cic. A naturâ datum homini vivendi curriculum. Id. Vinci a voluptate. Id. Victus a labore. Id.

§ 249. I. A noun denoting the means, by which the action of a verb is performed, is put in the ablative after verbs signifying to affect in any way, to fill, furnish, load, array, equip, endow, adorn, reward, enrich, and many others.

REMARK 1. This rule includes such verbs as afficio, aspergo, conspargo, inspergo, re-spergo, compleo, expleo, impleo, oppleo, repleo, suppleo, cumulo, farcio, refercio, satio, exsatio, satio, sitio, constipo, obruo, onero, augeo, induo, vestio, armo, orno, circumdo, circumfundo, macto, lucuplito, instruo, imbuo, dono, impertio, remātor, honesto, honoro, etc.; as, Terrorē implētur Africa, Africa is filled with terror. Sil. Instruere epulas mensas, They furnished the tables with food. Ovid. Ut ejus animum his opinionibus imbueret, That you should imbue his mind with these sentiments. Cic. Naves onerant auro, They load the ships with gold. Virg. Cumulat altaria donis, He heaps the altars with gifts. Id. Terra se gramine vestit, The earth clothes itself with grass. Id. Mollibus ornabat cornua sertis. Id. Multo cibo et potione completi. Cic. Libros puerilibus fabulis referere. Id. Satiari delectatione non possum. Id. Homines satiari honoribus. Id. Senectus stipata studiis juven-tatis. Id. Me tanto honore honestas. Plant. Equia Africam lucuplitaui. Colum. Stadium tuum nulla me nova voluptate affecit. Cic. Terram nos obruit umbra. Lucr.

REM. 2. Several verbs denoting to fill, instead of the ablative, sometimes take a genitive. See § 220, 3.

REM. 3. The active verbs induo, dono, impertio, aspergo, inspergo, circumdo, and circumfundo, instead of the ablative of the thing with the accusative of the person, sometimes take an accusative of the thing, and a dative of the person; as, Qui quum Deianira tunicam induisset. Cic. Dondere munera civibus. In the earliest writers dono, like condono, has sometimes two accusatives or an accusative of the person with the infinitive.

II. A noun denoting that in accordance with which any thing is, or is done, is often put in the ablative without a preposition; as, Nostrò more, According to our custom. Cic. Instituto suo Cæsar copias suas educit, According to his practice. Cæs. Id factum consilio meo,—by my advice. Tér. Pacem fecit his conditionibus,—on these conditions. Nep.

NOTE. The prepositions de, ex, pro, and secundum are often expressed with such nouns; as, Næque est facturus quidquam nisi de meo consilio. Cic. Ex consuetudine aliquid facere. Plin. Ep. Decet quidquid agas, agere pro viribus. Cic. Secundum naturam vivere. Id.

III. The ablative denoting accompaniment, is usually joined with cum; as, Vagāmur egentes cum conjugibus et liberis, Needy, we wander with our wives and children. Cic. Sæpe admirari soleo cum hoc C. Lælio. Id. Silium cum his ad te litteris misi. Id. Ingressus est cum gladio. Id. Romam veni cum febris. Cum occasu solis copias educere,—as soon as the sun set.

REMARK. But cum is sometimes omitted before words denoting military and naval forces, when limited by an adjective; as, Ad castra Cæsaris omnibus copiis contendunt. Cæs. Inde toto exercitu profectus. Liv. Eodem decem milibus C. Furius venit. Liv. And sometimes in military language cum is omitted, when accompanying circumstances are mentioned, and not persons; as, Castra clamore incedunt.

§ 250. 1. A noun, adjective, or verb, may be followed by the ablative, denoting in what respect their signification is taken; as,

Piſtate filius, conſiliſ pater, In affection a son, in counsel a parent. Cic. Rēges nōmine magis quam imperio, Kings in name rather than in authority. Nep. Optimū nōmine Bibrax. Cass.—Sure pēritus, Skilled in law. Cic. Anxius animo, Anxious in mind. Tac. Pēdibus æger, Lame in his feet. Sall. Crine ruber, niger ore. Mart. Fronte latus. Tac. Māior nātū. Cic. Prudentiā non infērior, ſuū vērō etiā ſupērior. Id. Maximū nātū. Liv.—Animo angī, To be troubled in mind. Cic. Contrēmisco ſcīlā mente et omnibꝯ artibꝯ, I am agitated in my whole mind and in every limb. Id. Captus mente, Affected in mind, i. e. deprived of reason. Id. Alitro oculo capitur. Liv. Ingeniū laude flōruit. Cic. Pollere nobilitate. Tac. Animōque et corpore torpet. Hor.

REMARK. This may be called the ablative of limitation, and denotes the relation expressed in English by 'in respect of,' 'in regard to,' 'as to,' or 'in.'—Respecting the genitive of limitation after adjectives, see § 218;—after verbs, § 220, 1: and respecting the accusative of limitation, see § 251, R. 5; § 232, (3.); and § 234, II.

2. (1.) Adjectives of plenty or want are sometimes limited by the ablative; as,

Dōmus plēna ſervis, A house full of servants. Juv. Dives agris, Rich in land. Hor. Fēraz ſacclum bonis artibꝯ. Plin.—Inops verbis, Deficient in words. Cic. Orba frātribꝯ, Destitute of brothers. Ovid. Viduum arboribꝯ ſolum. Colum. Nūdus agris. Hor. For the genitive after adjectives of plenty and want, see § 218, R. 3-5.

(2.) Verbs signifying to abound, and to be destitute, are followed by the ablative; as, Scđtentem belluīs pontum, The sea abounding in monsters. Hor. Urbs rēdūdat militibꝯ, The city is full of soldiers. Auct. ad Her. Villa abundat porco, hēdo, agno, gallinā, lacte, cāseo, melle. Cic.—Vtrum qui pecūniā ēgeat, A man who is in want of money. Id. Cārere culpā, To be free from fault. Id. Mea adlēcētia indiget illōrum bonā existimatiōe. Id. Abundat audaciā, conallio et ratiōne deficitur. Id.

REMARK 1. To this rule belong abundo, exubēro, rēdundo, scđteo, affluo, circumfluo, diffluo, superfluo, suppetāto, valeo, vigeo;—cāreo, ēgeo, indigeo, vāco, deficior, destitutor, etc.

REM. 2. The genitive, instead of the ablative, sometimes follows certain verbs signifying to abound or to want. See § 220, 3.

REM. 3. To do any thing with a person or thing, is expressed in Latin by fācere with de; as, Quid de Tulliolā meā fiet? Cic.; and more frequently by the simple ablative, or the dative; as, Quid hoc hōmine or huic hōmini faciātis? What can you do with this man? Cic. Nescit quid faciat auro,—what he shall do with the gold. Plaut. Quid me fiat parvi pendis, You care little what becomes of me. Ter.—Sum is occasionally used in the same manner; as, Mētum cēperunt quidnam se futurum esset,—what would become of them. Liv.

§ 251. A noun denoting that of which any thing is deprived, or from which it is freed, removed, or separated, is often put in the ablative without a preposition.

This construction occurs after verbs signifying to deprive, free, debar, drive away, remove, depart, and others which imply separation.

NOTE. The principal verbs of this class are arceo, pello, dépello, expello, ab-dico, interdico, défendo, déturbo, déjicio, éjicio, absterreo, déterreo, móveo, amóveo, démóveo, rémóveo, sécerno, próhibeo, sépáro, exclúdo, interclúdo, déo, exéo, cédo, decédo, discédo, désisto, évádo, abstíneo, spólio, privo, orbo, libéro, expédío, lazo, nádo, solvó, exsolvó, exónéro, léro, purgo, to which may be added the adjecti-tives liber, immúnis, púrus, vácuus, and aliénus; as,

Nadantur arbóres fóliis, The trees are stripped of leaves. Plin. Hoc me libéra mētu, Free me from this fear. Ter. Túne eam philósophiam séquere, quæ spóliat nos júdicio, privat approbátione, orbat sensibus? Cic. Solvit se Teucría luctu.
Virg. Te illis sédibus arcébit. Cic. Q. Varium pellére possessiónibus cónatus est. Id. Omnes tribu rémóti. Liv. Lévare se ere aliéno. Cic. Me léves chóri sécernunt pópulo. Hor. Antimus omni liber cúrâ et angóre. Cic. Utrumque hómíne aliénissimum. Id. When aliénus signifies 'averse' or 'hostile to,' it takes the ablative with ab, or rarely the dative; as, Id dicit, quod illi causæ maxime est aliénium. Id. In the sense of 'unsuited,' it may also be joined with the genitive; as, Quis aliénium páter ejus esse dignitátis? Id.—Alius too, in analogy with adjectives and verbs of separation, sometimes takes an ablative; as, Néve pátes álium sapiente bônogæ beatum. Hor.; but this may also be referred to the ablative after comparatives. Cf. § 256, R. 14.

REMARK 1. Most verbs of depriving and separating are more or less frequently followed by ab, de, or ex, with the ablative of the thing, and always by ab with the ablative of the person; as, Tu Jápiter, hunc a tuis áris arcébis. Cic.
Prasídium ex arce pópulérunt. Nep. Aquam de agro pellére. Plin. Ex ingrátâ civitate cédere. Cic. Arcem ab incendio libérávit. Id. Solvére bellum ex cãtónis. Auct. ad Her.—Sédés rémótas a Germánis. Cæs. Se ab Etruscía sécérnère. Liv.

REM. 2. Arceo, in the poets, sometimes takes the dative, see § 224, R. 2., and sometimes an infinitive; as, Plágamque sédere cédendo arcébat. Ovid.—
Próhibeo and défendo take either the accusative of the person or thing to be defended, with the ablative of the thing to be warded off—or the reverse—áliquem or álicui a périculo, or périculum ab áliquo. They are also sometimes construed with the dative, see § 224, R. 2., and sometimes with infinitive or subjunctive clauses. Próhibeo has rarely two accusatives; as, Id te Jápiter próhibessit. Plaut.; or poetically the accusative and genitive; as, Cyptas próhi-bere Pános áquills. Sil.—Interdico takes the person either in the accusative or the dative, and the thing in the ablative, áliquem or álicui aliquâ re; as, Quibus quum áquâ et igni interdixissent. Cæs.—Instead of the ablative, a subjunctive clause with ne, and more rarely with ut, sometimes follows interdico.—Absum, in like manner, takes the ablative with ab, and sometimes the dative; as, Curtæ nescio quid semper ábest rei. Hor. Cf. § 224, R. 1.—Abdico takes sometimes an ablative, and sometimes an accusative of the thing renounced; as, Abdicáre se mágistrátu. Cic. Abdicáre mágistrátum. Sall. In Plautus, circum-dúco, to cheat, takes the ablative of the thing. Interclúdo, instead of an ablative of the thing with an accusative of the person, sometimes takes an accusative of the thing and a dative of the person; as, litérum angustia multitudínis fúgam interclúderant. Cæs.: and, instead of the ablative of the thing, a subjunctive clause with quóminus occurs: Interclúdor dólore, quóminus ad is plúra scribam. Cic.

REM. 3. Verbs which signify to distinguish, to differ, and to disagree, are generally construed with ab, but sometimes, especially in the poets, with the ablative alone.

NOTE. Verbs signifying to distinguish, etc., are distinguo, discerno, sécerno, différo, discrepo, dissideo, dislo, dissentio, discordo, dóhorreo, aliéno, and abaliéno.—
Dissentio, dissideo, discrepo, and discordo are construed also with cum.—The verbs which signify to differ are sometimes construed with the dative; as, Distat infido scurræ amicus. Hor., and in like manner the adjective diversus; as, Nihil est tam Lysias diversum, quam Isocrátes. Quint.

ABLATIVE OF PRICE.

§ 252. The price or value of a thing is put in the ablative, when it is a definite sum, or is expressed by a substantive; as,

Quum te trēcentis tālentis regi Cotto vendidisses, When you had sold yourself to king Cottus for three hundred talents. Cic. Vendidi hic auro patriam, This one sold his country for gold. Virg. Cibus uno asse vendis. Plin. Constiti quādringentis millibus. Varr. Dēnis in diem assibus dñmum et corpus (militum) aestimāri. Tac. Lēvi mōmento aestimāre. Cæsar. Istuc verbum vile est viginti milibus. Plaut. Asse carum est. Sen. Ep.

REMARK 1. The verbs which take an ablative of price or value are (1) aestimā, dūco, fācio, fio, hābeo, pendo, pūto, dēpūto, taxo: (2) ēmo, mercor, vendo, do, vīneo, sto, consto, prosto, condūco, lōco, vāleo, luo, and āceo.—To these must be added others, which express some act or enjoyment for which a certain price is paid; as, Lāvor quādrante. Trīginta millibus Onius hābitat. Cic. Vix drachmis est obsidatus dēcem. Ter. Dōceo tālento, etc. So esse in the sense 'to be worth'; as, Sextante sal in Italia erat.

REM. 2. Respecting the genitive of price or value, when expressed in a general or indefinite manner, see § 214.

REM. 3. The price of a thing, contrary to the general rule, is often expressed indefinitely by a neuter adjective; as, magno, permagno, parvo, tantulo, plūre, minimo, plūrimo, vix, vixiori, vilissimo, nimio, etc.; as, Plūre vēmī. Cic. Conduxi non magno dōmum. Id. These adjectives refer to some noun understood, as prētio, ore, and the like, which are sometimes expressed; as, Parvo prētio ea vendidisse. Cic.—The adverbs bene, pulchre, recte, male, cāre, etc., sometimes take the place of the genitive or ablative of price; as, Bene emēre; recte vendēre; optime vendēre, etc.

REM. 4. Varro has used vāleo with the accusative; as, Dēnārii dicti, quod dēnos aris vālebant.

REM. 5. Mūto and its compounds, commūto and permūto, are commonly construed like verbs of selling, the thing parted with being put in the accusative, and the thing received in exchange for it, in the ablative; as, Chāōniam glāndem pingui mūtāvī arisidā. Virg. But these cases are often reversed, so that the thing received is put in the accusative and the thing given for it in the ablative; as, Our vallis permūtētem Sabinā divitias opērosiores? Why should I exchange my Sabine valley for more wearisome riches? Hor.—Sometimes in this construction cum is joined with the ablative.

. ABLATIVE OF TIME.

§ 253. A noun denoting the time at or within which any thing is said to be, or to be done, is put in the ablative without a preposition; as,

Die quinto decessit, He died on the fifth day. Nep. Hoc tempore, At this time. Cic. Tertiā vigiliā eruptionem fecerunt, They made a sally at the third watch. Cæsar. Ut hieme naviges, That you should sail in the winter. Cic. Proximo triennio omnes gentes subegit. Nep. Agamemnon cum universā Graciā vis dēcem annis ānam cepit urbem. Nep.

NOTE 1. The English expression 'by day' is rendered in Latin either by interdiu or die; 'by night,' by noctu or nocte; and 'in the evening,' by vespere or vesperi; see § 82, Exc. 5, (a.) Lūdis is used for in tempore ludōrum; and Sāturnālibus, Lātiniis, glādiātoribus, for lūdis Sāturnālibus, etc. Other nouns not properly expressing time are used in that sense in the ablative either with or without in, as initio, prīncipio, adventu and discessu diūjus, cōmītiis, tūmultu, bello, pāce, etc.; or in initio, etc. But bello is more common without in, if it is joined with an adjective or a genitive; as, Bello Punico secundo, bello Litānorum; and so, also, pugnā Cannensi. So we say in pueritiā, but omit in with an adjective; as, extremā pueritiā. In is very rarely used with nouns expressing a certain space of time; as, annus, dies, hōra, etc., for the purpose of denoting the time of an event. In tempore signifies either 'in distress,' or 'in time,' i. e. 'at the right time'; but in both cases tempore alone is used, and tempore in the sense of 'early' has even become an adverb, an earlier form of which was tempōri or tempēri, whose comparative is tempērius.

REMARK 1. When a period is marked by its distance before or after another fixed time, it may be expressed by ante or post with either the accusative or the ablative.—(a.) The preposition is regularly placed before the accusative, but after the ablative. If an adjective is used, the preposition is often placed between the adjective and the noun. In this connection the ordinal as well as the cardinal numbers may be used. Hence the English phrase 'after three years,' or 'three years after,' may be expressed in these eight ways; post tres annos, tribus annis post; post tertium annum, tertio anno post; tres post annos, tribus post annis; tertium post annum, tertio post anno.

(b.) When ante or post stands last, an accusative may be added to denote the time before or after which any thing took place; as, Multi annis post decemvros. Cic. So Consul factus est annis post Rōmā conditam trēcentis duobus et octoginta.

NOTE 2. Post and ante sometimes precede the ablatives, as ante annis octo; post paucis diebus; and also before such ablatives as are used adverbially, as post aliquanto; ante paulo.

NOTE 3. Quam and a verb are sometimes added to post and ante in all the forms above specified; as, g. tribus annis postquam vēnerat; post tres annos quam vēnerat; tertio anno postquam vēnerat; post annum tertium quam vēnerat, etc.; all of which expressions signify 'three years after he had come.' Sometimes post is omitted; as, tertio anno quam vēnerat.

NOTE 4. Instead of postquam, 'after,' we may use ex quo, quum, or a relative agreeing with the preceding ablative; as, Ipsē octo diebus, quibus has līteras dābam, cum Lēpti cōpias me conjungam; i. e. in eight days after the date of this letter. Planc. in Cic. Fam. Mors Sex. Rosci quatrīduo, quo is occisus est, Chrīstōno nuntiātur,—four days after he had been killed. Cic. Quem trīduo, quum has dābam līteras, exspectābam,—three days after the date of this letter. Planc. in Cic. In such cases in is sometimes joined with the ablative; as, in diebus paucis, quibus hæc acta sunt, moritur. Ter.

REM. 2. The length of time before the present moment may be expressed by abhinc with the accusative, and, less frequently, the ablative; as, Quæstor fuisti abhinc annos quatuordecim. Cic. Cōmitiis jam abhinc triginta diebus habitis. Id. The same is also expressed by ante with the pronoun hic; as, ante hos sex menses maledixisti mihi,—six months ago. Phæd. Ante is sometimes used instead of abhinc: and the length of time before is sometimes expressed by the ablative joined with hic or ille; as, Paucis his diebus, or paucis illis diebus,—a few days ago.

REM. 3. The time at which any thing is done, is sometimes expressed by the neuter accusative id, with a genitive; as, Venit id tempōris. Cic. So with a preposition; Ad id diēi. Gell. See § 212, R. 3.

REM. 4. (a.) The time at or within which any thing is done, is sometimes, with personal subjects, expressed by de, with the ablative; as, De tertiā vigiliā ad hostes contendit,—in the third watch. Cæs. Ut iugulent hōmines surgunt de nocte latrones. Hor. So, also, with sub; as, Ne sub ipsā profectiōne milites optidum irrumperent,—at the very time of his departure. Cæs. Sub adventu Rōmāndrum. While the Romans were arriving. Id.

(b.) The time within which any thing occurs, is also sometimes expressed by intra with the accusative; as, Dimidiā partem natiōnum subegit intra viginis dies. Plaut. Intra decimum diem, quam Phēras vēnerat, In less than ten days after... Liv.

REM. 5. The time within which a thing happens, is often expressed by the ablative with in; especially (a) in connection with numerals; as, Bis in die editurum fieri; vix ter in anno nuntium audire; and (b), as in the use of intra, to denote that the event happened before the time specified had fully expired.

REM. 6. Instead of in pueritiâ, adulescentiâ, iuventute, senectute, etc., in stating the age at which a person performed any action, the concrete puer, adulescens, juvenis, senex, etc., are commonly joined to the verb; as, Ch. Pompeius, adulescens se et patrem consilio servavit.—So, also, adjectives ending in enarius are sometimes used in stating the number of years a person has lived; as, Cicero sexagénarius.

For the ablative denoting duration of time, see § 236.

ABLATIVE OF PLACE.

§ 254. The name of a town in which any thing is said to be, or to be done, if of the third declension or plural number, is put in the ablative without a preposition; as,

Alexander Bâbylône est mortuus, Alexander died at Babylon. Cic. Interitum multum—Thëbis natus an Argis,—whether brought up at Thebes or at Argos. Hor. Natus Tibûre vel Gâbiis. Id.

REMARK 1. 'In the country' is expressed by rûre, or more commonly by rûri, without a preposition; as, Pater filium rûri habitare iussit. Cic. With an adjective only rûre is used; as, Interdum nâgaris rûre pâterno. Hor. Cf. § 221, N.

REM. 2. (a.) The preposition in is sometimes expressed with names of towns; as, In Philippis quidam nunciavit. Suet.

(b.) Names of towns of the first and second declension, and singular number, and also dômus and hîmus, are in like manner sometimes put in the ablative without in. See § 221, R. 2 and R. 3.—So, also, terrâ marique, by land and by sea. In is also frequently omitted with lôco and lôcis, especially when joined with an adjective and having the meaning of 'occasion'; as, Hoc lôco, multis lôcis, etc.—Libro joined with an adjective, as hoc, primo, etc., is used without in when the whole book is meant, and with in when only a portion is referred to. An ablative of place joined with toto, totâ, totis, is generally used without in; as, Urbe totâ gemitus fit. Cic. Totâ Asiâ cûgâtur. Id. Toto mari. Id. But in such cases in is sometimes used. So cunctâ Asiâ. Liv.

REM. 3. Before the names of countries, of nations used for those of countries, and of all other places in which any thing is said to be or to be done, except those of towns, and excepting also the phrases specified in the first and second remarks, the preposition in is commonly used; as, Iphicrâtes in Thrâciâ vivit, Chares in Sigô. Nep. Rûre ego viventem, tu dicis in urbe beatum. Hor. Aio hoc fieri in Græciâ. Plaut. In Bactriânis Sogdiânisque urbes condidit. Lucus in urbe fuit. Virg. But it is sometimes omitted by writers of every class and period; as, Milites adânis castris habebat. Sall. Magnis in laudibus fuit totâ Græciâ. Nep. Pôpuli sensus maxime theâtro et spectâculis perspectus est. Cic. Pompeius se oppido tînet. Id. In the poets and later prose writers this omission is of very frequent occurrence not only with names of towns but with ablatives of all nouns answering to the question, where? as, Nâvita puppe sedens. Ovid. Ibam forte Viâ Sacrâ. Hor. Silvisque agrisque vîis ac corpôra fada jacent. Ovid. Mêdio alveo concursus est. Liv.—Fôris, out at the door, abroad, is properly an ablative of place; as, Fôris cenat. Cic. Cf. § 237, R. 5, (c.)

§ 255. 1. After verbs expressing or implying motion, the name of a town whence the motion proceeds, is put in the ablative, without a preposition; as,

Brundisio præfecti sumus, We departed from Brundisium. Cic. Diogenius tyrannus Syracusæ expulso Corinthi pueros docebat. Id. Demétratus Turginius Corintho fugit. Id. Accēpi tuas litéras dātas Placentiā. Id. Intérim Rómā per litéras certior fit; scil. dātas or missas. Sall. J. 82. So, also, after a verbal noun; as, Narbōne rēctus. Cic.

REMARK 1. The ablatives dōmo, hūmo, and rūre or rūri, are used, like names of towns, to denote the place whence motion proceeds; as, Dōmo præfectus, Having set out from home. Nep. Surgit hūmo iuēnis, The youth rises from the ground. Ovid. Rūre huc advenit. Ter. Si rūri veniet. Id. Virgil uses dōmo with unde; as, Qui gēnus? unde dōmo? and Livy, instead of dōmo abesse, has esse ab dōmo. With an adjective, rūre, and not rūri, must be used.

REM. 2. With names of towns and dōmus and hūmus, when answering the question 'whence?' ab, ex, or de, is sometimes used; as, Ab Alexandriā præfectus. Cic. Ex dōmo. Id. De vltimā vēnisse Viennā. Mart. Ab hūmo. Virg.

REM. 3. (a.) With other names of places whence motion proceeds, ab, ex, or de, is commonly expressed; as, Me a portu præmisit. Plaut. Ex Asiā transis in Europam. Curt. Ex castris præfiscuntur. Cæs. De Pomptino, scil. prædio. Cic.—So, also, before names of nations used for those of countries; as, Ex Mædis ad adversariōrum hibernacūla pervēnit. Nep.

(b.) But the preposition is sometimes omitted; as, Litéras Mæcedoniā allātæ. Liv. Classis Cypro advenit. Curt. Cessissent loco. Liv. Ni otte vicis et castellis proximis subveniunt foret. Id. Ne sacris, præpōratæ sacris, laurumque cāpillis pōnite. Ovid. Finibus omnes præluere suis. Virg. Advolvunt ingentes montibus ornos. Id. This omission of the preposition is most common in the poets and later prose writers.

2. The place by, through, or over which, after verbs of motion, commonly follows per; but frequently also it is put in the ablative without a preposition; as,

Per Thēbas iter fecit. Nep. Exercitum vado transducit. Cæs. His pontibus pabulatum mittebat. Id. Tribuni militum portā Collinā urbem intrāvere sub signis, mediāque urbe agmine in Aventinum pergunt. Liv. Légiōnes Penninis Cottianisque Alpibus, pars monte Graio, trāducuntur. Tac. Equites viā breviorē præmissi. Cic.

ABLATIVE AFTER COMPARATIVES.

§ 256. 1. When two objects are compared by means of the comparative degree, a conjunction, as quam, atque, etc., is sometimes expressed, and sometimes omitted.

2. The comparative degree, when quam is omitted, is followed by the ablative of that with which the comparison is made; as,

Nihil est virtute formosius, Nothing is more beautiful than virtue. Cic. Quis C. Lælio cōmior? Who is more courteous than C. Lælius? Id.

REMARK 1. The person or thing with which the subject of a proposition is compared, is usually put in the ablative; as, Stdere pulchrior ille est, tu levior cortice. Hor. Vilius argentum est auro, virtutibus aurum. Id. Tullus Hostilius ferocior Rómulo fuit. Liv. Lacrima nihil citius crescit. Cic. Quid magis est durum saxo, quid mollius undā? Ovid. Hoc nemo fuit minus ineptus. Ter. Albanum, Macenas, sive Falernum te magis apocistis delectat. Hor.

REM. 2. An object with which a person or thing addressed is compared, is also put in the ablative; as, O fons Bandusia splendidiôr vitro! Hor.

REM. 3. Sometimes the person or thing with which the subject of a proposition is compared, instead of following it in the ablative, is connected with it by quam, and it is then put in the same case as the subject, whether in the nominative or the accusative; as, Oratio quam hâbitus fuit miserabiliôr. Cic. Affirmo nullam esse laudem ampliôrem quam eam. Id. So, also, when an ablative in the case absolute takes the place of the subject; as, Eodem (scil. dûce) plura, quam grêgario milite, tollente. Tac.

REM. 4. If the person or thing which is compared with any object is neither the subject of the sentence nor the person addressed, quam is commonly used, and the object which follows it is then put in the nominative with sum, and sometimes in an oblique case to agree with the object with which it is compared; as, Meliôrem, quam ego sum, suppono tibi. Plaut. Ego hominem callidiôrem vidi neminem quam Phormionem. Ter. Adventus hostium fuit agris, quam urbi terribiôr. Liv. Omnes fontesestate, quam hieme, sunt gelidiôres. Plin. Thémistoclis nomen, quam Sôlonis, est illustrius. Cic.—The following example illustrates both the preceding constructions:—Ut tibi multo majôri, quam Africânus fuit, me non multo minôrem quam Lælium facile et in republicâ et in amicitia adjuncium esse patiare. Cic.

REM. 5. (a.) The person or thing with which the object of an active verb is compared, though usually connected with it by quam, (R. 4.) is sometimes put in the ablative, especially in the poets, and frequently also even in prose, if the object is a pronoun, particularly a relative pronoun; as, Attalo, quo gravidrem inimicum non habui, sororem dedit. He gave his sister to Attalus, than whom, etc. Curt. Hoc nihil grâtius facere potes. Cic. Causam enim suscepisti antiquiorem mêmoriâ tuâ. Id. Exegi mômumentum ære perennius. Hor. Cur olivum sanguine viperino cautius vitat? Id. Quid prius dicam solitis parentis laudibus? Id. Majora viribus audes. Virg. Nullam sacra vite prius severis arboreis. Hor. Nullos his mallem ludos spectasse. Id. § 178, 2.

(b.) The ablative instead of quam is never used with any other oblique case except the accusative, but quam is sometimes found, even where the ablative might have been used; as, Meliôr tutiôrque est certa paz quam spêrâta victôria. Liv. After quam, if the verb cannot be supplied from the preceding sentence, est, fuit, etc., must be added; as, Hæc verba sunt M. Varronis, quam fuit Claudius, doctiôris. Gell. Drusum Germanicum minôrem natu, quam ipse erat, fratrem amisi. Sen.

REM. 6. (a.) Minus, plus, and amplius with numerals, and with other words denoting a certain measure or a certain portion of a thing, are used either with or without quam, generally as indeclinable words, without influence upon the construction, but merely to modify the number; as, Non plus quam quatuor millia effugerunt, not effugit. Liv. Pictôres antiqui non sunt usi plus quam quatuor coloribus, not pluribus. Cic.

(b.) Quam is frequently omitted with all cases; as, Minus duo millia hominum ex tanto exercitu effugerunt. Liv. Milites Rômam sæpe plus dimidiati mensis cibaria ferebant. Cic. Quam plus annum oger fuisset. Liv. Sedecim non amplius eo anno legionibus defensus imperium est. Id.

(c.) These comparatives, as in the preceding example, are sometimes inserted between the numeral and its substantive, and sometimes, when joined with a negative, they follow both, as a sort of apposition; as, Quinque millia armatorum, non amplius, relictum erat presidium,—a garrison of five thousand soldiers, not more. Liv. So, also, longius; Cæsar certior est factus, magnas Gallorum copias non longius millia passuum octo ab hibernis suis abfuisse. Cæs. See § 236.

(d.) The ablative is sometimes used with these as with other comparatives; as, Dies triginta aut plus eo in navi fui. Ter. Triennio amplius. Cic. Hôrâ amplius moriebantur. Id. Ne longius triduo ab castris absit. Cæs. Apud Suëos non longius anno remanere uno in loco incolendi causâ licet. Id. Quam initio non amplius duobus millibus habuisset. Sall.

REM. 7. Quam is in like manner sometimes omitted, without a change of case, after māior, minor, and some other comparatives; as, Obsides ne minōres octōnum dēnum annōrum seu māiores quīnum quādrāgenūm,.... of not less than eighteen, nor more than forty-five years of age. Liv. Ex urbāno exercitus, qui minōres quīnque et trīginta annis erant, in naves impositi sunt. The genitive and ablative, in these and similar examples, are to be referred to § 211, R. 6. Longius ab urbe mille passuum. Liv. Annos nātas māgis quādrāginta. Cic.

REM. 8. When the second member of a comparison is an infinitive or a clause, quam is always expressed; as, Nihil est in dicendo mājus quam ut fāveat orātori auditor. Cic.

REM. 9. Certain nouns, participles, and adjectives,—as opiniōne, spe, expectatiōne, fide,—dicto, sōlito,—æquo, crēdibili, necessario, vēro, and iusto,—are used in a peculiar manner in the ablative after comparatives; as, Opiniōne celerius ventūrus esse dicitur,—sooner than is expected. Cæs. Dicto citius tūnt-da æquōra placat, Quicker than the word was spoken. Virg. Injūrias grāvius æquo habēre. Sall.

(a.) These ablatives supply the place of a clause; thus, grāvius æquo is equivalent to grāvius quam quod æquum est. They are often omitted; as, Thē-mistocles libērius vivēbat, scil. æquo. Nep. In such cases, the comparative may be translated by the positive degree, with too, quile, or rather, as in the above example—'He lived too freely,' or 'rather freely.' Voluptas quum māior est atque longior, omne animi lāmen exstinguit,—when it is too great, and of too long continuance. Cic. So tristior, scil. sōlito, rather sad.

(b.) The English word 'still,' joined with comparatives, is expressed by etiam or vel, and only in later prose writers by adhuc; as, Ut in corpōribus mag-na dissimilitūdines sunt, sic in animis existunt māiores etiam vāritates. Cic.

REM. 10. (a.) With infērior, the dative is sometimes used, instead of the ablative; as, Vir nullā arte cuiquam infērior. Sall. The ablative is also found; as, Ut hūmānos cāsus virtūte infēriores pātes. Cic. But usually infērior is followed by quam; as, Tīmōtheus bellī laude non infērior fuit, quam pāter. Cic. Gratiā non infērior, quam qui umquam fuerunt amplissimi. Id.

(b.) Quālis, 'such as,' with a comparative, occurs poetically instead of the relative pronoun in the ablative; as, Nardo pērunctum, quāle non perfectius meos laborārint mānus; instead of quo. Hor. Epod. 5, 59. Animas quāles nēque candidiores terra tulit; for quibus. Id. Sat. 1, 5, 41.

REM. 11. Quam pro is used after comparatives, to express disproportion; as, Prælium atrocius quam pro nūmēro pugnantium, The battle was more severe than was proportionate to the number of the combatants. Liv. Minor, quam pro tūmultu, cades. Tac.

REM. 12. When two adjectives or adverbs are compared with each other, both are put in the comparative; as, Triumphus clārior quam grātor, A triumph more famous than acceptable. Liv. Fortius quam fālicius bellum gessē-runt. So, also, when the comparative is formed by means of māgis; as, Māgis audacter quam pārate ad dicendum veniēbat. Cic.—Tacitus uses the positive in one part of the proposition; as, Spēciem excelas glōrias vēhēmentius quam caute appetēbat; or even in both; as, Clāris mājoribus quam vētustis.

REM. 13. (a.) Pōtius and māgis are sometimes joined pleonastically with mallo and præstāre, and also with comparatives; as, Ab omnibus se dēsertos pōtius quam abs te dēfensas esse mālunt. Cic. Qui māgis vēre vincēre quam diu impērāre mālūt. Liv. Ut emōri pōtius quam servire præstāret. Cic. Mihi quavis fūga pōtius quam ulla provinciā esset optātor. Id. Quis māgis queat esse beā-tior? Virg.

(b.) So, also, the prepositions præ, ante, præter, and supra, are sometimes used with a comparative; as, Unus præ cētēris fortior exsurgit, Apul. Scēltere ante alios immānior omnes. Virg. They also occur with a superlative; as, Ante alios carissimus. Nep. As these prepositions, when joined with the positive, denote comparison, they seem in such examples to be redundant. See § 127.

REM. 14. Alius is sometimes in poetry treated as a comparative, and construed with the ablative instead of atque with the nominative or accusative; as, Nève pūtes dñum sãpiente bñnõque beatum. Hor. Alius Lysippo. Id. But compare § 251, N.

REM. 15. By the poets ac and atque are sometimes used instead of quam after comparatives; as, Quanto constantior idem in vitiis, tanto levius miser ac prior ille, qui, etc. Hor. Arctius atque hædrã præcæra adstringitur ilex. Id.

REM. 16. The degree of difference between objects compared is expressed by the ablative:—

(1.) Of substantives; as, Minor uno mense, Younger by one month. Hor. Sesquipède quam tu longior, Taller than you by a foot and a half. Plaut. Hibernia dimidio minor quam Britannia. Cæs. Dimidio minoris constabit, It will cost less by half. Cic. Quam molestum est uno digito plus habere to have one finger more, i. e. than we have, to have six fingers. Id.—but the expression is ambiguous, as it might mean ‘to have more than one finger.’ Sûperat capite et cervicibus altis. Virg.

(2.) Of neuter adjectives of quantity and neuter pronouns, in the singular number. Such are tanto, quanto, quo, eo, hoc, multo, parvo, paulo, nimio, aliquanto, tantulo, altèro tanto (twice as much); as, Multo doctior es patre, Thou art (by) much more learned than thy father. The relative and demonstrative words, quanto—tanto, quo—eo, or quo—hoc, signifying ‘by how much—by so much,’ are often to be translated by an emphatic the; as, Quanto sumus supèriores, tanto nos submissius geramus, The more eminent we are, the more humbly let us conduct ourselves: lit. by how much—by so much—. Cic. Eo gravior est dolor, quo culpa est major. Id. But the relative word generally precedes the demonstrative; as, Quo diffictlius, hoc præclarius. Id. Poetically, also, quam magis—tam magis are used instead of quanto magis—tanto magis. Virg. Æn. 7, 787: and quam magis—tanto magis. Lucr. 6, 459.—Iter multo facilius,—much easier. Cæs. Parvo brevius, A little shorter. Plin. Eo magis, The more. Cic. Eo minus. Id. Istoc magis vîpâlîbis, So much the more. Plaut. Via altèro tanto longior,—as long again. Nep. Multo id maximum fuit. Liv.

(3.) The ablative of degree is joined not only with comparatives but with verbs which contain the idea of comparison; as, malò, præsto, supèro, excello, antècello, antecèdo, and others compounded with ante; and also with ante and post, in the sense of ‘earlier’ and ‘later’; as, Multo præstat. Salk? Post paulo, A little after. Id. Multo ante lûcis adventum, Long before—. Id. Multis partibus is equivalent to multo; as, Número multis partibus esset infèrior. Cæs.

NOTE. The accusatives multum, tantum, quantum, and aliquantum, are sometimes used instead of the corresponding ablatives; as, Aliquantum est ad rem dividiôr. Ter. Multum improbiôres sunt. Plaut. Quantum domo infèrior, tantum glórii supèrior evâsil. Val. Max. Cf. § 232, (3.).—So longe, ‘far,’ is frequently used for multo; as, Longe meliôr. Virg. Longe et multum antècellère. Cic. So, pars pèdis sesqui major,—longer by one half. Id.

ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE.

§ 257. A noun and a participle are put in the ablative, called absolute, to denote the time, cause, means, or concomitant of an action, or the condition on which it depends; as,

Pýthãgoras, in Itáliam veniit, Pythagoras came into Italy, in the reign of Tarquin. Cic. Lûpus, stimûlante fãmè, captat ovile, Hunger inciting, the wolf seeks the fold. Ovid. Multes, pècøre e longinquioribus vicis ãdacto, extrémam fãmè sustentabant. Cæs. Hac orãtione hàbitã, concilium dimisit. Id. Gallî, re cognitã, obstidiõnem rêlinquunt. Id. Virtûte excep'ã, nihil amicitia præstabilis putèss. Cic.

NOTE 1. The Latin ablative absolute may be expressed in English by a similar construction, but it is commonly better to translate it by a clause connected by when, since, while, although, after, as, etc., or by a verbal substantive; as, Te adjuvante, With thy assistance. Non—nisi te adjuvante, Only with thy assistance, or not without thy assistance. Te non adjuvante, Without thy assistance. Cf. § 274, R. 5, (c.)

REMARK 1. This construction is an abridged form of expression, equivalent to a dependent clause connected by quum, si, etsi, quamquam, quamvis, etc.

Thus, for Tarquīnio regnante, the expression dum Targuīnius regnābat might be used; for hac oratione habita;—quum hanc orationem habuisset, or quum hac oratio habita esset,—concilium dimisit. The ablative absolute may always be resolved into a proposition, by making the noun or pronoun the subject, and the participle the predicate.

REM. 2. This construction is common only with present and perfect participles. Instances of its use with participles in rus and dus are comparatively rare; as, Cæsare venturo, Phosphore, redde diem. Mart. Irrupturis tam infestis nationibus. Liv. Quum concio plausum, meo nomine recitando, dedisset,—when my name was pronounced. Cic. Quum immolandā Iphigēniā tristis Calchas esset. Id. Quis est enim, qui, nullis officii præceptis tradendis, philoſophum se audeat dicere—without propounding any rules of duty. Cic. Cf. § 274, R. 5, (c.) and R. 9.

REM. 3. (a.) A noun is put in the ablative absolute, only when it denotes a different person or thing from any in the leading clause. Cf. § 274, 3, (a.)

(b.) Yet a few examples occur of a deviation from this principle, especially with a substantive pronoun referring to some word in the leading clause; as, Se audiente, scribit Thucydides. Cic. Légio ex castris Varronis, adstante et inspectante ipso, signa sustulit. Cæs. Me duce, ad hunc voti finem, me milite, veni. Ovid. So M. Porcius Cato, vivo quodque Scipione, allatrare ejus magnitudinem solitus erat. Liv.

NOTE 2. Two participles must not be put together in the ablative absolute agreeing with the same noun. Thus, we may say Porcia sæpe maritum cogitantem invenerat, but not, Porcia marito cogitante invento.

NOTE 3. Instead of the ablative absolute denoting a cause, an accusative with ob or propter occurs in Livy and in later writers; as, Cinōpum concidere Spartani, ob sepultum illic rectorem navis Cinōpum. Tac. Decemviri libros Sibyllinos inspicere jussi sunt propter terribiles homines novis prodigiis. Liv.

REM. 4. The ablative absolute serves to mark the time of an action, by reference to that of another action. If the present participle is used, the time of the action expressed by the participle, is the same as that of the principal verb. The perfect participle and the future in rus, denote respectively an action as prior or subsequent to that expressed by the principal verb.

Thus in the preceding examples—Pythagoras, Tarquīnio regnante, in Italiā venit, Pythagoras came into Italy during the reign of Tarquinius. Galli, re cognita, obsidionem relinquunt, The Gauls, having learned the fact, abandon the siege. So, Rez apum non nisi migraturo examine foras præcedit, The king-bee does not go abroad, except when a swarm is about to emigrate. Plin.

NOTE 4. Non prius quam, non nisi, ut, cū, et tamquam, are sometimes joined with the participle; as, Tiberius excessum Augusti non prius palam scit, quam Agrippa jūctis inbrempto, —not until. Suet. Galli lati, ut explorata victricia, ad castra Romanorum pergunt. Cæs. Antiochus, tamquam non transiitūris in Asiam Romanis, etc. Liv.

REM. 5. (a.) The construction of the ablative absolute with the perfect passive participle, arises frequently from the want of a participle of that tense in the active voice.

Thus, for Cæsar, having sent forward the cavalry, was following with all his forces,' we find, 'Cæsar, equitatu præmisso, subsequēbatur omnibus copiis.'

(b.) As the perfect participle in Latin may be used for both the perfect active and the perfect passive participles in English, its meaning can, in many instances, be determined only by the connection, since the agent with a or ab is generally not expressed with this participle in the ablative absolute, as it is with other parts of the passive voice. Thus, Cæsar, his dictis, concilium dimisit, might be rendered, 'Cæsar, having said this, or this having been said (by some other person), dismissed the assembly.'

(c.) As the perfect participles of deponent verbs correspond to perfect active participles in English, no such necessity exists for the use of the ablative absolute with them; as, Cæsar, hæc locutus, concilium dimisit. In the following example, both constructions are united: Idque....agros Remorum depopulati, omnibus victis, adficiūque incensis. Cæs.

REM. 6. The perfect participles of neuter deponent verbs, and some also of active deponents, which admit of both an active and a passive sense, are used in the ablative absolute; as, Orta luce. Cæs. Vel extincto vel elapso animo, nullum residere sensum. Cic. Tam multis gloriā ejus adeptis. Plin. Littas ad exercitum, tamquam adepto principatu, misit. Tac.

REM. 7. (a.) As the verb sum has no present participle, two nouns, or a noun and an adjective, which might be the subject and predicate of a dependent clause, are put in the ablative absolute without a participle; as,

Quid, adölescentulo dūce, efficere possent, What they could do under the guidance of a youth. Cæs. Me suāsore atque impulsore, hoc factum, By my advice and instigation. Plaut. Hannibale vivo, While Hannibal was living. Nep. Inuita Minervā, in opposition to one's genius. Cic. Cælo sereno, when the weather is clear. Virg. Me ignaro, without my knowledge. Cic. With names of office, the concrete noun is commonly used in the ablative absolute, rather than the corresponding abstract with in to denote the time of an event; as, Romam venit Mārio consule, He came to Rome in the consulship of Marius. Cic.

(b.) The nouns so used as predicates are by some grammarians considered as supplying the place of participles by expressing in themselves the action of a verb. Such are dux, comes, adiutor and adjutrix, auctor, testis, jūdex, interpres, magister and magistra, præceptor and præceptrix; as, dūce naturā, in the sense of dūcente naturā, under the guidance of nature; jūdice Polybio, according to the judgment of Polybius.

REM. 8. A clause sometimes supplies the place of the noun; as, Nondum comperto quam in regiōnem venisset rex. Liv. Audito venisse nūcium. Tac. Vale dicto. Ovid. This construction, however, is confined to a few participles; as, audito, cognito, comperto, explorato, desperato, nunciato, dicto, edicto. But the place of such participle is sometimes supplied by a neuter adjective in the ablative; as, Incerto præ tenebris quid paterent. Liv. Cf. R. 7, (a.) Haud cuiquam dubio quin hostium essent. Id. Juxta periculoso vērā an ficta prouēret. Tac.

REM. 9. (1.) The noun in the ablative, like the subject nominative, is sometimes wanting; (a) when it is contained in a preceding clause; as, Atticus Serrihan, Bruti matrem, non minus post mortem ejus, quam flore, coluit, scil. eo,

i. e. Brūto. Nep. (b) When it is the general word for person or persons followed by a descriptive relative clause; as, Hannibal Ibērum cōpias trājecit, præmissis, qui Alpium transitus specularentur. Liv. (c) When the participle in the neuter singular corresponds to the impersonal construction of neuter verbs in the passive voice; as, In amnis transgressu, multum certato, Bardeśanes viciit. Tac. Mihi, errato, nulla vēnia, recte facto, exigua laus prōpōnitur. Cic. Quum, nondum pōlam facto, vivi mortuūque prōmiscue complōrarentur. Liv. Nam jam citate eā sum, ut non siet, peccāto, mi ignosci aequum; i. e. si peccātum fuerit. Ter. Cf. § 274, R. 5, (b.)

(2.) So in descriptions of the weather; as, Tranquillo, scil. māri, the sea being tranquill. Liv. Serēno, scil. caelo, the sky being clear. Id. Arānci serēno texunt, nūbilo texunt,—in clear and in cloudy weather. Plin. Substantives when used thus are to be considered as ablatives of time; as, Cōmittis, ludis, Circensibus. Suetonius has used proscriptions in the sense of 'during the proscription.' So pāce et Principe. Tac. Impērio pōpuli Rōmāni. Cæs.

REM. 10. This ablative is sometimes connected to the preceding clause by a conjunction; as, Cæsar, quamquam obsidiōne Massilia retardante, brevī tamen omnia subēgit. Suet. Decemviri non ante, quam perlātis lēgibus, depōsitūros impērium esse aiēbant. Liv.

REM. 11. A predicate ablative is sometimes added to passive participles of naming, choosing, etc. § 210, (3.); as, Hasdrūbale impērātore successo. Liv.

CONNECTION OF TENSES.

§ 258. Tenses, in regard to their connection, are divided into two classes—principal and historical.

A. The principal tenses are, the present, the perfect definite, and the two futures.

B. The historical, which are likewise called the preterite tenses (§ 145, N. 2.), are the imperfect, the historical perfect, and the pluperfect.

I. In the connection of leading and dependent clauses, only tenses of the same class can, in general, be united with each other. Hence:—

1. A principal tense is followed by the present and perfect definite, and by the periphrastic form with sim. And:—

2. A preterite tense is followed by the imperfect and pluperfect, and by the periphrastic form with essem.

NOTE. The periphrastic forms in each class supply the want of subjunctive futures in the regular conjugation.

The following examples will illustrate the preceding rules:—

(a.) In the first class. Scio quid āgas. Scio quid ēgeris. Scio quid actūrus sis.—Audivi quid āgas, I have heard what you are doing. Audivi quid ēgeris. Audivi quid actūrus sis.—Audiam quid āgas, etc.—Audivēro quid āgas, etc.

(b.) In the second class. Sciēbūm quid āgerēs. Sciēbam quid ēgisses. Sciēbam quid actūrus esses.—Audivi quid āgerēs, I heard what you were doing. Audivi quid ēgisses. Audivi quid actūrus esses.—Audivēram quid āgerēs, etc.

The following may serve as additional examples in the first class; viz. of principal tenses depending on,

(1.) The PRESENT; as, Non sum ita hēbes, ut istuc dicam. Cic. Quantum dōlōrem accēperim, tu existimāre pōtes. Id. Nec dubito quin rēditus ejus reipūblīcæ salūtāris futūrus sit. Id.

(2.) The PERFECT DEFINITE; as, Sitis prōvisum est, ut ne quid agere possint. Id. Quis masticis, quis hunc studiū lītērārū se dēdidit, quin omnem illārū artium vim cōprehēderit. Id. Dēfectiōnes solis prādictæ sunt, quæ, quantæ, quando futūræ sint. Id.

(3.) The FUTURES; as, Sic facillime, quantæ orātrū sit, semperque fuērit paucitas, iudicābit. Id. Ad quos dies rēditūrus sim, scribam ad te. Id. Si scēris aspīdem lītēre uspiam, et velle aliquem imprudentem super eam assidēre, cūjus mors tibi emolūmentum factūra sit, imprōbe fecēris, nisi monueris, ne assideat. Id.

The following, also, are additional examples in the second class, viz. of preterite tenses depending on,

(1.) The IMPERFECT; as, Unum illud extimescēbam, ne quid turpiter facerem, vel jam effēcissem. Cic. Non enim dubitābam, quin eas libenter lectūrus esses. Id.

(2.) The HISTORICAL PERFECT; as, Vēni in ejus villam ut libros inde prēmērem. Id. Hoc quum essent nuntiāta, Vālerius classem extemplo ad ostium flūminis duxit. Liv.

(3.) The PLUPERFECT; as, Pavor cōpērat milites, ne mortiferum esset vulnus. Liv. Ego ex ipso audieram, quam a te liberaliter esset tractatus. Cic. Non satis mihi constitērat, cum aliquāns animi mei molestiā, an pōtius libenter te Athēnis visūrus essem. Id.

REMARK 1. (a.) When the present is used in narration for the historical perfect, it may, like the latter, be followed by the imperfect; as, Lēgatos mittunt, ut pacem impetrarent. Cæs.

(b.) The present is also sometimes followed by the perfect subjunctive in its historical sense; as, Pandite nunc Hēlicōna, deæ, cantusque mōvēte, Qui bello excolti rēges, quas quemque sēcūtas Complērint campos acies. Virg.

REM. 2. The perfect definite is often followed by the imperfect, even when a present action or state is spoken of, if it is possible to conceive of it in its progress, and not merely in its conclusion or result; and especially when the agent had an intention accompanying him from the beginning to the end of the action; as, Feci hoc, ut intelligeres, I have done this that you might understand; i. e. such was my intention from the beginning. Sunt philosophi et fuerunt, qui omnino nullam habere censērent hāmānārū rerū procurātiōnem deos. Cic.

REM. 3. (a.) The historical perfect is not regularly followed by the perfect subjunctive, as the latter is not, in general, used in reference to past action indefinite.

(b.) These tenses are, however, sometimes used in connection, in the narrative of a past event, especially in Livy and Cornelius Nepos; as, Factum est, ut plus quam collēgæ Mitidēs valuerit. Nep.

(c.) The imperfect and perfect are even found together after the historical perfect, when one action is represented as permanent or repeated, and the other simply as a fact; as, Ad eo nihil misēriti sunt, ut incursiōnes facerent et Vēios in animo habuērunt oppugnare. Liv.

(d.) The historical perfect may even be followed by the present, when a general truth is to be expressed, and not merely one which is valid for the time indicated by the leading verb; as, Antiōcho pacem pēnti ad priōres condiōnes nihil additum, Africāno prādicante, nēque Rōmānis, si vincantur, animos minui, nēque, si vincant, sēcundis rēbus insōlescere. Just.

REM. 4. (a.) As present infinitives and present participles depend for their time upon the verbs with which they are connected, they are followed by such tenses as those verbs may require; as, Apelles pictōres quōque eos peccare dicebat, qui non sentirent, quid esset sitis. Cic. Ad te scripsi, te lītter accusans in eo, quod de me cito crēdidisses. Id.

(b.) In like manner the tense of the subjunctive following the infinitive future is determined by the verb on which such infinitive depends; as, Sol Phaethonti filio factūrum se esse dixit quicquid optasset. Cic.

REM. 5. (a.) The perfect infinitive follows the general rule, and takes after it a principal or a preterite tense, according as it is used in the definite or in the historical sense; as, Arbitrāmur nos ea præsūtisse, quæ ratio et doctrina præscripserit. Cic. Est quod gaudeas te in ista loca vēniasse, ubi aliquid sperare viderē. Id.

(b.) But it may sometimes take a different tense, according to Rem. 2; as, Ita mihi videor et esse Deos, et quales essent satis ostendisse. Cic.

II. Tenses belonging to different classes may be made dependent on each other, when the sense requires it.

(a.) Hence a present or perfect definite may follow a preterite, when the result of a past action extends to the present time; as, Ardebat autem Hortensius cupiditate dicendi sic, ut in nullo unquam flagrantius studium viderim; i. e. that up to this time I have never seen. Cic. And, on the other hand, a preterite may follow a present to express a continuing action in the past; as, Scitote oppidum esse in Sicilia nullum, quo in oppido non isti delecta mælier ad libidinem esset: (as yet here alludes to the whole period of Verres' prætorship.) Cic.

(b.) But without violating the rule which requires similar tenses to depend upon each other, the hypothetical imperfect subjunctive, may be followed by the present or perfect subjunctive, since the imperfect subjunctive refers to the present time; as, Memorare possem quibus in locis maximas hostium copias populus Rōmānus parca manu fuderit. Sall. Possem here differs from possum only by the hypothetical form of the expression.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

§ 259. The indicative is used in every proposition in which the thing asserted is represented as a reality.

NOTE. Hence it is used even in the expression of conditions and suppositions with si, nisi, etsi, and etiamsi, when the writer, without intimating his own opinion, supposes a thing as actual, or, with nisi, makes an exception, which, only for the sake of the inference, he regards as actual; as, Mors aut plāne negligenda est, si omnino exstinguit animum, aut etiam optanda, si aliquo eum dedūcit, ubi sit futurus æternus. Cic. Adhuc certe, nisi ego insanio, stulte omnia et incaute sunt. Id.—It is likewise used in interrogations.

REMARK 1. The several tenses have already been defined, and their usual significations have been given in the paradigms. They are, however, sometimes otherwise rendered, one tense being apparently used with the meaning of another, either in the same or in a different mood. Thus,

(1.) (a.) The present is often used for the historical perfect in narration, see § 145, I. 3.—(b.) It is sometimes used also for the future to denote the certainty of an event, or to indicate passionate emotion. So, also, when the leading sentence contains the present imperative, si is often joined with the present instead of the future; as, defende si pōtes.—(c.) The present is also used for the imperfect or perfect, when it is joined with dum 'while'; as, Dum ego in Sicilia sum, nulla stitua defecta est. Cic. It is even so used by Livy in transitions from one event to another; as, Dum in Asia bellum geritur, ne in Ætolis quidem quiesce res fuerant. But the preterites are sometimes used with dum 'while'; and dum 'as long as' is regularly joined with the imperfect.

(2.) (a.) The perfect, in its proper signification, i. e. as a perfect definite, denotes an act or state terminated at the present time. Thus Horace, at the close of a work, says, Exegi monumentum ære perennius; and Ovid, in like circumstances, Jamque opus exegi. So, also, Panthus in Virgil, in order to denote the utter ruin of Troy, exclaims, Fulmus Trões, fuit Ilium, i. e. we are no longer Trojans, Ilium is no more.—(b.) The perfect indefinite or historical perfect is used in relating past events, when no reference is to be made to the time of other events; as, Cæsar Rubicōnem transiit, Cæsar crossed the Rubicon. (c.) As in the epistolary style the imperfect is used instead of the present, when an incomplete action is spoken of (§ 145, II. 3), so the historical perfect is in like circumstances employed instead of the present, when speaking of a completed action. With both the imperfect and perfect, when so used, however, the adverbs nunc and etiamnunc may be used instead of tunc and etiamtum.

(d.) The historical perfect is sometimes used for the pluperfect in narration; as, Sed postquam aspexi, illico cognōvi, But after I (had) looked at it, I recognized it immediately. Ter.—This is the usual construction after postquam or postedquam, ubi, ubi primum, ut, ut primum, quum primum, simul, simul ut, simul ac, or simul atque, all of which have the signification of 'as soon as,' and sometimes after præquam. But when several conditions are to be expressed in past time, the pluperfect is retained after these particles; as, Idem simulac se remisserat, nèque causa suberat, quare animi laborem perferret, luxuriōsus repëriebatur. Nep. (So, also, postquam is joined with the pluperfect, when a definite time intervenes between events, so that there is no connection between them); as, Hannibal anno tertio, postquam dōmo profugerat, cum quinque nāvibus Africam accessit. Id.—In a very few passages the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive are joined with postquam.

(8.) The pluperfect sometimes occurs, where in English we use the historical perfect; as, Dixerat, et spissis noctis se condidit umbris, She (had) said, and hid herself in the thick shades of night. Virg. Sometimes, also, it is used for the historical perfect to express the rapidity with which events succeed each other; so, also, for the imperfect, to denote what had been and still was.

(4.) The future indicative is sometimes used for the imperative; as, Valèbis, Farewell. Cic. And:—

(6.) The future perfect for the future; as, Alio loco de fratrum animo et injuriis vidëro, I shall see (have seen).... Cic. This use seems to result from viewing a future action as if already done, and intimates the rapidity with which it will be completed.

REM. 2. When a future action is spoken of either in the future, or in the imperative, or the subjunctive used imperatively, and another future action is connected with it, the latter is expressed by the future tense, if the actions relate to the same time; as, Naturam si sequemur ducem, numquam aberrabimus. Cic.; but by the future perfect, if the one must be completed before the other is performed; as, De Carthagine verëri non ante desinam, quam illam excisam esse cognovëro. Cic. In English the present is often used instead of the future perfect; as, Faciā si potëro, I will do it, if I can. Ut sementem facëris, ita metes, As you sow, so you will reap. Cic.

REM. 3. In expressions denoting the propriety, practicability or advantage of an action not performed, the indicative of the preterites (§ 145, N. 2.) is used, where the English idiom would have led us to expect the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive.

(a.) This construction occurs with the verbs oportet, necesse est, dëbeo, convenit, possum, dëcet, licet, reor, pütö; and with par, fas, cöpia, aquum, justum, consentaneum, satis, sätius, aquius, mélius, utilius, optäbilis, and optimum—est, erat, etc.

(b.) In this connection the imperfect indicative expresses things which are not, but the time for which is not yet past; the historical perfect and the pluperfect indicative, things which have not been, but the time for which is past; as, Ad mortem te duci jam pridem oportëbat, i. e. thy execution was necessary and is still so; hence it ought to take place. Cic.—Longe ätlius fuit angustias dätis occüppare, It would have been much better to occupy the pass. Curt. Attüna eräpü e senätu triumphans gaudio, quem omnino vivum illinc eätre non oportuërat. Cic.

(c.) In both the periphrastic conjugations, also, the preterites of the indicative have frequently the meaning of the subjunctive; as, Tam bona constanter præda tēnenda fuit,—ought to have been kept. Ovid. This is more common in hypothetical sentences than in such as are independent.

(d.) The indicative in such connections is retained, even when a hypothetical clause with the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive is added, and it is here in particular that the indicative preterites of the periphrastic conjugations are employed; as, Quas si dubia aut præcui essent, tamen omnes bonos reipublicæ consilii decēbat. Sall. Quodsi Cn. Pompeius privatus esset hoc tempore, tamen erat mittendus. Cic.—Dilecti totus exercitus potuit, si fugientes persequi victores essent. Liv. Quas nisi monuissent, tormentis etiam dedendi fuerant. Cic. Si te non invenissem, periturus per præcipitia fui. Petr. But the subjunctive also is admissible in such cases in the periphrastic conjugations.

REM. 4. (1.) The preterites of the indicative are often used for the pluperfect subjunctive, in the conclusion of a conditional clause, in order to render a description more animated. They are so used,

(a.) When the inference has already partly come to pass, and would have been completely realized, if something else had or had not occurred, whence the adverb jam is frequently added; as, Jam fames quam pestilentia tristior erat; ni annonæ foret subventum,—would have been worse. Liv. The same is expressed by the verb cæpi instead of jam; as, Britanni circumire terga vincen-tium cœperant, ni, etc. Tac. And without jam; Effigies Pisonis traxerant in Gemonias ac divellēbant (would have entirely destroyed them) ni, etc. Id.

(b.) The perfect and pluperfect are likewise used in this sense, and a thing which was never accomplished is thus, in a lively manner, described as completed; as, Et peractum erat bellum sine sanguine, si Pompeium opprimere Brundisii (Cæsar) potuisset. Hor.—The imperfect indicative is rarely used, also, for the imperfect subjunctive, when this tense is found in the hypothetical clause; as, Stultum erat monere, nisi fieret. Quint.—Sometimes, also, the preterites of the indicative are thus used in the condition; as, At fuerat melius, si te puer iste tēnēbat. Ovid. See § 261, R. 1.

(2.) 'I ought' or 'I should,' is expressed by the indicative of dēben, and possum is in like manner often used for possem; as, Possum persequi multa oblectamenta rerum rusticarum, sed, etc., I might speak of the many pleasures of husbandry, but, etc.; and it is usual in like manner to say, difficile est, longum est, infinitum est, e. g. narrare, etc., for, 'it would be difficult,' 'it would lead too far,' 'there would be no end,' etc.

(3.) The indicative is used in like manner after many general and relative expressions, especially after the pronouns and relative adverbs which are either doubled or have the suffix cumque; as, quisquis, quoquoque, quicumque, utut, utcumque, etc., see §§ 139, 5, (3.) and 191, I. R. 1, (b.); as, Quidquid id est, timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. Virg. Quem sors cumque dabit, huc appone. Hor. Sed quoquo modo sese illud habet. But however that may be. Cic.—In like manner sentences connected by sive—sive commonly have the verb in the indicative, unless there is a special reason for using the subjunctive; as, Sive verum est, sive falsum, mihi quidem ita renunciatum est. Later writers however use the subjunctive both with general relatives, etc., and with sive—sive.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

§ 260. The subjunctive mood is used to express an action or state simply as conceived by the mind.

NOTE. The subjunctive character of a proposition depends, not upon its substance, but upon its form. 'I believe,' 'I suppose,' are only conceptions, but my believing and supposing are stated as facts, and, of course, are expressed by means of the indicative. When, on the other hand, I say, 'I should believe, 'I should suppose,' the acts of believing and supposing are represented not as facts, but as mere conceptions. Hence the verb that expresses the purpose or intention for which another act is performed, is put in the subjunctive, since it expresses only a conception; as, Edo ut vivam, I eat that I may live. This mood takes its name from its being commonly used in subjoined or dependent clauses attached to the main clause of a sentence by a subordinate connective. In some cases, however, it is found in independent clauses, or in such, at least, as have no obvious dependence.

I. The subjunctive, in some of its connections, is to be translated by the indicative, particularly in indirect questions, in clauses expressing a result, and after adverbs of time; as, Rogas me quid tristis sim,—why I am sad. Tac. Stellârum tanta est multitudo, ut numerâri non possint,—that they cannot be counted. Quum Cæsar esset in Galliâ, When Cæsar was in Gaul. Cæs.

II. The subjunctive is used to express what is contingent or hypothetical, including possibility, power, liberty, will, duty, and desire.

REMARK 1. The tenses of the subjunctive, thus used, have the significations which have been given in the paradigms, and are, in general, not limited, in regard to time, like the corresponding tenses of the indicative. Thus,

(1.) The present may refer either to present or future time; as, Misâscribis et quis ignoscas vitis teneor, I am subject to moderate faults, and such as you may excuse. Hor. Orat a Cæsare ut det sibi veniam, He begs of Cæsar that he would give him leave. Cæs.

(2.) The imperfect may relate either to past, present, or future time; as, Si fata fuissent ut caderem, If it had been my fate that I should fall. Virg. Si possem, sânior essem, I would be wiser, if I could. Ovid. Ceteros rapere et prosternere, The rest I would seize and prostrate. Ter.

(3.) The perfect subjunctive has always a reference to present time, and is equivalent to the indicative present or perfect definite; as, Errârim fortasse, Perhaps I may have erred. Plin.—When it has a future signification it is not to be accounted a perfect, but the subjunctive of the future perfect. See Rem. 4 and 7, (1.) But compare § 258, R. 1, (b.) and R. 8, (b.)

(4.) The pluperfect subjunctive relates to past time, expressing a contingency, which is usually future with respect to some past time mentioned in connection with it; as, Id responderunt se facturos esse, quum ille vento Aquilone vèpisset Lemnum,.... when he should have come.... Nep.

REM. 2. The imperfects vellem, nollem, and mallet, in the first person, express a wish, the non-reality and impossibility of which are known; as, vellem, I should have wished.—In the second person, where it implies an indefinite person, and also in the third when the subject is an indefinite person, the imperfect subjunctive is used in the sense of the pluperfect, and the condition is to be supplied by the mind. This is the case especially with the verbs, dico, puto, arbitror, credo; also with video, cerno, and discerno; as, Mastique (crêdêres victos) rèdeunt in castra,—one might have thought that they were defeated. Liv. Pecunia an fama minus parceret, haud facile discerneres. Sall. Qui videret equum Trôjanum introductum, urbem captam diceret. Cic. Quis umquam crêderet? Id. Quis putâret? Id.—The imperfect subjunctive is frequently used, also, for the pluperfect in interrogative expressions; as, Socrâtes quum rogâretur cajâtem se esse diceret, Mundanum, inquit. Id. Quod si quis deus diceret, nunquam putârem me in Academiâ tamquam philosophum disputâturum, If any god had said....I never should have supposed. Cic.

REM. 3. The subjunctive in all its tenses may denote a supposition or concession; as, Vendat aedes vir bonus, Suppose an honest man is selling a house. Cic. Dixêrit Epicurus, Grant that Epicurus could have said. Id. Vêrum anceps pugna fuêrat fortuna.—Fuisse, Grant that it might have been. Virg. Mâlus civis On. Curbo fuit. Fuêrit aliis, He may have been to others. Cic.—This concessive subjunctive is equivalent to esto ut.

REM. 4. The present and perfect subjunctive are used in independent propositions to soften an assertion. When so used, they do not differ essentially from the present and future indicative; as, Forſitan quæſerâs, You may perhaps ask. Velim ſic exiſtiſtes, I would wiſh you to think ſo. Nemo iſtud tibi concedat, or conſeſſerit, No one will grant you that. Hoc ſine ullâ dubitâtiõe confirmâverim, eloquentiam rem eſſe omnium difficillimam, This I will unheſitatingly affirm. Cic. Nil ego contulêrim jucundo ſânus amico. Hor. The form which is called the perfect ſubjunctive, when thus uſed for the future, ſeems to be rather the ſubjunctive of the future perfect: ſee Rem. 7, (1.) Volo and its compounds are often ſo uſed in the preſent; as, Velim obvias mihi literas crêbro mittas, I wiſh that you would frequently ſend, etc. Cic. The perfect ſubjunctive is alſo rarely uſed in the ſenſe of a ſoftened perfect indicative; as, Forſitan temêre fecêrim, I may have acted inconſiderately.

REM. 5. The ſubjunctive is uſed in all its tenses, in independent ſentences, to expreſs a doubtful queſtion implying a negative answer; as, Quo eam? Whither ſhall I go? Quo irem? Whither ſhould I go? Quo ivêrim? Whither was I to have gone? Quo iſſeſſem? Whither ſhould I have gone? The answer implied in all theſe caſes is, 'nowhere.' So, Quis dubitet quin in virtute divitiis ſint? Who can doubt that riches conſiſt in virtue? Cic. Quisquam nâmen Jânônis adôret præſtêra? Virg. Quidni, inquit, mêmînêrim? Cic. Quis vellet tanti nuntius eſſe mât? Ovid.

REM. 6. The preſent ſubjunctive is often uſed to expreſs a wiſh, an exhortation, aſſeveration, request, command, or permiſſion; as, Môriar, ſi, etc. May I die, if, etc. Cic. Pêream, ſi non, etc. May I periſh, if, etc. Ovid. So, Ne ſim ſalvus. Cic. In mêtia arma ruâmus, Let us ruſh.... Virg. Ne me attingas, ſcêleſte! Do not touch me, villain! Ter. Fâciat quod libet, Let him do what he pleaſes. Id. The perfect is often ſo uſed; as, Ipſe vidêrit, Let him ſee it to himſelf. Cic. Quam id recte fâciam, vidêrint ſâpientes. Id. Mêmînêrimus, etiâ adversus infimos juſtitiam eſſe ſervandam. Id. Nihil incommôdo cultûdinis tuæ fêderis. Id. Emas, non quod opus eſt, ſed quod necesse eſt. Sen. Dônis impii ne placêre audeant deos; Plâtônem audiant. Cic. Nâturam expellas furca, tîmen uſque rêcurrêt. Hor.

(a.) The examples ſhow that the preſent ſubjunctive, in the firſt perſon ſingular, is uſed in aſſeverations; in the firſt perſon plural, in requests and exhortations; in the ſecond and third perſons of the preſent and ſometimes of the perfect, in commands and permiſſions, thus ſupplying the place of the imperative, eſpecially when the perſon is indefinite.

(b.) With theſe ſubjunctives, as with the imperative, the negative is uſually not non but ne; as, ne dicâs; ne dicat; ne dixêris. So, alſo, ne futûrit, for licet ne futûrit.

(c.) The ſubjunctive for the imperative occurs moſt frequently in the third perſon. In the ſecond perſon it is uſed principally with ne; as, ne dicâs. In the latter caſe the perfect very frequently takes the place of the preſent; as, ne dixêris. The ſubjunctive is alſo uſed in the ſecond perſon, inſtead of the imperative, when the perſon is indefinite.

(d.) In precepts relating to paſt time, the imperfect and pluperfect, alſo, are uſed for the imperative; as, Forſitan non nêmo vir fortis dixêrit, reſtituiſſes, mortem pugnans oppetuiſſes,—you ſhould have reſiſted. Cic.

REM. 7. In the regular paradigms of the verb, no future ſubjunctive was exhibited either in the active or paſſive voice.

(1.) When the expreſſion of futurity is contained in another part of the ſentence, the future of the ſubjunctive is ſupplied by the other tenses of that mood, viz. the future ſubjunctive by the preſent and imperfect, and the future perfect by the perfect and pluperfect. Which of theſe four tenses is to be uſed depends on the leading verb and on the completeness or incompleteness of the action to be expreſſed. The perfect ſubjunctive appears to be alſo the ſubjunctive of the future perfect, and might not improperly be ſo called; as,

Tantum moneo, hoc tempus si amisseris, te esse nullum unquam magis idoneum re-perturum, I only warn you, that, if you should lose this opportunity, you will never find one more convenient. Cic.

(2.) If no other future is contained in the sentence, the place of the future subjunctive active is supplied by the participle in rus, with sim and essem; as, Non dubitat quin brevi Troja sit peritura, He does not doubt that Troy will soon be destroyed. Cic. In hypothetical sentences the form with fuérim takes the place of a pluperfect subjunctive; as, Quis enim dubitat, quin, si Saguntinis impigre tulissetus opem, totum in Hispaniam aversuri bellum fuérimus. Liv. The form in fuissim occurs also, but more rarely; as, Apparuit, quantam excitétura molem véra fuisset clades, quum, etc. See Periphrastic Conjugation, § 162, 14.

(3.) The future subjunctive passive is supplied, not by the participle in us, but by futurum sit or esset, with ut and the present or imperfect of the subjunctive; as, Non dubito quin futurum sit, ut laudetur, I do not doubt that he will be praised.

PROTASIS AND APODOSIS.

§ 261. In a sentence containing a condition and a conclusion, the former is called the protasis, the latter the apodosis.

1. In the protasis of conditional clauses with si and its compounds, the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive imply the non-existence of the action or state supposed, the imperfect, as in English, implying present time. In the apodosis the same tenses of the subjunctive denote what the result would be, or would have been, had the supposition in the protasis been a valid one; as,

Nisi te adis incitatum esse confidërem, scribërem plura, Did I not believe that you have been sufficiently incited, I would write more (Cic.); which implies that he does believe, and therefore will not write. Si Neptunus, quod Thæseo prömiserat, non fecisset, Thæseus filio Hippolyto non esset orbatus. Id.

2. The present and perfect subjunctive in the protasis, imply the real or possible existence of the action or state supposed; as,

Si völit, if he wishes, or, should wish, implying that he either does wish, or at least, may wish. In the apodosis the present or perfect either of the subjunctive or of the indicative may be used.

REMARK 1. The tenses of the indicative may also be used in the protasis of a conditional sentence with si, etc.; as, Si völes, bene est. Cic. Si quis antea miräbatur quid esset, ex hoc tempore mirëtur potius.... Id.—The conjunction si in the protasis is often omitted; as, Libet agros emi. Primum quero quos agros? If you will buy lands, I will first ask, etc. But the protasis may be rendered without if, and either with or without an interrogation, as, You will buy lands, or, Will you buy lands? The future perfect often occurs in the protasis of such sentences; as, Cæsus medicusve levärit agrum ex præcepti, mater dëlira näcabit, (Hor.) Should chance or the physician have saved him, the silly mother will destroy him. Si is in like manner omitted with the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive, in supposing a case which is known not to be a real one; as, Abque te esset, hódie numquam ad solem occäsus vivërem. Plaut.

REM. 2. The present and perfect subjunctive differ but slightly from the indicative, the latter giving to a sentence the form of reality, while the subjunctive represents it as a conception, which, however, may at the same time be a reality. The second person singular of the present and perfect subjunctive often occurs in addressing an indefinite person, where, if the person were definite, the indicative would be used; as, Mémöria minuitur, nisi eam exerceas. Cic. When the imperfect or pluperfect is required to denote a past action, the indicative must be used, if its existence is uncertain, as those tenses in the subjunctive would imply its non-existence. In the oratio obliqua, when the leading verb is a present or a future, the same difference is observed between the tenses of the subjunctive as in hypothetical sentences; but when the leading verb is a preterite the difference between possibility and impossibility is not expressed.

REM. 3. The present and perfect subjunctive are sometimes used, both in the protasis and apodosis of a conditional sentence, in the sense of the imperfect and pluperfect; as, Tu, si hic sis, diliter sentias, If you were here, you would think otherwise. Ter. Quos, si mea cura resisterat, jam flamma tulerint. Virg.

REM. 4. The protasis of a conditional sentence is frequently not expressed, but implied; as, Magno mercentur Atrida, i. e. si possint. Virg.; or is contained in a participial clause; as, Agis, etsi a multitudine victus, gloriâ tamen omnes vicit. Just. So, also, when the participle is in the ablative absolute; as, Dondrem tripodas—divite me acilicet artium, quas aut Parrhasius protulit, aut Scopas. Hor. C. Mucius Porcenam interficere, propositâ sibi morte, comatus est. Cic. It is only in later writers that the concessive conjunctions etsi, quamquam, and quamvis are expressed with the participle, but tamen is often found in the apodosis, even in the classic period, when a participial clause precedes as a protasis.

REM. 5. In hypothetical sentences relating to past time, the actions seem often to be transferred in a measure to the present by using the imperfect, either in the protasis or the apodosis, instead of the pluperfect; as, Quod certe non fecisset, si suum numerum (naviarum) naves haberent. Cic. Cimbri si statim infesto agnigne urbem petissent, grande discrimen esset. Flor. Sometimes the imperfect, although the actions are completed, appears both in the protasis and the apodosis.

REM. 6. Nisi, nisi vero, and nisi forte are joined with the indicative, when they introduce a correction. Nisi then signifies 'except'; as, Nescio; nisi hoc video. Cic. Nisi vero, and nisi forte, 'unless perhaps,' introduce an exception, and imply its improbability; as, Nemo fere saltat sobrius, nisi forte insani. Cic. Nisi forte in the sense of 'unless you suppose,' is commonly used ironically to introduce a case which is in reality inadmissible.

SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER PARTICLES.

A. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES.

§ 262. A clause denoting the purpose, object, or result of a preceding proposition, takes the subjunctive after ut, ne, quo, quin, and quominus; as,

Ea non, ut te instituërem, scripsi, I did not write that in order to instruct you. Cic. Irritant ad pugnandum, quo fiant acriores, They stimulate them to fight, that they may become fiercer. Varr.

REMARK 1. Ut or utrum, signifying 'that,' 'in order that,' or simply 'to' with the infinitive, relates either to a purpose or to a result. In the latter case it often refers to sic, ita, adeo, tam, talis, tantus, is, eiusmodi, etc., in the preceding clause; as,

Id mihi sic erit gratum, ut gratus esse nihil possit, That will be so agreeable to me, that nothing can be more so. Cic. Non sum ita hebes, ut istuc dicam. Id. Næque tam eramus amentes, ut explorata nobis esset victoria. Id. Tantum induluit dolori, ut eum pietas vinceret. Nep. Ita and tam are sometimes omitted; as, Epaminondas fuit etiam disertus, ut nemo Thebanus ei par esset eloquentia, instead of tam disertus. Id. Esse oportet ut vivas, non vivere ut edas. Auct. ad Her. Sol efficit ut omnia floreat. Cic.

REM. 2. Ut, signifying 'even if' or 'although,' expresses a supposition merely as a conception, and accordingly takes the subjunctive; as,

Ut dēsint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas, Though strength be wanting, yet the will is to be praised. Ovid. Ut, in this sense, takes the negative non; as, Esercitus si pōcis nōmen audierit, ut non rēferat pādem (even if it does not withdraw) insistet certe. Cic.

REM. 3. Ut, with the subjunctive denoting a result, is used with impersonal verbs signifying it happens, it remains, it follows, etc.; as,

Qui fit, ut nemo contentus vivat? How does it happen that no one lives contented? Hor. Huic contigit, ut patriam ex servitute in libertatem vindicaret. Nep. Sēquitur igitur, ut etiam vitia sint parca. Cic. Rēliquum est, ut egomet mihi consulam. Nep. Restat igitur, ut motus astrorum sit voluntarius. Cic. Extremum illud est, ut te orem et obsecrem. Id.

NOTE 1. To this principle may be referred the following verbs and phrases signifying 'it happens,' viz. fit, fieri non potest, accidit, incidit, contingit, evenit, seu venit, occurrit and est (it is the case, or it happens, and hence esto, be it that):—and the following, signifying 'it remains,' or 'it follows,' viz. futurum, extremum, prope, proximum, and reliquum—est, relinquitur, sequitur, restat, and superest; and sometimes accedit.

NOTE 2. Contingit with the dative of the person is often joined with the infinitive, instead of the subjunctive with ut; as, Non cuivis homini contingit dāre Corinthum. Hor. And with esse also and other verbs of similar meaning, the predicate (as in the case of licet) is often found in the dative.—Sēquitur and efficitur, 'it follows,' have sometimes the accusative with the infinitive and sometimes the subjunctive; and nascitur, in the same sense, the subjunctive only.

NOTE 3. Mos or mōris est, consuetudo or consuetudinis est, and natura or consuetudo fert, are often followed by ut instead of the infinitive.—Ut also occurs occasionally after many such phrases as nōvum est, rārum, naturāle, necesse, usitatum, mirum, singulare—est, etc., and after aquum, rectum, verum, utile, verisimile, and integrum—est.

For other uses of ut, with the subjunctive, see § 273.

REM. 4. Ut is often omitted before the subjunctive, after verbs denoting willingness and permission; also after verbs of asking, advising, reminding, etc., and the imperatives dic and fac; as,

Quid vis faciam? What do you wish (that) I should do? Ter. Insāni fēriant sine litōra fluctus. Virg. Tenēs dissimulāre rogat. Ovid. Id sinas oro. Id. Se suādere, dixit, Pharnabazo id negotiū daret. Nep. Accedat oportet actio varia. Cic. Fac cōgites. Sall. So, Vide ex navi effērantur, quæ, etc. Plaut.

Verbs of willingness, etc., are volo, malo, permitto, concedo, patior, sino, licet, vōto, etc.; those of asking, etc., are rogo, oro, quæso, mōneo, admōneo, jūbeo, mando, pēto, precor, censeo, suādeo, oportet, necesse est, postulo, hortor, cāro, dēcerno, opto, impēro.

REM. 5. Nē, 'that not,' 'in order that not,' or 'lest,' expresses a purpose negatively; as,

Chirā ne quid ei dēsit. Take care that nothing be wanting to him. Cic. Nemo prudens punit, ut ait Plātō, quia peccatum est, sed ne peccetur. Id. Ut ne is frequently used for ne, especially in solemn discourse, and hence in laws; as, Opēra dētur, ut iudicia ne fiant. Id. Quo ne is used in the same manner in one passage of Horace. Missus ad hoc—quo ne per vacuum Rōmāno incurrēret hostis.—On the other hand ut non is used when a simple result or consequence is to be expressed, in which case ita, sic, tam are either expressed or understood; as, Tum forte agrōtābam, ut ad nuptias tuas venire non possem. In a few cases, however, ut non is used for ne.—Ut non is further used, when the negation refers to a particular word or to a part only of the sentence, as in similar cases si non must be used, and not nisi; as, Confer te ad Manium, ut a me non jectus ad aliēnos, sed invitatus ad tuos isse videāris. Cic.

REM. 6. Nē is often omitted after cave; as,

Cave pātes, Take care not to suppose. Cic. Compare § 267, R. 3.

REM. 7. After mēto, timeo, vēroor, and other expressions denoting fear or caution, nē must be rendered by that or lest, and ut by that not.

NOTE 3. To the verbs mēto, timeo, and vēroor are to be added the substantives expressing fear, apprehension or danger, and the verbs terreo, conterreo, dēterreo, caveo, to be on one's guard, video and obervo in requests (as, vide, vidēte and videndum est), in the sense of 'to consider'; as,

Milo mētuebat, ne a servis indicārētur, Milo feared that he should be betrayed by his servants. Cic. Vēroor, ne, dum minūtre vēlīm lāborem, augeam. Id. Pavor erat, ne castra hostis aggrēdērētur. Liv. Illā duo vēroor, ut tibi possim concedere, I fear that I cannot grant.... Cic. Ovendum est ne assentatōribus pātēfāciāmus aures, ne adulāri nos sināmus. Cic. Vide ne hoc tibi obsit. Terruit gentes, grāce ne rēdīret sēcūlum Pyrrhæ. Multitūdinem dēterrent, ne frāmentum conferant. Cæs. Me mētūm! ne prōna cādas. Ovid.

NOTE 4. Nēve or neve is used as a continuative after ut and ne. It is properly equivalent to aut ne, but is also used for et ne after a preceding ut; as, on the other hand, et ne is used after a negation instead of aut ne; as, Lēgem tālit, ne quis ante actōrum rērum accusārētur, nēve multārētur. Nep. Cæsar milites non longiore oratōne cōhortātus, quam ut sua pristina virtutis mēmōriam rētinērent, ne perturbārentur animō—prælii committendī signum dedit. Cæs. Nēque, also, is sometimes used for et ne after ut and ne; as, Ut ea prætermittam, nēque eos appellem. Cic. Cur non sanctis ne vicinus patricio sit plebeius, nec eadem itinere eat. Liv.—Ne non is sometimes used for ut after verbs of fearing; as, Timeo ne non impetrem, I fear I shall not obtain it.

REM. 8. The proposition on which the subjunctive with ut and nē depends, is sometimes omitted; as, Ut ita dicam. Cic. Ne singulos nominem. Liv.

NOTE 5. Nēdum, like ne, takes the subjunctive; as, Optimis temporibus clārissimi viri vim tribūntiam sustinere non potuerunt: nēdum his temporibus sine iudiciōrum remediis salvi esse possimus,—still less, etc. Cic. Ne is sometimes used in the sense of nēdum; as, Novam eam potestatem (scil. tribūntium plebis) eripere patribus nostris, ne nunc dulcedine semel capti ferant desiderium. Liv.—Nēdum without a verb has the meaning of an adverb, and commonly follows a negative; as, Aigre inermis tanta multitudo, nēdum armata, sustineri potest. Liv. Ne, also, is used in the same manner in Cic. Fam. 9, 26.

REM. 9. Quō, 'that,' 'in order that,' or, 'that by this means,' especially with a comparative; non quō, or non quod, 'not that,' 'not as if'; non quin, 'not as if not'; which are followed in the apodōsis by sed quod, sed quia, or sed alone; and quōminus, 'that not,' after clauses denoting hinderance, take the subjunctive; as, Adjūta me, quo id fiat facilius, Aid me, that that may be done more easily. Ter. Non quo rēpūblīcā sit mihi quicquam cārius, sed desperātis etiam Hippocrātes vult adhibere medicinam. Cic. Non quod sola ornent, sed quod excellant. Id. Nēque rēusāvit, quo minus lēgis pœnam sūbiret. Nep. Ego me dicem in civili bello nēgāvi esse, non quin rectum esset, sed quia, etc. Cic. And instead of non quin we may say non quo non, non quod non, or non quia non; and for non quod, non eo quod, or non ideo quod.

REM. 10. Quin, after negative propositions and questions with quis and quid implying a negative, takes the subjunctive. Quin is used,

1. For a relative with non, after nemo, nullus, nihil...est, repperitur, invenitur, etc.; vix est, agere repperitur, etc.; as, Messānam nemo venit, quin vidērit, i. e. qui non vidērit. No one came to Messana who did not see. Cic. Nego ullam pīcturam fuisse...quin conquisierit, i. e. quam non, etc. Id. Nihil est, quin māle narrando possit deprāvāri. Ter. Quis est, quin cernat, quanta vis sit in sensibus? Cic.

NOTE 6. When quin is used for the relative it is commonly equivalent to the nominative qui, quae, quod, but it is sometimes used in prose instead of the accusative, and sometimes after dies for quo, as the ablative of time; as, Dies fere nullus est, quin hic Satrius dōmum meum ventitet, i. e. quo—non ventitet. Cic.—Qui non is often used for quin; as, Quis enim erat, qui non sciret. Id.; and when quin stands for qui non or quod non, is and id are sometimes added for the sake of emphasis; as, Cleantes negat ullum cibum esse tam gravem, quin is die et nocte concubatur. Cic. Nihil est quod sensum habeat, quin id intreat. Id.—So, also, the place of quin is supplied by ut non; as, Augustus numquam filios suos populo commendavit ut non adiceret (without adding) si mererentur. Suet. And if no negation precedes, or if non belongs to a particular word, and not to the verb, qui non and ut non must of course be used and not quin.

2. For ut non, 'that not,' or 'without' with a participle, especially after fācere non possum, fieri non pōtest, nulla causa est, quid causae est? nihil causae est; as, Fācere non possum quin ad te mittam, i. e. ut non, etc. Cic. Numquam tam māle est Sicilia, quin aliquid fācite et commode dicant. Cic. Numquam accedo, quin abs te abeam doctor,—without going from you wiser. Ter.

NOTE 7. Quin takes the subjunctive also after the negative expressions non dubito, non est dubium, non ambigo, I doubt not; non abest; nihil, paulum, non procul, haud multum abest; non, vix, agere alitineo; tēnere me, or tempērare mihi non possum; non impēdio, non rēcuso, nihil prātermitto, and the like. In these cases, however, the negation in quin is superfluous, and it is generally translated into English by 'that,' 'but that,' or 'to' with an infinitive; as, Non dubito quin dōmi sit, that he is at home. Non multum abest, quin miserimus sim. Not much is wanting to make me most wretched. Cic. Hence, as quin is not in such cases regarded as a negative, non is superadded when a negative sense is required; as, In quibus non dubito quin offensōnem negligentiae vitare atque effugere non possum. Cic. Dubitandum non est quin numquam possit utilitas cum honestate contendere. Id.

NOTE 8. In Nepos, non dubito, in the sense of 'I do not doubt,' is always followed by the infinitive with the accusative, and the same construction often occurs in later writers but not in Cicero: in the sense of to scruple or hesitate, when the verb following has the same subject, dubito and non dubito are generally followed by the infinitive; as, Cicero non dubitabat conjuratos supplicio afficere.—It may be added that 'I doubt whether' is expressed in Latin by dubito si ne, dubito utrum—an, dubito si ne—an, or dubito num, numquid, for dubito an, and dubium est an are used, like nescio an with an affirmative meaning.

NOTE 9. Quin signifies also 'why not?' being compounded of the old ablative qui and nē, i. e. non, and in this sense is joined with the indicative in questions implying an exhortation; as, Quin consendimus equos? Why not mount our horses? In this sense it is also joined with the imperative; as, Quin dic statim. Well, tell me: or with the first person of the subjunctive. Hence without being joined to any verb it signifies 'even' or 'rather.'

REM. 11. The principal verbs of hinderance, after which quominus occurs, and after which ne, and, if a negative precedes, quin also may be used, are dēterreo, impēdio, intercēdo, obsto, officio, prōhibeo, rēcuso, and rēpugno. It occurs also after stat or fit per me, I am the cause, non pugno, nihil mōror, non contineo me, etc.

NOTE. Impēdio, dēterreo, and rēcuso are sometimes, and prōhibeo frequently followed by the infinitive. Instead of quominus, quo scīus is sometimes used.

§ 263. The particles specified in this section always introduce a sentence containing only a conception of the mind, and are hence joined with the subjunctive.

1. The subjunctive is used after particles of wishing, as utinam, ut, O! and O! si; as, Utinam minus vitæ capti fuissēmus! O that we had been less attached to life! Cic. O si sôlita quicquam virtutis âdesset! Virg.

REMARK. The present and perfect tenses, after these particles, are used in reference to those wishes which are conceived as possible; the imperfect and pluperfect are employed in expressing those wishes which are conceived as wanting in reality. Cf. § 261, 1 and 2.—'Would that not' is expressed in Latin both by utinam ne and utinam non. Utinam is sometimes omitted; as, Tecum lûdere sicut ipsa possem! Catull.

Adverbial Clauses.
B. ADVERBIAL CLAUSES.

2. (1.) Quamvis, however; licet, although; tamquam, tamquam si, quâsi, ac si, ut si, vêlut, vêlut si, vêluti, sicûti, and ceu, as if; môdo, dum, and dummôdo, provided,—take the subjunctive; as,

Quamvis ille felix sit, tâmen, etc. However happy he may be, still, etc. Cic. Vêritas licet nullum defensorē obtineat, Though truth should obtain no defender. Id. Tamquam clausa sit Asia, sic nihil perfertur ad nos. Id. Sed quid ego his testibus âtor, quâsi res dubia aut obscura sit? Id. Me omnibus rebus, iusta ac si meus frâter esset, sustentâvit, He supported me in every thing, just as though he were my brother. Id. Similiter facere eos,—ut si nauta certarent, âter, etc. Id. Absentis Ariovisti crudelitatem, vêtut si obram âdesset, horrèrent. Cæs. Inque sinus cæros, vêtuti cognosceret, ibat. Ovid. Sicûti jurgio lâcessitus foret, in senatum vênit. Sall. Hic vëro ingentem pugnam, ceu cêtera nusquam bella fôrent. Virg. Odérunt dum mêtuant. Att. in Cic. Mânent ingénia sênibus, môdo permâneat stûdium et industria. Cic. Omnia hônesta neglîgunt dummôdo pôtentiam consêquantur, They disregard every honorable principle, provided they can obtain power. Id.

NOTE. Môdo, dum, and dummôdo, when joined with a negation, become môdo ne, dum ne, and dummôdo ne.

(2.) Quamvis (although) is in Cicero joined with a principal tense of the subjunctive; as, Quamvis non fuêris suâsor, approbâtor certe fuisti. Cic. In later writers it is often used with the indicative; as, Fêlicem Niôben, quamvis tot fûnëra vidit. Ovid. So also once in Cicero, Quamvis patrem suum numquam vidêrat. Rab. Post. 2.

(3.) Quamvis, as a conjunction, in the sense of 'however much,' is joined with the subjunctive. So also when its component parts are separated; as, C. Gracchus dixit, sibi in somnis T. frâtrē visum esse dicere, quam vellet cunctârêtur, tâmen, etc.—Quamvis 'however much,' as an adverb, governs no particular mood.

—(4.) Etsi, tâmetsi, even if, although, and quamquam, although, commonly introduce an indicative clause:—etiâmsi is more frequently followed by the subjunctive. In later prose writers, and sometimes in Cicero and Sallust as well as in the poets, quamquam is joined with the subjunctive; as, Quamquam præsente Lûcullô loquar. Cic. Vi rêgère patriam quamquam possis. Sall. Jug. 3. Filius quamquam Thêtidos mârinas Dardânas turres quâtêret. Hor.

REMARK. The imperfect subjunctive with ac si, etc., is used after the present, to denote that in reality the thing is not so, but in that case a hypothetical subjunctive must be supplied; as, Egnâtii rem ut tuêre âque a te pëto, ac si mea nêgôtia essent, i. e. ac pëtêrem, si mea nêgôtia essent, as I would pray if, etc. Cic.

3. After antiëquam and priusquam, the imperfect and pluperfect tenses are usually in the subjunctive; the present and perfect may be either in the indicative or subjunctive. The present indicative is commonly used when the action is to be represented as certain, near at hand, or already begun; the subjunctive is used when the thing is still doubtful, and also in general propositions; as,

Ea causa ante mortua est, quam tu nātus esses, That cause was dead before you were born. Cic. Avertit equos, priusquam pābula gustassent Trōja, Xanthumque bibissent. Virg. Priusquam incipias, consulto opus est, Before you begin there is need of counsel. Sall.

4. (1.) Dum, dōnec, and quoad, signifying until, are followed by the subjunctive, if they refer to the attainment of an object; as,

Dum hic veniret, locum relinquere noluit, He was unwilling to leave the place until he (Milo) should come. Cic. Nihil pāto tibi esse altius quam oppēiri quoad scire possis, quid tibi agendum sit. Id. Cornu tēdunt, et ducit longe, dōnec curvata coerent inter se capita. Virg.—In the sense of ‘as long as,’ these particles take the indicative, but Tacitus joins dōnec with the subjunctive even when a simple fact is to be expressed.

(2.) Dum, while, is commonly used with the indicative present, whatever may be the tense of the principal sentence. Cf. § 259, R. 1, (1.), (a.)

5. Quum (cum), when it signifies a relation of time, takes the indicative; when it denotes a connection of thought, the subjunctive; as,

Qui non defendit injūriam, neque repulseat a suis, quum pōtest, injuste facit. Cic. Quum recte navigāri pōtērit, tum naviges. Id. Crēdo tum, quum Sicilia florēbat opibus et cōpiis, magna artificia fuisse in eā insulā. Id. Quum tot sustineas et tanta nēgōtia, peccem, si mōrer tua tempōra, Since you are burdened with so many and so important affairs, I should do wrong, if I should occupy your time. Hor. Quum vīta sine amicis mētus plēna sit, rātio ipsa mōnet amicitias cōpārāre. Cic.

REMARK 1. (a.) The rule for the use of quum may be thus expressed: Quum temporal takes the indicative, quum causal the subjunctive. Hence, when quum is merely a particle of time, with no reference to cause and effect, and not occurring in a historical narrative (see Rem. 2), it may be joined with any tense of the indicative. But when it is employed to express the relation of cause and effect, or has the meaning of ‘though’ or ‘although,’ it is joined with the subjunctive. (b.) Quum, relating to time, is commonly translated when, while, or after; referring to a train of thought, it signifies as, since, though or although, because; but may often be translated when.

REM. 2. In narration, quum, even when it relates to time, is joined with the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive, when a historical perfect stands in the principal clause; as, Gracchus, quum rem illam in religiōnem pōpulo vēnisse sentiret, ad sēnātum rētulit. Cic. Alexander, quum intērmississet Clitum, vix mātus a se abstinuit. Id.

NOTE. Quum temporal, when it expresses an action frequently repeated, may be joined with the pluperfect indicative, and the apodosis then contains the imperfect; as, Quum autem vir esse cōpērat, dābat se labōri. Cic. Quum rōsam viderat, tum incipere ver arbitrābātur. Id. Cf. § 264, 12.

REM. 3. Quum in the sense of ‘while’ is joined with the perfect and imperfect indicative, often with the addition of intērea or intērim, to express simultaneous occurrences; as, Cātulus cēpit magnum suae virtūtis fructum, quum omnes pōpe unā voce, in eo ipso vos spem hābitūros esse, dixistis. Cic. Cedebātur virgīs in medio foro Messāna civis Rōmānus, iūdices, quum intērea nulla vox dīa istius misēri audiebātur, nisi hōc: civis Rōmānus sum. Id.

REM. 4. Quum, for the most part preceded by an adverb, as, jam, nondum, vix, agere, or joined with repente or sūbito is followed by the indicative, especially by the present indicative, to express the beginning of an action. In the cases mentioned in this and the preceding remark, the historians also use quum with the historical infinitive.

For the subjunctive after si and its compounds, see § 261.

C. ADJECTIVE CLAUSES.

SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER QUI.

§ 264. Relatives require the subjunctive, when the clauses connected by them express merely a conception; as, for example, a consequence, an innate quality, a cause, motive, or purpose.

1. (a.) When the relative qui, in a clause denoting a result of the character or quality of something specified in the antecedent clause, follows a demonstrative, and is equivalent to ut with a personal or demonstrative pronoun, it takes the subjunctive.

NOTE. The demonstratives after which qui takes the subjunctive, are tam with an adjective, tantus, tālis, ejusmodi, hujusmodi, and is, ille, iste, and hic in the sense of tālis; as,

Quis est tam Lynceus, qui in tantis tēnebris nihil offendat? i. e. ut ille in tantis, etc., Who is so quick-sighted, that he would not stumble, (or, as not to stumble,) in such darkness. Cic. Tūlem te esse oportet, qui ab impiōrum civium sociētate sejungas; i. e. ut tu, etc. Id. At ea fuit lēgatio Octāvii, in quā pēriculū suspicio non sūbesset, i. e. ut in eā. Id. Nec tāmen ego sum ille ferreus, qui frātris carissimī mōvere non mōvear, i. e. ut ego non mōvear. Id. Non sūmus ii, quibus nihil vērū esse vidēatur, i. e. ut nobis nihil, etc. Id. Nulla gens tam fēra est, cūjus mentem non imbuērit dēorum opīnio, i. e. ut ejus mentem, etc. Id.

(b.) Sometimes the demonstrative word is only implied; as,

Res parva dictu, sed quæ studiis in magnum certāmen excessērit, i. e. tālis quæ....of such a kind that it issued in a violent contest. Cic. Nunc dicis aliquid, quod ad rem pertineat, i. e. tāle ut id, etc. Id. So quis sum, for num tālis sum; as, Quis sum, cūjus aures lēdi nēfus sit? Sen.—In like manner, also, a demonstrative denoting a character or quality, is implied in the examples included in the following rule:—

2. When the relative is equivalent to quamquam is, etsi is, or dummodo is, it takes the subjunctive; as,

Laco, consilii quamvis egrēgii, quod non ipse afferret, Intimicus, Laco, an opponent of any measure, however excellent, provided he did not himself propose it. Tac. Tu aquam a pūmice postulas, qui ipsus sitiāt. Plaut. Nihil molestum, quod non dēsidēres, i. e. dummodo id. Cic.

3. Quod, in restrictive clauses, takes the subjunctive; as,

Quod sciam, as far as I know; quod mēmīnērīm, as far as I recollect; quod ego intelligam; quod intelligi possit; quod conjectūrā prōvidēri possit; quod salvē fide possim; quod commōdo tuo fiat, etc.—Quidem is sometimes added to the relative in such sentences. Quod sine molestiā tuā fiat, So far as it can be done without troubling you. Cic. In the phrases quantum possum, quantum ego peripicio, on the other hand, the indicative is used.

4. A relative clause, after the comparative followed by quam, takes the subjunctive; as,

Māior sum, quam cui possit fortuna nocēre, i. e. quam ut mihi, etc., I am too great for fortune to be able to injure me. Ovid. Auditiū vōce præcōnis māius gaudium fuit, quam quod univēsum hōmīnes capērent, Upon the herald's voice being heard, the joy was too great for the people to contain. Liv.

REMARK 1. The clause annexed by quam qui implies an inherent quality, or a consequence; so that quam qui is equivalent to quam ut, which also sometimes occurs. Sometimes the subjunctive follows quam even without a relative pronoun; as, In his lītēris longior fui, quam aut vellem, aut quam me pūdori fore:—and so frequently with the verbs velle and posse.

5. A relative clause expressing a purpose, aim, or motive, and equivalent to ut with a personal or demonstrative pronoun, takes the subjunctive; as,

Lacedæmoniū lēgātōs Athēnas misērunt, qui eum absentem accūsārent: i. e. ut illi eum accūsārent, The Lacedæmonians sent ambassadors to Athens to accuse him in his absence. Nep. Cæsar equitātum omnem prāmīttit, qui videant, quas in partes iter faciānt. Cæs. Sunt autem multi, qui eripiunt aliis, quod aliis largiantur. Cic. Assidue rēpētant, quas perdant, Bēlides undas. Ovid.

REM. 2. So also with relative adverbs; as, Lampēdēcum ei (Thēmistocli) rez dōndrat, unde vinum sūmēret, i. e. ex quā or ut inde, etc. Nep. Sæper tēbernōulūm régis, unde ab omnibus conspici posset, imāgo solis crystallo inclūsa fulgēbat. Curt.

6. A relative clause with the subjunctive after certain indefinite general expressions, specifies the circumstances which characterize the individual or class indefinitely referred to in the leading clause; as,

Fuērunt eā tempestāte, qui dicērent, There were at that time some who said. Sall. Erant, quibus appētēntior fāmas, vidērētur, There were those to whom he appeared too desirous of fame. Tac. Sunt, qui censeant, una dñitum et corpus occidēre. Cic. Erant, qui existimāri vellent. Id. Si quis erit, qui perpētūam orātōnem dēsidēret, aliā actionē audiet. Id. Vēnient légiones, quæ nēq̄us me inultum nēq̄us te impūnitum pātiantur. Tac. So after est followed by quod, in the sense of 'there is reason why'; as, Est quod gaudeas, You have cause to rejoice. Plant. Est quod visam dōmum. Id. Si est quod dēsit, ne beatū quiddē est. Cic.

NOTE 1. The expressions included in the rule are est, sunt, ddest, præsto sunt, existunt, exōriuntur, inveniuntur, rēpūntur, (scil. hōmīnes); si quis est, tempus fuit, tempus veniet, etc.

REM. 3. The same construction occurs with relative particles used indefinitely; as, Est unde hæc fiant. Si est culpam ut Antipho in se admiserit, If it chance that, etc. Ter. Est ubi id isto modo valeat. Cic. So est cur and est ut in the sense of est cur; as, Ille erat, ut odisset defensorem salutis meæ, i. e. he had reason to hate. Cic. Non est igitur ut mirandum sit, There is no occasion for wondering. Id.

REM. 4. The above and similar expressions are followed by the subjunctive only when they are indefinite. Hence, after sunt quidam, sunt nonnulli, sunt multi, etc., when referring to definite persons, the relative takes the indicative; as, Sunt orātiones quædam, quas Menocrito dabo. Cic.

REM. 5. The indicative is sometimes, though rarely, used after sunt qui, even when taken indefinitely, especially in the poets; as, Sunt, quos juvat. Hor. Sunt qui ita dicunt. Sall.

7. A relative clause after a general negative, or an interrogative expression implying a negative, takes the subjunctive; as,

Nemo est, qui haud intelligat, There is no one who does not understand. Cic. Nulla res est, quae perferre possit continuum laborem, There is nothing which can endure perpetual labor. Quint. Nulla pars est corporis, quae non sit minor. Id. Nihil est, quod tam miseros faciat, quam impietas et scelus. Cic. In foro vix decimus quisque est, qui ipse sese noscat. Plant. Quis est, qui attia fugiat? Who is there that shuns what is useful? Cic. Qua lutebra est, in quam non intret metus mortis? Sen. Quid dulcius quam habere, quicquam omnia audeas sic loqui ut tecum? Cic. (See respecting this use of the indefinite quicum rather than the definite quodcum, § 186, R. 1.) An est quisquam, qui hoc ignoret? Is there any one who is ignorant of this? Id. Numquid est malū, quod non dixeris? Ter.

NOTE 2. General negatives are nemo, nullus, nihil, minus non, alius non, non quisquam, vix ullus, nec ullus, etc., with est; vix with an ordinal and quisque; nego esse quemquam, etc. Interrogative expressions implying a negative, are quis, quid; qui, quae, quod; quantus, utrum, equis, numquis, an quisquam, an aliquis, quidus quisque, quidus, etc., with est? quot, quam multi, etc., with sunt?

NOTE 3. The same construction is used after non est, nihil est, quid est, numquid est, etc., followed by quod, cur, quāre, or quamobrem, and denoting 'there is no reason why', 'what cause is there?' 'is there any reason?' as, Quod timeas, non est, There is no reason why you should fear. Ovid. Nihil est, quod adventum nostrum pertimescas. Cic. Quid est, quod de ejus civitate dubites? Id. Quaris a me, quid ego Cātulinam metuum. Nihil, et curavi ne quis metuere. Quid est, cur virtus ipsa per se non efficiat beatas? Id.—So after non habeo, or nihil habeo; as, Non habeo, quod te accussem. Cic. Nil habeo, quod agam, I have nothing to do. Hor. Nihil habeo, quod ad te scribam. Cic. So without a negative, De quibus habeo ipse, quid/sentiam. Id. Causa or, with quid and nihil, causae, is sometimes added; as, Non fuit causa, cur postillares. Id. Quid erat causa, cur metuere. Id.

NOTE 4. (a.) The relative clause takes the subjunctive after the expressions included in this and the last rule, only when it expresses the character or quality of the subject of the antecedent clause; and the relative, as in the preceding cases of the relative with the subjunctive, is equivalent to a personal or demonstrative pronoun with ut; as, Nemo est, qui nesciat, There is no one who is ignorant, i. e. no one is ignorant. Cic. So, Sunt, qui hoc carpant, There are some who blame this, i. e. some blame this. Vell.

(b.) If the relative clause is to be construed as a part of the logical subject it does not require the subjunctive; as, Nihil stabile est, quod infidum est Nothing which is faithless is firm. Cic.

8. (1.) A relative clause expressing the reason of what goes before, takes the subjunctive; as, Peccatasse mihi videor, qui a te discesserim, I think I did wrong in leaving you. Cic. Inertiam accusas adolescentium, qui istam artem non ediscant, You blame the idleness of the young men, because they do not learn that art. Id. O fortunāte adulescens, qui tua virtutis Hōmērum praecōnem invēneris!—in having found. Id. Cōtinuus fui mirificā vigiliā, qui suo tōto consiliū somnum non vidērit,—since, etc. Id.

(2.) Sometimes, instead of qui alone, ut qui, quippe qui, or utpote qui, is used, generally with the subjunctive; as, Conciviva cum patre non inibat, quippe qui ne in oppidum quidem nisi perraro venisset. Cic. Nēque Antōnius prōcul abērat, utpote qui magno exercitu sequeretur. Sall. But sometimes with the indicative in Sallust and Livy; as, Quippe qui omnia vicērat. Sall.

9. After dignus, indignus, aptus, and idōneus, a relative clause takes the subjunctive; as,

Videtur, qui aliquando impēret, dignus esse, He seems to be worthy at some time to command. Cic. Rustici nostri quum fidem dācūyus bonitatemque laudant, dignum esse dicunt, quicum in tēnebris mīces. Id. Nulla vidēbatur aptior por- adus, quæ de cædit lōquērātur. Id. Pompeius Idōneus non est, qui impetret. Id. Et rem Idōneam, de quā quērātur, et hōmīnes dignos, quibuscum dissērātur, pātant. Id.

NOTE 5. If the relative clause does not express that of which the person or thing denoted by the antecedent is worthy, its construction is not influenced by this rule. Thus, Quis servus libertate dignus fuit, cui nostra adhuc cæra non esset? The subjunctive is here used according to No. 7 of this section.

NOTE 6. The infinitive frequently follows these adjectives in poetry, though rarely in prose; as, Et puer ipse fuit cantari dignus. Virg.:—and sometimes ut; as, Eras dignus, ut haberes integram manum. Quint.

10. A relative clause, after unus, solus, primus, etc., restricting the affirmation to a particular subject, takes the subjunctive; as,

Hæc est una contentio, quæ adhuc permanserit. This is the only dispute which has remained till this time. Cic. Voluptas est sola, quæ nos vocet ad se, et alluceat suapte natura. Pleasure is the only thing that, by its own nature, invites and allures us to itself. Id.

11. When the relative refers to a dependent clause, it often takes the subjunctive. See § 266.

12. The imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive are used in narration after relative pronouns and adverbs, when a repeated action is spoken of; as,

Semper habiti sunt fortissimi, qui summam imperii potirentur. Those were always accounted the bravest, who obtained the supreme dominion. Nep. Quemcumque licitor jussu consulisprehendisset, tribunus mitti jubebat. Liv. Ut quisque maxime laboraret locus, aut ipse occurreret, aut aliquos mittebat. So after si quis or qui; as, Si qui rem multoties gessisset, dedecus existimabant. Cic. Quotiens super tali negotio consultaret, edita domus parte alebatur. Tac. Nec quisquam Pyrrhum, quæ tulisset impetum, sustinere valuit.—It is sometimes found in like manner after quum, ubi, ut, and si when used in the sense of quum, when repeated actions are spoken of; as, Id ubi dixisset, hastam in fines eorum mittebat. Liv. Sin Numida propius accessissent, ibi vero virtutem ostendere. Sall. Sometimes even the present subjunctive is so used when employed as an aorist to express things which have happened repeatedly, and still happen (see § 145, I. 2.); as, Ubi de magna virtute et gloria bonorum memores, quæ sibi quisque, etc. Sall.

NOTE 7. This is called the indefinite subjunctive, or subjunctive of generality, inasmuch as the action is not referred to a distinct, individual case. The indicative, however, is used in such cases more frequently than the subjunctive.

SUBJUNCTIVE IN INDIRECT QUESTIONS.

§ 265. Dependent clauses. Dependent clauses, containing an indirect question, take the subjunctive.

NOTE 1. A question is indirect when its substance is stated in a dependent clause without the interrogative form. Indirect questions generally depend upon those verbs and expressions which commonly take after them the accusative with the infinitive. Cf. § 272. Thus:—

Qualis sit animus, ipse animus nescit. The mind itself knows not what the mind is. Cic. Credibile non est, quantum scribam. It is incredible how much I write. Id. Quis ego sim, me rogitas? Do you ask me who I am? Plaut. Ad te quid scribam nescio. Cic. Nec quid scribam habeo. Nor have I any thing to write. Id. Doce me, ubi sint dii. Inform me where the gods are. Id. Incerium est, quo te loco mors expectet. Sen. Ep. Quam pridem tibi hereditas venisset, docei. Id. Nunc accipe, quare desipiant omnes. Hor. Id utrum illi sentiant, an vēro simlēt, tu intelliges. Cic. Quæro, num tu sēdētis causam tuam permittas. Id. Vides, ut aliū stet nīve candīdum Sōracte. Hor. Nesci, vitāne fruātur, an sit apud mānes. Ovid.

NOTE 2. All interrogatives whether adjectives, pronouns, or particles, may serve as connectives of clauses containing indirect questions; as,

Quantus, quālis, quōd, quōtus, quōtuplex, ūter; quis, qui, cūjus; ubi, quō, unde, quā, quorū, quādiū, quādiūdum, quāmpriē, quōties, cū, quāre, quāmodū, quāmodūm, quōmōdo, ut, quā, quādiūpē, an, ne, num, utrum, anne, annon.

REMARK 1. The indicative is frequently used in dependent questions, especially in Terence and Plautus and occasionally in later poets; as, Vide dvārtia quid faciūt. Ter. So Virg. Ecl. 6, 7. In the best prose writers the indicative generally indicates that the question is direct, or that the sentence is not a question; as, Quarāmus ubi mālēficium est, Let us seek there, where the crime actually is. Cic. Nihil est admirābilis, quā quōmōdo ille mortem filiū tūlit.

REM. 2. In double questions, 'whether—or,' the first may be introduced by utrum, or the enclitic ne, or without an interrogative particle. Hence there are four forms of double questions,—1. utrum (or utrum ne),—an. 2. utrum,—an (anne). 3. ne,—an. 4. ne,—ne; as, Multum intēst, utrum laus imminuātur, an sēlus dēsērātur. Cic. The interrogative particle utrum is not used in a single question; and num—an is used only in direct questions. The English 'or not' in the second part, which is used without a verb, is expressed in Latin by annon or necne, either with or without a verb; but necne occurs only in indirect questions; as, Di utrum sint, necne sint, quæritur. Cic.—Ne—ne, an—an, or num—num scarcely occur except in poetical or unclassical language.

REM. 3. Dūbto, dūbium est, or incertum est an, dētibēro or hæsito an, and especially haud scio an, nescio an, though implying some doubt, have generally a sense almost affirmative. Compare § 198, II, B. (c.)

REM. 4. Nescio quis, used nearly in the sense of aliquis, does not influence the mood of the following verb; as, Sed cāsu nescio quō in ea tempōra atas nostra incidit. Cic. Lūcus, nescio quō cāsu, nocturno tempōre incensus est. Nep. So, also, nescio quōmōdo, 'somehow' or 'in some way'; as, Sed nescio quōmōdo, inhaeret in mentibus quāsi augūrium. Cic. In like manner nirum quā, mirum quāntum, nimirum quāntum, and the like, when united to express only one idea, do not affect the mood of the verb; as, Sāles in dicendo nimirum quāntum vident,—very much. Cic.

SUBJUNCTIVE IN INSERTED CLAUSES.

§ 266. 1. When a dependent proposition containing either an accusative with the infinitive, or a verb in the subjunctive, has a clause connected with it, as an essential part, either by a relative, a relative adverb, or a conjunction, the verb of the latter clause is put in the subjunctive; as,

Quid enim pōtēst esse tam perspicuum, quā esse aliquid nūmen, quō hęc rēgantur? For what can be so clear as, that there is some divinity by whom these things are governed? Cic. Here the thing which is stated to be clear is, not merely esse aliquid nūmen, that there is a god, but also that the world is governed by him. Hence the latter clause, quō hęc rēgantur is an essential part of the general proposition. Illud sic fēre dēfiniri vōlet, dēcorū id esse, quod consentāneum sit hōminis excellētiæ. Id. Audiam quid sit, quod Eryciurū non prōbes, I shall hear why it is that you do not approve of Epicurus. Id. Iussit ut, quæ vēnissent, nāves Eubœam pēlērēt. Liv.

REMARK 1. Hence the subjunctive is used in general sentences, in which the class of things mentioned exists only as a conception or idea, while the individual thing has a real existence; as, Est enim ulciscendi et puniendi modus, atque haud scio an sedit sit eum qui læcesserit injuriæ suæ puniêre, i. e. each individual offender of the class.

REM. 2. When the principal proposition contains a subjunctive denoting a result, after ita, tam, tâlis, etc., the inserted clause has the indicative; as, Assa vèro tam optima est et feracis, ut—multitudine eârum rerum, quæ exportantur, facile omnibus terris antecellat. Cic. The same is the case in definitions; as, Vidêre igitur oportet, quæ sint convènitia cum ipso nêgôio, hoc est, quæ ab re sèpârâre non possunt. Cic.—So also explanatory clauses, especially circumlocutions introduced by a relative pronoun, are sometimes found with the indicative; as, Idque ille Mârius item eximie L. Plôtium dâlexit, cûjus ingênio pûtabat ea, quæ gessêrat, posse cêlêbrâri. Cic.

NOTE. To this rule belongs the construction of the ôrâtio obliqua, 'indirect discourse,' or 'reported speech,' in which the language of another is presented, not as it was conceived or expressed by him, but in the third person. Thus, Cæsar said, 'I came, I saw, I conquered,' is direct,—Cæsar said, that 'he came, saw, and conquered,' is indirect discourse.

2. In the ôrâtio obliqua, the main proposition is expressed by the accusative with the infinitive; and dependent clauses connected with it by relatives and particles, take the subjunctive.

Thus, Cicero and Quintilian, in quoting the language of Marcus Antonius, make use, the former of the ôrâtio directa, the latter of the ôrâtio obliqua;—Antônîus inquit, 'Ars eârum rerum est, quæ sciuntur', Antonius says, 'Art belongs to those things which are known.' Cic. Antônîus inquit, artem eârum rerum esse, quæ sciuntur, Antonius says, that 'art belongs to those things which are known.' Quint.

So, Socrâtes dicere solêbat, omnes, in eo quod scirent, sâtis esse êloquentes, Socrates was accustomed to say, that 'all were sufficiently eloquent in that which they understood?' Cic. Clito mirâri se aiêbat, quod non ridêret hârusper, hâruspicem quum vidisset. Id. Nêgat jus esse, qui miles non sit, pugnâre cum hoste. Id. Indignâbantur tibi esse impêrium, tibi non esset libertas. Liv. Idque Athênîenses, quod hônestum non esset, id ne ûtile quidem (esse) putâverunt. Cic.

REMARK 1. (a.) When the subjunctive would be necessary in the ôrâtio directa, to denote liberty, power, etc., the same remains in the ôrâtio obliqua, and is not changed into the infinitive with an accusative; as, Ad hæc Ariovistus respondit, quum vellet, congrêdêrêtur. To this Ariovistus replied, that 'he might meet him when he pleased.' Cæs. In the ôrâtio directa, this would be congrêdâris.

(b.) The imperative in the ôrâtio directa is, in the ôrâtio obliqua, changed into the subjunctive; as, hoc mihi dicite, which in the ôrâtio obliqua is, hoc sibi dicant, or hoc sibi dicêrent, according to the tense of the leading verb.

(c.) So also direct questions addressed to the second person, when changed from direct to indirect speech, become subjunctives. Liv. 6, 37.—But such questions when not addressed to the second person are expressed in the ôrâtio obliqua by the accusative with the infinitive; as when in direct speech we say, Etiamsi vêtêris contumêlia oblivisci vêlim, num possum etiâ recentium injuriarum mêmôriam depônere? The ôrâtio obliqua will be, Cæsar respondit (histor. perf.)—si vêtêris contumêlia oblivisci vellet, num etiâ recentium injuriarum—mêmôriam depônere posse? Cæs. Very rarely the accusative with the infinitive is found in a question of the second person, as in Liv. 6, 17: but the subjunctive in questions of the third person is less uncommon in Cæsar; as, Quis pati posset? for quem pati posse? Quis hoc sibi persuâderet? for quem sibi persuâsurum? See § 273, 8.

REM. 2. A writer may state his own past words or thoughts in ôrâtio obliqua, either preserving the first person, or adopting the third.

REM. 3. When the inserted clause contains the words or sentiments of the subject of the leading clause, all references to him are regularly expressed by the reflexives sui and suus; as, Ille necessitate conctus domino navis qui sit opterit, multa pollicens, si se conservasset. Nep. And this is equally true when the word to which the pronoun refers is not in reality the grammatical subject, provided it may still be conceived as such; as, Quum ei in suspiciōnem venisset, aliquid in epistola de se esse scriptum. Nep.; for the words, quum ei in suspiciōnem venisset, are equivalent to quum suspicāretur. See § 208, (1.)

REM. 4. The tenses to be used in changing the oratio directa into the obliqua, depend on the tense of the verb which introduces the quotation, according to the rule, § 258. But when the future perfect would be used in the direct, the pluperfect is necessary in the oblique form; but the perfect is used after the present, perfect definite, or future.

REM. 5. When the connected clause contains merely a descriptive circumstance, or expresses what is independent of the sentiment of the preceding clause, it takes the indicative; as, Imperavit Alexander Lysippo, ut eorum equitum, qui apud Granicum ceciderant, faceret statuas, Alexander ordered Lysippus to make statues of those horsemen who had fallen at the Granicus. Sometimes, in other cases, when it is evident from the sense, that the connected clause is an essential part of the proposition, the indicative is used, to avoid giving the appearance of contingency to the sentence.

3. A clause connected to another by a relative or causal conjunction, takes the subjunctive, (whatever be the mood of the preceding verb,) when it contains not the sentiment or allegation of the writer, but that of some other person alluded to; as,

Socrates accusatus est, quod corrumpere juvenitatem, Socrates was accused of corrupting the youth, lit., because (as was alleged) he corrupted the youth. Deum invocabant, cuius ad solenne venissent, They invoked the god, to whose solemnities they had come. Liv. Quos vicis amicos tibi esse cave credas, Do not believe that those whom you have conquered are your friends. Here, in the first example, the charge of corrupting the youth is not made by the writer, but by the accusers of Socrates. So, in the second example, the worshippers allege that they have come to attend upon the solemnities of the god. In the last, it is implied by the use of the subjunctive mood, that the belief spoken of is that of the person addressed:—quos vicisti would have been merely an addition of the speaker, by means of which he would have designated the persons whose friendship he was speaking of; and, in general, the indicative, in such sentences, is employed in those statements which are independent of the sentiments of the person, to whose thoughts or words allusion is made. Cf. supra, 2, R. 5.

REMARK. In the preceding cases, it is not directly said that the sentiments are those of another than the writer. In Cicero, however, the words dico, pato, arbitror, and the like, are often construed in a similar manner, although, properly speaking, not these verbs, but those in the clauses dependent on them, should be in the subjunctive; as, Quum enim, Hannibalis permissu, exisset de castris, rediit paulo post, quod se oblitum nescio quod diceret,...because (as) he said, he had forgotten something. Cic. Ab Atheniensibus, locum sepultura intra urbem ut darent, impetrare non potui, quod religione se impediri dicerent. Id.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

§ 267. The imperative mood is used to express a command, wish, advice, or exhortation; as,

Nosce te, Know thyself. Cic. Aequam memento servare mentem, Remember to preserve an unruffled mind. Hor. Huc ades, Come hither. Virg. Pasce capellas, et potum pastas age, et inter agendum occurrere capro caverito. Id.

(1.) The imperative present denotes that an action is to be performed directly or at once; as, lege, read; mórre, die; or that a state or condition is to continue; as, vive, live.

(2.) The imperative future denotes that something is to be done, as soon as something else has taken place; as, Quum vultudini tuæ consiliueris, tum consúltito naviagatióni. Cic. Prius audite paucis; quod quum dixero, si placuerit, fáctóte. Ter. The precedent event is often to be supplied by the mind. Sometimes, especially in poetry, the imperative present is used for the imperative future, and, on the other hand, scito and scióte, from scio, are used instead of the imperative present, which is wanting.

(3.) Hence the imperative future is properly used in contracts, laws, and wills; and also in precepts and rules of conduct; as, Régio império duo sunt, sique consules appellantur, militiæ summum jus habento, nemini párento, illis sálus populi suprema lex esto. Cic. Non attas est pulchra esse poemáta, dulcía sunt. Hor. Ignoscito saepe alíeri, numquam tibi. Syr.

REMARK 1. With the imperative, not is expressed by nē, and nor by nēve; as, Ne tanta ónimis assuescíte bella. Virg. Ne créde cólóri. Id. Hómínem mortuum in urbe ne sepélito, néve úrito. Cic.

NOTE. Non and nēque occur, though rarely, with the imperative; as, Vos quódque non caris aures óneráte lípillis, nec pródite gráves insáto vestíbulo auro. Ovid. But with the subjunctive used for the imperative non and especially nēque are found more frequently. Cf. § 260, R. 6, (5).—In Plautus and Terence ne is of common occurrence both with the imperative and with the present subjunctive, and with no difference of meaning; but later poets chiefly use ne with the present subjunctive, and ne with the imperative only when they speak emphatically. In classical prose writers the periphrastic nólui with the infinitive is preferred.

REM. 2. The present and perfect subjunctive are often used instead of both tenses of the imperative, to express a command in a milder form, an exhortation, or an entreaty; as, Qui dápisci vëram glóriam vólet, justitiá fungátur officiis. Cic. Quod dúbítas, ne fáceris. Plin. Ep. See § 260, II., R. 6. An imperative of the perfect passive is very rarely found; as, At vos admónlti nostris quódque cástibus este. Ovid. Jacta álea esto. Cæs. in Suet. But the subjunctive is more common; as, Jacta sit álea. Sometimes also the future indicative; as, Sed válëbis, meáque négótiá vidëbis, meáque diis júvantibus ante brúmam expectábis, instead of vále, vide, exspecta. Cic. Ubi sententiám meám vóbis pérëgéro, tum quibus eadém plácëbunt, in dextrám partem túcti transibitis, instead of transítote. Liv. With the future the negative is non. See § 259, R. 1, (4.)

REM. 3. Sometimes, for the simple affirmative imperative, cúra or cúrato ut, fac ut, or fac alone is used with the subjunctive; as, Cúra ut quam primum vénias, Come as soon as possible. Fac erúdiás, Instruct, or Take care to instruct. Cic. For the negative imperative fac ne, cáve ne or cáve alone, with the present or perfect subjunctive is used; but especially nólui with the infinitive; as, Nólui plátäre, Do not suppose. Cic. Cáve existimes, Do not think. Id. Nólite id velle quód non fáeri pótest, et cávëte ne spe præséntis pácis perpétuam pácem ómittátis. Id.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

OF THE TENSES OF THE INFINITIVE.

§ 268. 1. The infinitive partakes of the properties of the noun and verb, just as the participle combines the properties of the adjective and verb. It expresses simply the action or state implied in the verb in an abstract manner, without specifying either person, number, or time, and thus merely indicates whether an action is in progress or completed.

2. The tenses of the infinitive denote respectively an action as present, past, or future, in reference to the time of the verbs with which they are connected; as,

Hoc facere possum, I am able to do this. Cic. Vidi nostros inimicos cupere bellum, I saw that our enemies were desiring war. Id. Nec gemere atria cessabit turtur ab ulmo, Nor shall the turtle dove cease to coo from the lofty elm. Virg.—Victorem victa succubuisse quæror, I complain that the victor has yielded to the vanquished. Ovid. Se a senibus audisse dicebant, They said that they had heard (it) from the old men. Cic. Audiet civis acuisse ferrum juvenis, The youth will hear that the citizens have whetted the sword. Hor.—Negat sese verbum esse facturum, He declares that he is not about to speak. Cic. Postquam audierat non datum iri filio uxorem suo, After he had heard that a wife would not be given to his son. Ter. Semper existimabitis nihil horum vos visuros fore, You will always suppose that you are to see none of these things. Cic.

REMARK 1. (a.) The present and perfect infinitives are sometimes called respectively the infinitives of incomplete and of completed action. The present infinitive, however, is sometimes used to denote a completed action. This is the usual construction with mementi; but in such case the speaker transfers himself to the past, and the expression denotes rather a recollection of the progress than of the completion of the action; as, *Hoc me mementi dicere, I remember my saying this. Cic. Teucrum mementi Sidona venire, I remember Teucer's coming to Sidon. Virg. So with memoria teneo. Cic. Phil. 8, 10. Scribit also is construed like mementi; as, Cic. Off. 3, 2: and after the same analogy, and for the sake of vivid expression Cicero says, M. Maximum accipimus facile celare, tacere, dissimulare, etc., though speaking of things which he had not witnessed himself. So, also, with recordor;—Recordor longe omnibus unum anteferre Demosthenem. Cic. When the action is spoken of simply as a fact, the perfect infinitive is used with mementi; as, *Mementis me ita distribuisse causam. Cic.

(b.) The passive voice having no simple form for expressing the completed state of suffering makes use of the combination of the perfect participle with esse; as, amatus esse, to have been loved. When thus combined esse loses its own signification of a continued state, and when this state is to be expressed, another infinitive must be chosen; as, Constrictam jam horum conscientia teneri conjurationem tuam non vides? Cic. Sometimes, however, when no ambiguity can arise, esse in the usual combination retains its original meaning; as, Apud Platonem est, omnem morem Lacædæmoniorum inflammatum esse cupiditate vincendi. Id. Here inflammatum esse expresses a continued or habitual state.—Fuisse with the perfect participle denotes a state completed previous to a certain past time; as, Jubet bono animo esse; seditum fuisse regem subito ictu. Liv.

REM. 2. To express the result of an action rather than its progress, the perfect infinitive is sometimes used instead of the present, especially after satis habeo, satis mihi est, pudet, contentus sum, melius erit, volo or a verb of equivalent meaning; as, Bacchatur vates, magnum si pectore possit excussisse deum. Virg. Quum illam nemo velis attingisse. Plin. The poets use the infinitive perfect where we should expect a present; as, Tendentes Pelion impetuisse Olympo. Hor.

REM. 3. The present infinitive is also sometimes used for the future, especially when the verb has no future; as, Desine fata deum flecti sperare, Cease to hope that the fates of the gods will be changed. Virg. Progeniem Trojana a sanguine duci audierat. Id. Cras mihi argentum dare dixit, i. e. se daturum esse. Ter. Cato affirmat se vivo illum non triumphare. Cic.

REM. 4. (a.) The infinitive future active is formed by a combination of the participle future active with esse; as, amaturus esse; the infinitive future passive by a combination of the supine in um with iri; as, amatum iri. These future infinitives denote an action or state as continuing. The participle in rus, which properly expresses intention (see § 162, 14), takes also the infinitive fuisse to express a past intention; as, Scio te scripturum fuisse, I know that you have had the intention to write, whence it was an easy transition to the sense, 'you would have written,' in conditional sentences, when the condition is not fulfilled. This infinitive is used especially in the apodosis of hypothetical sentences, where in direct speech the pluperfect subjunctive would be used (cf. § 162, 14, R. 3.); as, Etiam si obtemperasset auspiciis, idem eventurum fuisse puto. Cic. In like manner the infinitive future with esse is used in the apodosis of hypothetical sentences instead of the imperfect subjunctive; as, Libertus, nisi iurasset, scelus se facturum (esse) arbitrabatur. Id.

(b.) Instead of the future infinitive, in both voices, futurum esse or fore, followed by ut and the subjunctive, is often used; the present and imperfect subjunctive, in such cases, denoting an unfinished, the perfect and pluperfect a finished, future action; as, Numquam putavi fore, ut supplex ad te venirem, I never supposed (that it would happen) that I should come a suppliant to you. Cic. Suspicor fore, ut infringatur hominum improbitas. Id. Credebam fore, ut epistolam scripsisses.—So, also, in the passive for a continued state of future suffering the present and imperfect are used; as, Crede fore, ut epistolam scribatur, and, Credebam fore, ut epistola scriberetur. But to express a completed state in future time the perfect participle is employed; as, Quos spero brevi tempore tecum copulatos fore. Cic. Quod videret nomine patris bellum involutum fore. Id. This construction is necessarily used, when the verb has either no future active participle, or no supine; as, in such case, the regular future infinitive cannot be formed; as, Spero fore ut sapias.—Fore is found in two passages pleonastically joined with the future participle active, viz. Te ad me fore venturum. Cic. Att. 5, 21: and Quum senatus censeret—libenter facturos fore. Liv. 6, 42.

REM. 5. (a.) The periphrastic infinitive formed by the future active participle with fuisse, denotes a future action contingent upon a condition which was not fulfilled; and, in the apodosis of a conditional sentence, corresponds to the pluperfect subjunctive; as, An censes me tantos labores susceperum fuisse, si tandem finibus gloriam meam quibus vitam essem terminaturus? Do you think that I should have undertaken so great labors if, etc. Cic. Ut perspicuum sit omnibus, nisi tanta acerbitas injuriarum fuisset, numquam illos in eum locum progressuros fuisse,....that they never would have come into that place. Id.

(b.) Futurum fuisse with ut and the imperfect subjunctive passive, corresponds to the infinitive fuisse with the future participle active in a conditional proposition; as, Nisi nuncii essent allati, existimabant plerique futurum fuisse, ut oppidum amitteretur,....that the town would have been lost. Cæs.

(c.) The participle future passive cannot be used to form an infinitive future passive, since it always retains the meaning of necessity, and in this sense has three regular infinitives, amandum esse, amandum fuisse, and amandum fore; as, Instare hiemem, aut sub pellibus habendos milites fore, aut differendum esse in astutem bellum. Liv.

REM. 6. In the apodosis of a conditional sentence, the perfect infinitive, like the past tenses of the indicative, (see § 259, R. 4.), sometimes corresponds to the pluperfect subjunctive; as, (Dixit) sibi vitam filiae suae cariorem fuisse, si liberis ac patre vivere licitum fuisset, (He said) that the life of his daughter had been dearer to him than his own, if it had been permitted.... Liv. This use of the perfect infinitive is necessary, when the verb has no future participle; as, Equidem Plutonem existimo, si genus forense dicendi tractare voluisset, gravissime et copiosissime potuisse dicere,—would have been able to speak. Cic.

§ 269. The infinitive may be regarded either as a verb or as an abstract noun. (a.) As a verb it is used either indefinitely (§ 143, 4), or with a subject of its own, which is put in the accusative, (§ 239). But the infinitive passive of neuter and sometimes of active verbs, like the third person singular of that voice, may be used impersonally or without a subject; as, Vides isto propèrari litore, You see a stir is made all along the shore. Virg. See §§ 209, R. 3, (2.), and 239, R. 4. The present infinitive has sometimes, in narration, a subject in the nominative. See § 209, R. 5.

(b.) As a noun, the infinitive, either alone or with a subject-accusative, has two cases, the nominative and the accusative, and is accordingly used either as the subject or the object of a verb.

The Infinitive AS THE INFINITIVE AS THE SUBJECT OF A VERB.

The infinitive, either with or without a subject-accusative, may be the subject of a verb; as,

Ad rempublicam pertinet me conservāri, It concerns the state that I should be preserved. Cic. Numquam est ūtile peccāre, To do wrong is never useful. Id. Māius dēdēcus est parā amittere quam omnino non parāvisse. Sall. In the first example conservāri with its subject accusative me is the subject of pertinet, and is equivalent to 'my preservation': in the second, peccāre is the subject of est ūtile. See § 202, 2, and III. R. 2.

REMARK 1. A general truth may be expressed by the infinitive without a subject; as, Fāciūsus est vincire civem Rōmānum, To bind a Roman citizen, or, that one should bind a Roman citizen, is a crime. But in such case the verb esse and verbs denoting to appear, to be considered or called (§ 210, R. 8.), require the noun or adjective of the predicate to agree with the implied subject in the accusative; as, Æquū est peccātis vniām poscentem reddere rursum. Hor. Atticus maximum aestimāvit questum, mēmōrem grātumque cognosci. Nep.

NOTE. The indefinite pronoun aliquem or aliquos may in such cases be supplied, and the same indefiniteness may be expressed by te or nos, cf. § 209, R. 7; but it is still more frequently expressed by the infinitive passive. Hence the sentence Fāciūsus est vincire civem Rōmānum, may also be expressed by Fāciūsus est vinciri civem Rōmānum. So, Quum vidērent de eōrum virtūte non desperāri. Nep.—The impersonal verbs licet, dēcet, oportet, opus est, and nēcesse est, when there is no definite subject, are joined with the infinitive active alone; but when there is a subject-accusative, they are connected with the passive construction; as, a c. t. licet hoc fācere; dēcet spēcimen cāpere ex hac re; pass. licet hoc fieri; dēcet spēcimen capi.

REM. 2. The infinitive, with or without a subject accusative, is often the subject of a proposition, when the substantive verb with a noun, a neuter adjective, or an impersonal verb forms the predicate. Of this kind are justum, æquū, vērissimū, consentāneū, apertum—est, erat, etc., nēcesse est, opus est;—appāret, constat, convenit, dēcet, licet, oportet; intelligitur, perspicitur, etc.; as, Cui verba dāre difficile est. Ter. Mendācem mēmōrem esse oportet. Quint. Lēgem brevem esse oportet. Sen. Constat profecto ad salūtem civium inventas esse lēges. Cic. Non enim me hoc jam dicere pūdebūt. Id. See § 209, R. 2, (5.), (a.)

REM. 3. The infinitive may itself be the subject of an infinitive; as, Audio non licere cuiquam in nāve capillos depōnere. Ter.

REM. 4. The infinitive, with or without a subject accusative, may also be the predicate nominative; as, Impiūne quolibet fācere id est rēgem esse. Sall. In this sentence fācere is the subject, and rēgem esse is the predicate; for id, which only represents by a kind of apposition the clause impiūne quolibet fācere, can be omitted.

REM. 5. When the infinitive esse, (or others of similar meaning, as, fieri, vivere, vitam degere, cōdere, habere, etc.), with a predicate adjective (or noun), is joined with licet, such predicate is put in the accusative, if the subject-accusative of the infinitive is expressed, and sometimes, also, when it is omitted, but more frequently, in the latter case, the predicate adjective or noun is attracted to the dative following licet; as, Ut cum liceat ante tempus consūlem fieri. Auct. ad Her. Mēdios esse jam non licēbūt. Cic. Sī civi Rōmāno licet esse Gādītānum. Id.—Licuit enim esse ōtioso Thēmistocli. Id. Mihi nēgigenti esse non licet. Id. Sibi vitam filia suā caridrem fuisse, si libēra ac pūdicā vivere illūm fuisset (scil. ei). Liv. So also nēcesse est with the predicate in thdative. Vobis necesse est fortibus viris esse. Liv.—But hæc, oportet, and necesse est are also joined with the subjunctive mood, and hence is derived the construction of hæc as a conjunction. See § 263, 2.

THE INFINITIVE AS THE OBJECT OF A VERB.

§ 270. The infinitive, either with or without a subject-accusative, may be the object of a verb; as,

Hæc vitare cupimus. We desire to avoid this. Cic. Postas omnino non conor attingere, I do not at all attempt to reach the poets. Id. Sententiam valere cupierunt, They desired that the opinion should prevail. Id. Spéro te valere, I hope that you are well. Id.

NOTE. The infinitive as the object of a verb supplies the place of the accusative of the thing, and hence many active verbs besides the infinitive take in the active voice an accusative of the person, cf. § 231, R. 3, (b.), and in the passive retain the infinitive; as, Consules jubentur scribere exercitum. Muros adire vetiti sunt. Cf. § 234, I.

REMARK 1. The infinitive alone may also depend upon an adjective, and sometimes upon a noun.

(a.) It may depend upon relative adjectives, (see § 213, R. 1), which, by the poets, are joined with the infinitive instead of their usual construction with the genitive of the gerund, etc.; as, Cedere nescius. Hor. Avidi committere pugnam. Ovid. Cupidus moriri. Id. Cantare periti Arcades. Virg. Callidus condere furto. Hor. Quidlibet impotens sperare. Id. Sutrinus facere inscius. Varr. Insuetus vera audire. Liv. Certa mori. Virg. Felicius ungere tela. Virg. So, Audax omnia perpelli, Resolute to endure every thing. Hor. Sollers ornare Cypassis, Skillful to adorn. Ovid. Segnes solvere nodum. Hor. Indocilis pauperem pati. Id. Non lenis fata recludere. Id. See § 213, R. 4, (1.)

(b.) It may also depend upon adjectives signifying usefulness, fitness, etc., which are sometimes by the poets construed with the infinitive instead of the dative; as, (Tibia) aspirare et adesse choris erat attilis. Hor. Ætas mollis et apta regi. Ovid. Fons etiam rivo dare nomen idoneus. Hor. Fruges consumere nati. Id. And after dignus and contentus; as, Dignus amari. Virg. Cf. § 244, R. 2, (b.)

(c.) Upon a noun; as, Tempus est hujus libri facere finem, It is time to finish this book. Nep. Intit consilia reges tollere, He devised a plan to destroy the kings. Id. Ea erat confessio caput rerum Roman esse. Liv. Cupido incesserat Æthiopiam invisere. Curt. Quibus in otio vivere copia erat. Sall. So, Nec mihi sunt vires inimicos pellere tectis, instead of pellendis inimicis, or ad pellendos inimicos. Ovid.

(d.) If for the infinitives depending on nouns or adjectives other nouns were substituted, these last would be put in the genitive, dative, or ablative; and hence such infinitives may perhaps be properly regarded as exceptions to the rule, that the infinitive has but two cases, the nominative and the accusative.

REM. 2. (a.) The infinitive with the accusative sometimes stands unconnected, especially in exclamations and indignant interrogations, where credibile est? or verumne est? may be supplied; as, Mene incepto desistere victam? That I, vanquished, should desist from my undertaking? Virg. Me miserum! te in tantas ærummas propter me incidisse! Cic.—But ut, also, with the subjunctive, either with or without an interrogative particle, may be used to express a question with indignation; as, Eine (scil. patri) ego ut adverser? Liv. Tu ut umquam te corrigas? Cic. Judicio ut arator delinquentum perséquatur? Id.; where fieri potest? may be supplied.

(b.) So, in the oratio obliqua, the words signifying said, saying, etc., are often omitted, or implied in a preceding verb or phrase; as, Id facile effici posse, scil. dixit. Nep. Quem signum daturum fugientibus? Curt.

REM. 3. The infinitive is sometimes to be supplied; and esse and fuisse with a predicate adjective, and also in the compound forms of the infinitive, both active and passive, are commonly omitted, especially after verbs of saying, thinking, knowing, and perceiving; as, Vos cognōvi fortes. Sall. Quem pulsum mēmōrāvi. Tac.—So, also, with the infinitive perfect passive when depending on volo, nolo, cūpio, and oportet; as, Adolescenti mōrem gestum oportuit. Ter. Quod jam pridem factum oportuit. Cic.—Sometimes in a relative clause an infinitive is to be supplied from the finite verb of the main proposition; as, Quos voluit omnes interfecit, scil. interficere. Ne illam quidem consequuntur, quum pātant, grātiam; i. e. quam se consēcūtāros pātant. Cic.

THE INFINITIVE WITHOUT A SUBJECT-ACCUSATIVE.

§ 271. The infinitive, without a subject-accusative, is used after verbs denoting ability, obligation, intention or endeavor; after verbs signifying to begin, continue, cease, abstain, dare, fear, hesitate, or be wont; and after the passive of verbs of saying, believing, reckoning, etc.

NOTE 1. To these classes belong possum, queo, nāqueo, vōleo, dēbeo; cūro, cōgito, dēcerno, stātuo, constituo, instīto, pāro; cōnor, ālitor, tendo, contendo, tento, māistro, prōpōro, aggredior, persēvōro, —capi, incipio, pergo, dēsino, dēsisto, intermitto, parco, rēcūso; vōleo, assuesco, consuesco, insuesco; audeo, vērōr, mētuo, rēformido, ītimeo, horreo, dubito; —audior, crēdor, existimor, fērōr, nīgōr, nūntior, pārhibeor, pūtor, trādor, jūbeor, videor, and cōgōr.

NOTE 2. When the preceding verbs are joined with esse, hābēri, jūdicāri, vidēri, etc., the predicate noun or adjective is put in the nominative; as, Solēt tristis vidēri; aude sapiens esse; capit mihi molestus esse; dēbes esse diligens; pōtēst liber esse: and so also mērētur, scit, dicūt liber esse.

NOTE 3. The poets, in imitation of the Greeks, use the infinitive after fāge, aufēre, cāce, parce, mēmēnto; pāveo, rēfūgio, quāro, urgeo, lābōro, āmō, gaudeo, fūro, calleo, sūmo, mitto, rēmīto, pātor, jūro, conjūro, pugno, nātus, and some other verbs, especially to denote a wish or purpose; as, Introīit vidēre. Ter. Non te frangere persēquor. Hor. Non pōpūlōre pēnātes vēnimus. Virg. In this construction, the poets are sometimes imitated by the later prose writers.

REMARK 1. Many of the verbs above enumerated, instead of the infinitive, may be followed by the subjunctive with ut, ne, etc.; and with some of them this is the regular construction; as, Sententiam ne dicēret, rēcūsāvit. Cic.

REM. 2. The passives dicor, trādor, fērōr, narror, rēpōrior, existimor, videor, etc., may either be used personally, with the infinitive alone, or impersonally, followed by the accusative with the infinitive. Thus we may say, Māter Pausāniæ eo tempōre vixisse dicītur, or, Dicītur eo tempōre mātrē Pausāniæ vixisse. The mother of Pausanias is said to have been living....or, It is said that the mother of Pausanias was living.... Nep. The former construction is more common especially with videor, see § 272, R. 6; but the latter is frequent with nūntiātur, and very common with the compound tenses, trādītum est, prōdītum est, etc., and with the participle future passive; as, crēdendū est, intelligendū est, etc.; as, Quōrum nēmīnem tālem fuisse crēdendū, etc. Cic.

REM. 3. The infinitive without a subject is used after a verb, only when it denotes an action or state of the subject of that verb.

REM. 4. The verbs to wish or desire, vōlo, nōlo, mālo; cūpio, opto, stūdeo, have a twofold construction:—the infinitive without a subject-accusative is used after them, when the subject remains the same; and when followed by esse, hābēri, etc., the predicate-noun or adjective is in the nominative;—but the accusative with the infinitive is used when the subject is changed, or when a reflexive pronoun of the same person follows. We say, therefore, vōlo erūdītus fieri, and on the other hand, vōlo te erūdītum fieri, and vōlo me erūdītum fieri. So, Vōlo is esse, quem tu me esse vōluisti. Cic. Cūpio me esse clemētem, cūpio— me non dissolūtum vidēri. Id.; or, omitting the pronoun, cāpio esse clemens nec dissolūtus vidēri.—Omnis hōmīnes qui sese stūdent prastāre cēteris animālibus, etc. Sall.

NOTE 4. Volo is used with the present infinitive passive; as, Me amāri vōlo, I wish to be beloved; hoc vōlīm intelligi, I wish this to be understood; and also with the infinitive perfect passive to denote the eager desire that something should be instantly accomplished; as, Lēgātī quod erant appellātī sūperbius, Cōrīnthum patres vestri—extinctum esse vōluerunt. Cic.; but it occurs most frequently with the omission of esse; as, hoc factum vōlo; nunc illos commōntos vōlīm: so, patriam extinctam cūpit.

NOTE 5. The nominative with the infinitive after verbs of saying, perceiving, etc. (§ 272), is rare even in poetry, and is an imitation of the Greek idiom, which requires the nominative with the infinitive when the same subject remains; as, Phāseus ille, quem vidētis, hospites, ait fuisse nāvium cēlerrimus. Catull. Quia rēstīti Ajax esse Jovis nēpos, instead of se esse Jovis nēpōtem. Ovid. Sensit mēdīos dēlapsus in hostes, instead of se dēlapsum esse. Virg.

THE INFINITIVE WITH A SUBJECT-ACCUSATIVE.

§ 272. The infinitive with a subject-accusative follows verbs of saying, thinking, knowing, perceiving, and the like; as,

Vidēbat, id non posse fieri, He saw that that could not be done. Nep. Sentit animus, se suā vi, non dīcend, mōvēri. Cic. Audivi te vēnīre. Me in ejus potestate dixi fore. Id. Affirmant nullum jacere animos. Liv. Sæpe venit ad aures meas, te istud nimis crebro dicere. Cic. Eam pugnam ad Pērsiam pugnātam (esse), quidam auctores sunt. Liv.

NOTE 1. This rule includes all such verbs and phrases as denote the exercise of the external senses and intellectual faculties, or the communication of thought to others; as, audio, video, sentio, animadverto, cognosco, intelligo, percipio, disco, scio, nescio, censeo, spero, despēro, cōgito, jūdico, crēdo, arbitror, pūto, optinor, dūco, statuo, mēmīni, recorder, oblitiscor, optinō est, spes est, etc.;—dīco, trādo, prōdo, scribo, rēfēro, narro, sumo, confirmo, nēgo, ostendo, indicō, dūceo, certīorem faciō, demonstrō, pērhībēo, prōmittō, pollicēor, spondeo, etc.; but with most of these a different construction often occurs. See § 273.

NOTE 2. The propositions, whose subjects are thus put in the accusative and their verbs in the infinitive, are those which are directly dependent on the verbs of saying and perceiving. Respecting the clauses inserted in such dependent propositions, see § 266, 1.

NOTE 3. (a.) When a relative clause inserted in a proposition containing the accusative with the infinitive, has the same verb as the proposition in which it is inserted, but such verb is not repeated, the noun which is the subject of the relative clause is also put by attraction in the accusative; as, Te suspīcor eisdem rēbus, quibus me ipsum, commōvēri. If the verb is expressed we must say, eisdem rēbus commōvēri, quibus (ēgo) ipse commōveor. So, also, in inserted relative clauses where the verb, if expressed, would be in the subjunctive, (see § 266, 2.); as, (Verres) aiebat se tantīdem astīmasse, quanti Sacerdōtem, for quanti Sacerdos astīmasset. Cic. Confutētur se in eā parte fuisse quā te, quā virum omni laude dignum patrem tuum. Id.

(b.) The same is the case with the particle quam after a comparative, see § 266, R. 5, (a.) But sometimes when quam connects a clause to a preceding proposition containing the accusative with the infinitive, the same construction follows that precedes quam, even when the verb of the latter clause is expressed; as, Nonne tibi affirmāvī quidvis me pōtius perpassūrum, quam ex līdīā ad bellum civile me exītrūm; instead of quam exīrem or quam ut exīrem. Cic.

(c.) In long speeches in the oratio obliqua, relative clauses, having a verb of their own which should properly be in the subjunctive, are put in the accusative with the infinitive, if the relative clause is not subordinate to the one with the infinitive, and which is governed by a verb of saying or perceiving, but is rather coördinate with it; in which case the relative is equivalent to the demonstrative with et; as, Nam illorum urbem ut prœpugnaculum oppositum esse barbaris, apud quam jam bis classes regias fecisse naufragium; for et apud eam jam bis, etc.—In Livy and Tacitus the same construction sometimes occurs even after conjunctions; as after quum in the sense of 'while,' see § 268, 5, R. 8; after quamquam on account of its absolute signification, see § 198, 4, and after quia.

NOTE 4. The personal pronouns, which, with the other moods, are expressed only when they are emphatic, must be always expressed in the accusative with the infinitive. The verbs 'to promise' and 'to hope' are in English usually joined with the infinitive present without a pronoun, but in Latin not only is the pronoun expressed, but the infinitive which follows is in the future; as, 'He promised to come,' is in Latin, Prœmisit se venturum (scil. esse, see § 270, R. 3). But the infinitive present sometimes occurs after these verbs; as, Pollicentur obsequia dare, Cæs. B. G. 4, 21; and the pronoun is occasionally omitted, see § 239, R. 2 and 3.

REMARK 1. When ambiguity would arise from the subject and the object of the verb being both in the accusative, the passive infinitive is substituted for the active, by which means the subject is put in the ablative, or in the accusative with per; as, Ne fando quidem auditum est, crœdœdulum violatum esse ab Ægyptio; instead of Ægyptium crœdœdulum violasse. Cic.

REM. 2. After verbs of saying, thinking, etc., the conjunction that is omitted in translating from English into Latin, and the subject of the dependent clause is put in the accusative, and its verb in the infinitive.

REM. 3. The accusative with the infinitive is sometimes rendered into English by a similar form; as, Si vis me flere, If you wish me to weep. Hor.; but the dependent clause is more frequently connected to the verb of saying, etc., by the conjunction that, and the infinitive translated by the indicative or potential mood; as, Sentimus nœvem esse albam, We perceive that snow is white. Cic. Sometimes the dependent clause is annexed to the other without the conjunction; as, Crœdunt se negligi, They think they are neglected. Ter.

REM. 4. A present infinitive corresponds to the imperfect indicative, when with an accusative it follows a preterite tense; as, Dixit Cœsarem venire, He said that Cœsar was coming. Cæs. In like manner the perfect infinitive with an accusative after a preterite tense corresponds to the pluperfect indicative; as, Dixit Cœsarem venisse, He said that Cœsar had come. See § 268, 2.

REM. 5. The present infinitive, after verbs of sense, is often equivalent to the present participle; as, Surgere videt lunam, He sees the moon (to rise) rising. Virg. Arma rutilare vident. Id. Vidēbis collucere faces. Id. Nec Zephyros audis spirare? Do you not hear the zephyrs blowing? Id. Sape hoc majores natu dicere audivi. Cic. The two constructions are sometimes united; as, Medium video discendere cœlum, pâlantesque pôlo stellas. Virg.

REM. 6. The subject-accusative after verbs of saying, showing, and believing; as, dico, nêgo, trãdo, fêro, mêmoro, narro, nuntio, pœrhîbeo, prœdo, scribo, dēmonstro, ostendo, arguo, crêdo, pûto, existimo, and the like, and also after jubeo, cœto, and prôhibeo, is regarded also as the accusative of the object after these verbs; and hence such verbs are used also in the passive, the accusative of the active voice becoming, as usual, the nominative of the passive. This is especially the case when their subject is indefinite; as, Dicunt (they or people say) me virum prôbum esse, or dicor vir prôbus esse. So, Vêlîmur hoc facere, instead of, Nos hoc facere vêtant. Instead also of the impersonal videtur (it appears) followed by the infinitive with its subject-accusative, it is common to say personally, videor, vidêris, etc., with the infinitive; as, videor errasse, it appears that I have erred.

INFINITIVE AND SUBJUNCTIVE CLAUSES.

§ 273. When the particle that, in English, introduces a clause denoting a purpose, object, or result, it is a sign of the subjunctive in Latin, and is to be expressed by ut, etc.; but otherwise it is usually the sign of the accusative with the infinitive. Cf. §§ 262 and 272.

1. (a.) Verbs of endeavoring and resolving take after them the infinitive and more rarely the subjunctive, when the subject remains the same; but when the subject is changed, they take the subjunctive only.

NOTE 1. Such are stātuo, constituo, dēcerno, tento, lāboro, pēro, mēdītor, cāro, nītor, contendo, consilium cōpio, ānīmum or in ānīmum indāco. Cf. § 271, N. 1. After spērāram do, I exert myself, id, hoc, or illud āgo, I endeavor, nīlūl antiquius hābeo or dūco quān, nothing is of more importance to me, and videō for cāro, the subjunctive is almost exclusively used.

(b.) Verbs of effecting are construed with ut or ne and the subjunctive.

NOTE 2. Such are fācio, effīcio, perfīcio, evīnco, pervīnco, impetro, assēquor, consūquor, etc. But fācēre 'to effect' occurs in Cic. Brut. 38, in connection with the accusative and infinitive passive.

NOTE 3. Fācio with ut is also used as a periphrasis for the indicative; as, Invītus quādam fēci, ut L. Flāminium e sēdātū ejīcerem, for invītus ejīci. Cic.—Fac, 'suppose' or 'granting,' and effīcēre, 'to prove,' take the accusative with the infinitive; but the passive efficitur, 'it follows,' takes also the subjunctive.—Fācēre, 'to introduce' or 'represent,' is joined with a present or perfect participle; as, Lālium et Scipionem fāclimus admirantes. Cic. In the passive the accusative also with the infinitive is found, there being no present participle; as, Isocrātem Plāto laudāri fācit a Socrāte. Cic.

2. Verbs signifying to request, to demand, to admonish, to advise, to encourage, to command, and the like, both when the subject remains the same and when it is changed, are followed by the subjunctive with ut or ne, and only rarely by the infinitive.

NOTE 4. (a.) Such are rōgo, oro, prēcōr, pēto; posco, postūlo, flāgitō; mōneo, admōneo, commōneo, hortor, cōhortor, exhortor, suādeo, persuādeo, instīto, (I instruct), impello, cōgo, mando, prāscribo, edīco, dēcerno, lēm do, censeo, perpello, excīto, inācto, impēro, etc.; as, Te non hortor solum, sed etiam oro, ut tōta mente in rempūblicam incumbas. Cic.

(b.) In the poets and later prose writers the infinitive more frequently follows those verbs without any difference of meaning. The poets even use the infinitive to express a purpose; as, Prōteus pēcus ēgit allos visēre montes. Hor.

(c.) Nuntio, scribo, mitto, and even dico, are followed by the subjunctive, when they imply an injunction or intention that something should be done; as, Hec ut fācias, scribo. Cic.

(d.) Jūbeo and vēto commonly take the accusative with the infinitive, but sometimes the subjunctive with or rarely without ut. Sometimes, with the infinitive, the person to whom the command is given is omitted, especially when it is either obvious from the nature of the command or indefinite; as, Castra mūnīre jūbet, scil. milītes. Cæs. Lex recte fācēre jūbet, scil. hōmīnes. Cic. With the subjunctive the dative of the person sometimes follows jūbeo; as, Britānnico jussit, exsurgēret. Tac.—Impēro is sometimes followed by the accusative with the infinitive passive; and so also is censeo, I vote, or, I ordain. The latter is often construed with the participle in dus with esse expressed or understood; as, Curthāgīnem dēlendā censeo.

(e.) Moneo and admoneo, 'I remind,' and persuadeo, 'I convince,' take the accusative with the infinitive.

3. (a.) In the oratio obliqua, the construction of the accusative with the infinitive, is exchanged for that of the subjunctive, to denote possibility, liberty, duty, etc.; as,

Virginius unum Ap. Claudium legum expertem esse aiebat: respicerent tribunal homines castellum omnium scelerum. Liv.

(b.) On the contrary, when the subjunctive has been used after a verb of requesting, commanding, etc., the construction often passes into that of the accusative with the infinitive; the verb of saying being considered as implied in the verb of requesting, etc.; as, Orabat ne se et parricidam liberam aversarentur: sibi vitam filia sua cariorem fuisse, si.... Liv. Cf. § 270, R. 2, (b.)

4. (a.) Verbs which denote willingness, unwillingness, permission, and necessity, commonly take the infinitive, or the accusative with the infinitive, but sometimes the subjunctive.

NOTE 5. Such are velo, nolo, malo, opto, permitto, patior, sino, concedo, licet, prohibeo, oportet, and necesse est. Cf. § 271, R. 4. Volo ut is used to express a strong emphasis. Nolo is not construed with the subjunctive.

(b.) An infinitive passive without a subject is sometimes used with oportet; as, Non oportuit relictas, scil. esse ancillas. Ter. Ut ut erat, mansum tamen oportuit, scil. esse. Id. Non putabant de tali viro suspicionibus oportere judicari. Nep.

(c.) Some other verbs which regularly take the accusative with the infinitive after them, are occasionally followed by the subjunctive.

5. Quod, 'that,' commonly with the indicative, introduces a substantive clause containing the explanation or ground of the predicate or of some other word in the principal clause.

REMARK. The subjunctive follows quod in those cases only in which the clause expresses the view or sentiment of some other person than the writer or speaker. Cf. § 266, 3.

Quod is used:—

(1.) After such expressions as bene, male, prudenter facio; bene, male fit; venit, accidit, and the like; propterea, mitto; and generally adde, accidit, etc.; as, Bene facis, quod me adjuvas.

(2.) To introduce the explanation of a noun, pronoun, or pronominal adverb in the principal clause; as, Magnum beneficium est nativus, quod necesse est mori.

(3.) After verbs signifying an affection of the mind, and the outward expression of such feeling; and also after verbs of praising, censuring, accusing, and thanking.

NOTE 6. Such are gaudeo, delector, gratum, or facundum est mihi, angor, doleo, agere, molesto, or gratiter fero, succenseo, penitet, miror, admiror, glorior, gratior, gratias ago, queror, indignor, and others of similar meaning; as, Scipio saepe querebatur, quod omnibus in rebus homines diligentiores essent, ut, etc. Cic. Gaudeo quod te interpellavi. Id. Quod spiratis, quod vocem mittitis, quod formas hominum habetis, indignantur. Liv. Cato mirari se aiebat, quod non rideret haruspices, haruspiceum quum videret. Cic.

NOTE 7. After those verbs which express the feeling of joy, grief, etc.; as, gaudeo, doleo, miror, the accusative with the infinitive is more commonly found, but those which denote the outward expression of such feeling are more commonly construed with quod; but sometimes this distinction is reversed. Gratior is commonly joined with quod.

NOTE 8. A purely objective proposition is expressed by quod only when it depends upon addo, (generally in the imperative adde), or upon fácio joined with an adverb; as, Addo quod púbes tibi crescit omnes. Hor. Adde huc quod mercem sine fácis gestat. Id. Fécit hūmāniter Lícínus, quod ad me vespéri vénit. Cic. In all other cases the infinitive is employed in purely objective propositions.

6. By the infinitive, with or without a subject-accusative, a proposition is expressed as a thought, so that it resembles an abstract noun; by quod, with the indicative or the subjunctive, it is represented simply as a fact. To the latter is frequently joined hoc, id, illud, istud, or huc, etc.; as, Illud quodque nobis accédit incommódum, quod M. Jūnius abest. Cic. Huc accédēbat, quod, etc. Sall. Quod generally refers to past time, and hence it is preferable to say, Grátissimum mihi est, quod ad me tua mánu scripsisti; but with the infinitive, Grátissimum mihi est te bene válere.

(a.) Quod, with the indicative, in the sense of as to, or with regard to, is used at the beginning of a sentence, especially in letters, in repeating an expression of a person for the purpose of answering it; as, Quod autem me Agamemnánum amulári pútas, falleris. Nep. Quod scribis te velle scire, qui sit reipúblicas státus: summa dissensio est. Cic. Sentences thus introduced by quod are in no grammatical connection with the verb that follows them. See § 206, (14.)

(b.) Quod is used in explanatory or periphrastic propositions which refer to a preceding demonstrative pronoun, as hoc, id, etc., unless such pronoun be added pleonastically, in the nominative or accusative, to verbs governing the accusative with the infinitive; as, Mihi quidem videntur hómīnes hac re maxime belluis præstare, quod loqui possunt. Cic.

NOTE 9. The construction of the infinitive resembles, in the following particulars, that of a noun in the singular number and neuter gender:—

(a.) Like a noun, it may have an adjective or pronoun agreeing with it; as, Tótum hoc philósophári displicet. Cic. Quum vivere ipsum turpe sit nobis. Id. Me hoc ipsum nihil ágere delectat. Id. Meum intelligere nullā pecuniā vendo. Petr. See § 205, R. 8.

(b.) It may be followed by a limiting genitive; as, Cūjus non dīficāre fuit vincēre. Val. Max.

(c.) It may be either the subject or object of a verb. See §§ 209, R. 3, (5,) and 229, R. 5. It may also be used after neuter verbs, like an accusative, depending on a preposition understood; as, Te accēpisse meas lītēras gaudeo. Ter. See §§ 232, (2,) and 273, 5.

(d.) It is also used like a predicate-nominative; as, Vidēre est perspicēre aliquid. Cic. See § 210.

(e.) It may, like a genitive, limit the signification of an adjective or noun. See § 270, R. 1.

(f.) It may, like an accusative, depend on a preposition; as, Aristo et Pyrrho inter optime válere et gravissime egrotāre, nihil prorsus dicēbant intēresse. Cic. Quod crimen dicis præter amasse meum? Ovid. Inveniet nū sibi legātum, præter plorāre. Hor.

(g.) It is used also like an ablative; as, Audito rēgem in Siciliā tendēre. Sall.

(h.) Sometimes, also, especially in the poets, it denotes a purpose, like a participle in duo, (see § 274, R. 7.); as, Loricā donat habēre viro. Virg.; or like a dative of the end, (see § 227.)

PARTICIPLES.

§ 274. 1. Participles are followed by the same cases and constructions as their verbs; as,

Quidam, poeta nōminatus, A certain one, called a poet. Cic. Catūlōrum obliuiscena, The lioness forgetful of her whelps. Virg. Fāventes rēbus Carthāginiensium, Favoring the interests of the Carthaginians. Liv. Tendens ad sidēra palmas. Virg. Accūsātus rei cōpitātis. Cic. Primū dictē mīhi summū dicendē Cāmēnd. Hor. Omīna doctus. Stat. Cāsus dñbes viātra mētrinos. Id. Artitāri ardōre montes. Ovid. Parcendū est tēnēris. Juv. Udendū est etāte. Ovid. L. Brūtus arcens rēditu tyrānnū, in prālio concidit. Cic.

2. The present, perfect, and future active participles, denote respectively an action which is present, past, or future, in reference to the time of the verb with which they are connected; as,

Stimul hoc dicens attollit se. Virg. Tum ad Thrāseam in hortis āgentem missus est. Tac. Turnum fugientem hōc terra vidēbit? Virg. Qui missus ab Argis Itālā cōsēderat urbē. Id. Lāmia mūnere cōclūtātis perfunctus, pētīt prātorum. Cic. Jussus cum fide pōnas luam. Hor. Jūvenis mēdicos mōritūrus in hoīes irruit. Virg. Pētītūrus injicit eīs in agmen. Id. Illā tibi ventūra bella expēdiet. Id.

NOTE. The participle expresses the action or state of the verb, and also marks its complete or incomplete state or condition. Cf. § 144, 1-3. Except, however, in deponent verbs, the Latin language has no active participle denoting a completed action, equivalent to the English 'having written,' nor any passive participle denoting a state of suffering still going on, equivalent to the English present participle 'being loved.'

REMARK 1. The present participle, particularly that of the verb eo, sometimes denotes that which is about to be done; as, Interclāsīt hiems, et terruīt Austēr euntes, as they were on the point of going. Virg. Nec nos via fallit euntes. Id.

REM. 2. (a.) The present participle, also, sometimes denotes a purpose; as, Ibant, orāntes vēniā, to sue for favor.... Virg. Eurypylum scitāntem orācūla Phābi mittimus. Id. (b.) It is also used to express a state or condition, where, in English, a substantive is employed with a preposition; as, ignōrans, from ignorance; mētuens, from fear; cōsulātum pētens, in his suit for the consulship; omne mālum nascens fūcile opprimitur,—in its origin.

REM. 3. (a.) The perfect participle passive, especially in the poets, often denotes the result of a past action, and thus supplies the place of a present participle passive; as, Nōtus evolat piceā tectus cāligine, covered with pitchy darkness. Ovid. Cf. Virg. Æn. 1, 480; 2, 277; 4, 72, 589; 5, 118, 708; 6, 835; Georg. 1, 204. It is often to be translated by a present active participle; as, Mīnu pectus percussa dōcōrum, flāventesque abscissa cōmas, i. e. percūtiens, abscindens. Virg. Tunsē pectōra palmis. Id. So, also, sōlitus, ausus, fissus, and the perfect participles of deponent verbs; as, Longum cantu sōlāta lābōrem. Id. Vox audītū fractos sōnitū imitāta tībārū. Id. Dicitiācūs Cāsdrēm complexus, obsecrāre capit. Cæs. Concrētōs sanguine crines gērens. Virg. Tonsis in valūbus, i. e. quæ tondentur. Id.

(b.) The perfect participle of a preceding verb is often used in a succeeding clause, to express the completion of an action; as, Exercitū fundit fugatque, fūsum persequitur. Liv. This idiom frequently occurs in Ovid.

REM. 4. Hābeo, with perfect participles denoting knowledge and determination; as, cognitum, perspectum, perceptum, comprēhensum, explorātum, stātiūtum, constitūtum, dēlibērātum, persuāsum mīhi hābeo, etc., forms a periphrasis, like the passive verb in English, and equivalent to cognōci, perspexi, percēpi, etc., instead of the verb of the participle; as, Clōdii dñimū spectrum cognitum hābeo; for perspexi, etc., I perceive, know. Persuāsum mīhi hābeo and persuāsistum hābeo are used only in the neuter gender and with an accusative with the infinitive in the sense of mīhi persuāsi or persuāsum mīhi est. When hābeo with any other participle than those above indicated is used, it expresses more than the ordinary perfect active; as, Quod me hortāris ut absolam; hābro absolūtā suāve ēpos ad Cāsdrēm; i. e. I have it ready. Cic. Do, reddo, cāro, lūeo, possideo, and missum facio, are sometimes so construed with participles; as, Missam iram faciet, for mittet. Ter. Hostes victos dare, for vincere. Sall.

REM. 5. (a.) The passive participles may supply the place of a verbal noun in io or us, the perfect being employed to represent an action as completed, and the future when it is conceived as still incomplete; as, Ante Rōmam conditam, Before the building of Rome. Cic. Consilia urbis delendæ, Plans for the destruction of the city. Id. See § 275, II. With the limitations about to be made in regard to the nominative, this construction is used in all the cases, and even when they are governed by the prepositions, ad, ante, ob, post, propter; ab and ex; as, Hæc lūeræ rēctitatæ magnum luctum fecerunt, The reading of this letter. Liv. Tarentum captum, The taking of Tarentum. Ob receptum Hannibalem, On account of the reception of Hannibal. Sibi quisque cæsi regis expetebat decus, The glory of killing, or, of having killed the king. Propter Africam dōmītam. Eutrop. Ante Epaminondam nātum. Nep. Post Christum nātum. Ab conditā urbe ad liberatam. Liv. The oblique cases only of participles in dus are used in this manner as the nominative denotes necessity, (see Rem. 8,) and even the perfect participle is not thus used in the nominative by Cicero.

(b.) The neuter of the perfect passive participle without a noun is used by Livy, as the subject of a proposition; as, Tentatum per dictatorem, ut ambo patricii consules crearentur, rem ad interregnum perduxit: i. e. the attempt, or the fact of the attempt being made by the dictator. Compare a similar use of this participle in the ablative, § 257, R. 9, (1.) (c.)

(c.) The English 'without' with a verbal substantive; as, 'without writing, without having waited,' etc., is expressed in Latin by means of a negative noun, adjective or particle connected with a participle; as, Cæsar exercitum nunquam per insidiōsa itinera duxit, nisi perspiculātus locorum situs, without having examined the localities. This form occurs often with the ablative absolute; as, Athēnienses non expectātō auxilio adversus ingentem Persarum exercitum in prælium egrēdiuntur, without waiting for assistance. So, nullā præstitūtā diē, Without fixing any time. Cic. Miserum est nihil perficientem angī. Id.

REM. 6. (a.) The participle in rus, especially with verbs of motion, often denotes intention or purpose; as, Ad Jovem Ammonem pergit consulturus de origine suā, He goes to Jupiter Ammon, to consult respecting his origin. Just.

(b.) It is also used where in English a clause connected by since, when, although, etc., is employed; as, Plura locuturos abire nos iussit, When or although we intended to say more. Herculem Germani, itari in prælium cānunt. Tac. Hence it is sometimes used, though not by Cicero, to express the inference from a hypothetical proposition; as, Egrēditur castris Rōmānus, vallum invāsurus, nā cōpia pugnæ fieret. And with the repetition of the preceding verb; as, Dedit mihi quantum maxime potuit, daturus amplius, si potuisset, i. e. ac dedisset amplius. Plin. Ep.

REM. 7. (a.) The participle in dus, also, denotes a purpose passively, when joined with verbs signifying to give, to deliver, to agree for, to have, to receive, to undertake, etc. Such are do, trādo, tribuo, attribuo, mando, mitto, permitto, concēdo, redimo, conduco, loco, habeo, accipio, suscipio, relinquo, curo, depono, rogo; as, Testamentum tibi trādit legendum, He delivers his will to you to read. Hor. Attribuit nos trucidandos Cēthēgo. Cic. Quod attendum accipēris, reddito. Id. Cōnon muros dirutos a Lysandro rēficiendos cūrāvi,—ordered them to be restored. Nep.

(b.) But the same meaning may be expressed actively by means of ad and the gerund; as, Cæsar oppidum ad diripiendum militibus concessit.—The poets sometimes use the infinitive active for the same purpose; as, Tristitiam et mētus trādum prōtervis in märe Caspiū portāre ventis. Hor. In prose such use of the infinitive is of exceedingly rare occurrence; as, Bibere dare. Cic.

REM. 8. (a.) The participle in dus, when agreeing with the subject of a sentence, has the signification of necessity or propriety; sometimes, though rarely, except in later writers, that of possibility; as,

Is vènerandus a nobis et còlendus est, He should be worshipped and honored by us. Cic. Délenda est Carthago, Carthage must be destroyed. Cato. Hæc spèranda fuèrunt. Virg. So with est used impersonally; as, Utrum pàce nobis an bello caset útendum. Cic.

(b.) Sometimes, also, when not agreeing with the subject of a sentence, it has this signification; as, Facta narràbas dissimulanda tibi, You were relating facts which you should have concealed. Ovid. A. L. Brúto principe hujus maxime conservandi gèneris et nómínis. Cic.

REM. 9. The participle in dus, in its oblique cases, supplies the place of a present participle of the passive voice, to denote a continued or incomplete action; as, Occupátus sum in lítèris scribendis, in writing letters; literally, in letters which are being written. See § 275, II.—So, also, in the poets both in the nominative and oblique cases; as, Triginta magnos volvendis mensibus orbes impèrio explèbit. Virg. Volvenda dies. Id. Cf. Volventibus annis. Id.

REM. 10. After participles in dus, the person by whom a thing must be done, is put in the dative, but in a few passages even of Cicero it is found in the ablative with ab. See § 225, III.

REM. 11. The neuter of the participle in dus, joined with a tense of esse in the periphrastic conjugation (see § 184, 3,) retains the signification of necessity; as, Audendum est, We must venture. In early writers and sometimes also in the poets, an accusative of the object is joined with this neuter, if the verb is transitive; as, Nunc pàcem òrandum, nunc—arma repònendum, et bellum extitiale còvendum. Sil. But in classical Latin such accusative is generally changed to the nominative, and the participle is made to agree with it in gender and number. Thus, instead of virtutem laudandum est, we usually find virtus laudanda est. The accusative in this connection is used by Cicero in only two passages. Utendum est with the ablative occurs more than once in Cicero; as, Quum suo cuique jùdicio sit útendum.

REM. 12. In classical prose the participle in dus never has the signification of possibility, except when joined with vix; as, Vix optandum nobis vidèbatur. Cic. Vix erat crèdendum, i. e. vix crèdi pòtèrat. Later writers use it in this sense with negative particles, and at a later period it was used with still more frequency in the sense of possibility as well as in that of necessity.

3. (a.) A participle is often employed, instead of a verb, in a conditional, explanatory, adversative, relative, or other dependent clause; as,

Cúrio, ad fòcum sèdenti (as he was sitting) magnum auri pondus Samnites attulèrunt. Cic. Tridui viam progressi, rursus révertèrunt; for, quum progressi essent. Cæsar. Diòngysius tyrannus, Syracùsius expulsus, Còrinthi puèros docèbat. Cic. Diòngysius, cultros mètuens tonsòrios, candenti carbòne sibi adurèbat capillum. Id. Risus interdum ita repènte èrumpit, ut eum cùpientis tènere nèqueamus. Id. Cicónie àbituræ congrégantur in loco certo. Plin.

NOTE 1. If the participle refers to a noun not contained in the leading proposition, it is put with that noun in the ablative absolute. See § 267, R. 8.

NOTE 2. (a.) The English clauses most frequently expressed in Latin by means of participles are such as are connected by relatives or by as, when, after, although, since, because, etc.; as, Nemo observat lánam nisi labòrantem. Sen. Ut vòlulus, sic ànimus, se non videns, alia cernit,—though not perceiving itself. Cic. Servilius Ahala Spùrium Matium, regnum appètentem, intèrmittit,—because he was aspiring to the sovereignty. Cic.—(b.) When a participle is connected with a relative or interrogative it can only be translated by a circumlocution; as, Non sunt ea bòna dicenda, quibus abundantem necesse misèrissimum,—which one may possess in abundance, and still be very miserable. Cic. Sèndus absurdum esse dicèbat, ignòrare règem, quid spèrans aut pètens cènèrit,—with what hope or request he had come. Liv.

(b.) When two verbs are in English connected by and, and the actions denoted by them are regarded as simultaneous, one of them may be expressed in Latin by the present participle; as, He sits and holds his lute, Ille (Arion) sēdēns cithāram tēnet. Ovid. Simul hoc dicens attollit in ægrum se fēmur. Virg. i. e. hoc dicit et attollit. But if one of the actions precede the other, the perfect participle must be used; as, Cæsar attacked and defeated the enemy, Cæsar hostes aggressus fūgāvit. Submersas obrue puppes, i. e. Submerge et obrue. Virg.—When the English clause would be connected by although, the participle is often followed by tamen. Later writers in such case join the particles quamquam, quantvis, etiam and vel with the participle itself; as, Cæstrum milites, quantvis rēcūsantem ultro in Africam sunt secuti. Suet.; and these are sometimes retained in the ablative absolute.—It is only in late Latin that participles are sometimes used in describing persons as possessing certain attributes, e. g. adstantes, audientes, for ii qui adstant, audiunt, i. e. the bystanders, hearers.

(c.) A participle is used with verbs signifying to represent and perceive, especially to see and hear, when the object is described or perceived in a particular state; as, Apelles pinxit Alexandrum Magnum fulmen tēnentem. Plin. In English the infinitive is often joined with verbs of seeing and hearing; as, Audiri te cānentem, I heard you sing. Audiri te cānere, would be, I heard that you sung. Vidēmus Polyphēnum vastā se mōle mōventem. Virg.

NOTE 3. In many cases, for want of a perfect participle active, and a present participle passive, this construction cannot be used. Thus, quon amāvisset cannot be exchanged for a participle corresponding with the English having loved. As the perfect participles of deponent verbs, however, have an active signification, they admit of the participial construction. The want of a perfect active participle may also be supplied by the perfect passive participle in the ablative absolute. See § 257, R. 5.

GERUNDS AND GERUNDIVES.

§ 275. I. Gerunds are governed like nouns, and are followed by the same cases as their verbs; as, Mētus pārendi sibi, Fear of obeying him. Sall. Parcendo victis, By sparing the vanquished. Liv. Eff'ror stūdio patres vestros videndi, I am transported with a desire of seeing your fathers. Cic. Petendi consulatū grātiā. Sall. Vēnit ad rēcipiendū pecūnias. Varr.

REMARK 1. The gerund is the same in form as the oblique cases of the neuter singular of participles in dus, but it has the meaning of the active voice. It is sometimes translated by the present participle with a preposition, and sometimes by a present infinitive active; as, Consilium Lacedæmonem occūpandi, A design of occupying, or to occupy, Lacedæmon. Liv.

REM. 2. The gerund is sometimes, though rarely, used in a passive sense; as, Spes restituendi nulla erat,—of being restored. Nep. Athēnas erūdiendi grātiā missus,—for the purpose of being instructed. Just. Ante dōmandum. Virg. Ades ad impērandum. Cic.

REM. 3. The gerund is in its nature a verbal noun, having only the genitive, dative, ablative, and, after a preposition, the accusative. In its signification it corresponds with the English present participle when used as a verbal noun. Hence, in the oblique cases, it supplies the place of a declinable present infinitive active; but in the accusative there is this difference between the infinitive used as an accusative and the gerund, that the infinitive has simply the power of an abstract noun, whereas the gerund expresses a real action; as, Multum intērest inter dāre et accipere. Sen. Non solum ad discendū propensū sumus, sed etiam ad docendū. Cic.

II. When the object of an active verb is to be expressed, the participle in dus is commonly used in preference to the gerund; the object taking the case in which the gerund, if used, would have been put, and the participle agreeing with it.

Thus, to express 'the design of writing a letter,' which, with the aid of the gerund, would be represented in Latin by Consilium scribendæ epistolæ, the participle in dus is commonly substituted for the gerund: and since, in this example, the gerund, (scribendæ) is in the genitive, the rule requires that, in substituting the participle for the gerund, the object of the gerund (epistolæ) should also be put in the genitive, and that the participle (scribendus) should agree with it in gender, number, and case. Hence with the participle the expression is, Consilium scribendæ epistolæ. Between the two forms of construction there is no difference of signification. So, Consilia urbis delendæ (Cic.), for urbem delendi, Plans for destroying the city. Rēparandārum classium causā (Suet.), for rēparandi classes. Perpetiendū lābōri idōneus. Colum. Ad dēfendendam Rōmā ab oppugnandā Cāpuā dūces Rōmānos abstrāhēre. Liv.

REMARK 1. The same construction is used with the future passive participles of utor, fruor, fungor, pōtior, and rarely of mēdeor, as these verbs were originally followed by the accusative; as, Ætas ad hæc ütendā idōnea. Ter. Iustitia fruentæ causā. Cic. In mūnere fungendo. Id. Hostes in spem pōtiundōrum castrōrum vērārant. Cæs. Aquæ sālūbritate mēdendisq; corpōribus nōbīles. Vell.

REM. 2. When a participle is thus used for a gerund, it is called a gerundive, and is usually translated like a gerund. The gerundive cannot be substituted for the gerund, where ambiguity would arise from the gender not being distinguishable. It should therefore not be used when the object of the gerund is a neuter pronoun or adjective; as, Aliquid faciendæ ratio (Cic.), not dūcījus. Artem et vērā et falsā dījūcandā (Id.), not vērōrum dījūcandōrum: because it would not be known whether dūcījus and vērōrum were masculine or neuter. It is to be remarked, also, that the change of the gerund into the gerundive is less frequent in some writers than in others.

III. Examples of the construction of gerunds, in each of their cases, have been already given, among other nouns, under the heads Genitive, Dative, Accusative, and Ab-lative. The following remarks specify in what connections they are used: and when it is said that the gerundive is governed in any of the cases like the gerund, it will of course be understood of the noun which is limited by a gerundive.

REMARK 1. The genitive of gerunds and gerundives may follow either nouns or relative adjectives; as,

Amor habendī. Cic. Patriam spes videndī. Virg. Nam habet nātūra, ut āliarū omnium rērum, sic vivendi mōdum. Cic. Barbāra consuetūdo hōmīnum immōlandōrum. Id. Postremo Cātīna dissimulandi causā aut sui expurgandi, in sēntentiā vēnit. Sall. Inita sunt consilia urbis delendæ, civium trucidandōrum, nōmīnis Rōmāni exstinguendī. Id. Venandī studiō. Cic. Certus eundī. Virg. Insuper nāvīgandī. Cæs. Pēritus civitātis regendū. Nep.

(1.) The nouns after which these genitives most frequently occur are amor, ars, causa, consilium, consuetudo, copia, cupiditas, dēsiderium, difficultas, finis, fācultas, forma, grātia, illēcebra, libido, lōcus, licentia, mōdus, māteria, mos, occasio, otium, pōtestas, rātio, spātium, spes, studium, tempus, ūsus, vēnia, vis, vōluntas.

NOTE 1. With these and other substantives the infinitive also may be used, when with a tense of sum they form a periphrasis for a verb which is followed by the infinitive, or supply the place of an adjective of which the infinitive is the subject; as, Quibus omnia hōnesta atq; inhōnesta vendēre mos erat, With whom it was a custom, or, who were accustomed. Sall. Tempus est ālire, It is time, i. e. tempestivum est, it is proper to go.

(2.) The relative adjectives, which most frequently take after them these genitives, are such as denote desire, knowledge, remembrance, and their contraries; as, avidus, cupidus, studiosus, peritus, imperitus, insuetus, certus, conscius, ignarus, rudis, etc. See § 218, R. 1, (8.)

NOTE 2. With the relative adjectives the infinitive is also joined poetically.

(3.) Instead of an accusative after the gerund, or a genitive plural with a gerundive, a noun or pronoun in the genitive plural is sometimes joined with the gerund; as, Exemplorum eligendi potestas, instead of exempla eligendi, or, exemplorum eligendorum. Cic. Earum rerum insititandi ratio. Id. Facultas agrorum condonandi. Cic. Nominandi istorum erit copia. Plant.

(4.) The pronoun tui and also the plurals vestri and sui, even when feminine, are joined with the masculine or neuter form of the gerundive in di; as, Quoniam tui videndi est copia. Plant. Non vereor, ne quis hoc me vestri adhortandi causa magnifice loqui existimet. Liv. In castra venerunt sui purgandi causa.—With the demonstrative pronouns, ejus, hujus, illius, the participle usually agrees, but in two passages of Terence ejus, though referring to a woman, has the participle in di, not in da; as, Ego ejus videndi cupidus recti consequor. Ter. Tui in the first example and ejus in the last are feminine.

(5.) By a Greek idiom the gerund and gerundive, after the verb sum, are sometimes found in the genitive denoting a tendency or purpose, with no noun or adjective on which they can depend; as, Rogium imperium initio conservandae libertatis fuerat. Sall. Sometimes esse in some form is to be supplied; as, Qua postquam gloriosa modo, neque belli patrandi cognovit, scil. esse. Id. Causa or gratia may sometimes be supplied. In some other cases, also, the word on which the gerund in di depends is not expressed, and the gerund seems to be used instead of the infinitive; as, Moneat provincialibus potentiam suam tali modo ostentandi, scil. facultas. Tac. Quum haberem in animo navigandi, scil. propositum. Cic.

REM. 2. The dative of gerunds and gerundives is used after adjectives which govern a dative (§ 222), especially after those which signify usefulness or fitness; and also after certain verbs and phrases, to denote a purpose; as,

Charta empirica est inutilis scribendo. Plin. Capessendae reipublicae hostilis. Tac. Ut nec triumphi accipiundo, nec scribae referendo sufficerent. Liv. Locus oppido condendo capere. Id. Non fuit consilium agrum colendo aut venando intentum civitatem agere. Sall. Tiberius quasi firmandae valetudini in Campaniam concessit. Tac. Quum solvendo aere alieno respublica non esset. Liv. Quum solvendo civitates non essent,—were insolvent. Cic.

(1.) The verbs and phrases upon which this dative most frequently depends are, studere, intentum esse, tempus impendere, tempus consumere or insumere, operam dare, sufficere, satis esse, deesse, esse, signifying to serve for, to be adequate to, and, in later writers, on verbs of motion.—The dative of the gerund after sum is usually supposed to depend on idoneus understood; but see § 227, R. 3.

(2.) The dative of the gerundive, denoting a purpose, is also used after names of office; as, Decemviri legibus scribendis, i. e. the ten commissioners for drawing up a code of laws. Liv. So, Comitia creandis decemviris. Id. Triumvros agro dando creat. Id.

(3.) A purpose is more commonly expressed by ad and the accusative of the gerund, or by a clause with ut, than by the dative; as, Pecus ad vescendum hominibus apta. Cic.

REM. 3. The accusative of gerunds and gerundives follows the prepositions ad, to, or inter, during or amid, and sometimes ante, circa, or ob; as,

Ad pœnitendum prœperat, qui cito jûdicat. Pub. Syr. Inter bibendum, While drinking. Just. Ad tolerandos facilius lăbôres. Quint. Ad castra facienda. Cic. Ob absolvendum. Id.

NOTE. The construction of the gerundive instead of the gerund almost invariably occurs here when the object of the gerund is to be expressed.

REM. 4. The ablative of gerunds and gerundives follows the prepositions a, (ab), de, e, (ex), or in; or it is used without a preposition, as the ablative of cause, manner, or means; as, Aristôtêlem non deterruit a scribendo. Cic. Ex assentando. Ter. Non videor a defendendis hōminibus discêdere. Cic. Crescit eundo. Virg. Rem quærunt mercătūris faciendis. Cic. Orătīonem Lătīnam lēgendis nostris efficies plēniorem. Id.

NOTE 1. This ablative also occurs, though rarely, after pro and cum; as, Pro cōpūlando. Plaut. Cum loquendo. Quint.

NOTE 2. Generally with the ablative of the means, and always with the ablative after a preposition, the gerund, when its object is to be expressed, is changed to the gerundive. In a few passages the ablative of the gerundive is differently construed; as, Nullum officium rēfērendā grātīā māgis nēcēssārium est, instead of rēlātīōne grātīa. § 256. Cic. Nec jam possidendis pūblicis agris contentos esse. § 244. Liv. Is finis fuit ulciscendā Germānici morte,—in avenging the death of Germanicus. Tac.; where the ablative seems to imply time. § 253.

SUPINES.

§ 276. Supines, like gerunds, are verbal nouns, having no other cases except the accusative and ablative singular. In certain connections they supply the place of the present infinitive; the supine in um having an active and the supine in u a passive signification. As in the case of gerunds, we are to regard their construction both as verbs and as nouns. As verbs we are to notice their government, as nouns, their dependence.

I. Supines in um are followed by the same cases as their verbs; as, Non Grātīs servitū mātribus ibo, I shall not go to serve Grecian matrons. Virg. Te id admōnitum vēnio. Plaut.

II. Supines in um follow verbs of motion, and serve to denote the purpose of the motion; as, Cūbitum discessimus. Cic. Ire dējectum mōnūmenta rēgis. Hor. Lēgātī vēnerunt questum injūrias, et res rēpētūtum. Liv. Quum spectātum ludos irēt. Nep. So after participles; as, Patriam dēfensum rēvocātus. Nep. Spectātum admissi. Hor.

NOTE. The construction of the supine in um, considered as a noun, is analogous to that of names of places in answer to the question 'whither?' (§ 237), the notion of purpose arising from its verbal character.

REMARK 1. Supines in um sometimes follow verbs which do not express motion; as, Do filiā nuptū. Ter. Vos ultū injūrias hortor. Sall.

REM. 2. The supine in um with eo literally signifies 'I go to do a thing,' and hence 'I intend,' or, 'am going to.' Instances of this use are found in Plautus and Terence and in the prose writers later than Cicero; as, Mea Glycērium, quid agis? cur te is perditum? Why are you going to destroy yourself? Plaut. Bōnūm prēmia ōreptum eunt. Sall. With eo the supine in um often forms a periphrasis equivalent to the same mood and tense of the verb from which the supine is formed; as, Ne bonos omnes perditum eant (Sall.), for perdant. Ereptum emitt (Id.), for eripiunt. Ultum iri (Tac.), for ultus est. Ultum ire injurias festinat, i. e. ulcisci. Sall.

REM. 3. The supine in um most frequently occurs with the infinitive iri, with which it forms the future infinitive passive; as, Brutum visum iri a me puto. Cic. In this construction the accusative properly depends upon the supine, and iri is used impersonally; 'I suppose that I am going to see Brutus.' § 184, 2, (a.) Its notion of futurity is derived from the proper signification of the active voice, as perditum iri, to go to destroy, the idea of intending passing easily into that of futurity.

REM. 4. But to express a purpose Latin writers in general prefer using a gerund or gerundive in the accusative with ad or in the genitive with causâ or gratiâ, a subjunctive clause with ut or qui, a present or future active participle, and sometimes poetically an infinitive. See § 275, R. 1, 2: §§ 262, 264, 274, and 271.

III. The supine in u is used to limit the meaning of adjectives signifying wonderful, agreeable, easy or difficult, worthy or unworthy, honorable or base, and a few others; as,

Mirabile dictu! Wonderful to tell, or to be told! Virg. Jucundum cognitu atque auditu. Pleasant to be known and heard. Cic. Res factu facilis. A thing easy to be done. Ter. Facilia inventu. Gell. Incredibile memoratu. Sall. Turpia dictu. Cic. Optimum factu. Id.

NOTE. The principal supines in u in common use are auditu, cognitu, dictu, factu, inventu, memoratu and natu, which occurs in the expressions, grandis, major, minor, maximus, and minimus natu. In magno natu, of an advanced age, and maximo natu filius, the eldest son, natu is the ablative of a verbal substantive, since neither gerunds nor supines are joined with adjectives.

REMARK 1. The principal adjectives, after which the supine in u occurs, are affabilis, arduus, asper, bonus, deformis, dignus, indignus, dulcis, durus, facilis, difficilis, facilis, gravis, honestus, horrendus, incredibilis, jucundus, injucundus, magnus, memorabilis, mollis, procellosus, pulcher, rarus, turpis, and utilis.

REM. 2. The supine in u is used also after the nouns fas, nefas, and opus; as, Hoc fas est dictu. Cic. Nefas dictu. Ovid. Dictu opus est. Ter.—In the following examples it follows a verb: Pudet dictu. Tac. Agr. 32. Dictu fastidiosa sunt. Val. Max. 9, 13, 2.

REM. 3. As the supine in u is commonly translated by a passive form, it is placed under the passive voice; but, in many cases, it may with equal or greater propriety be translated actively. As a noun, its construction may be referred to the ablative of limitation. § 250.

REM. 4. (a.) Instead of the supine in u, an infinitive, a gerund or gerundive with ad, or a verbal noun in the ablative, and sometimes in the dative or accusative, may be used; as, Ardua imitatu, ceterum cognosci utilia. Val. Max. Illud autem facile ad credendum est. Cic. Opus proscriptione dignum. Plin. Aqua potui jucunda. Id. Facilior ad intellectum atque imitationem. Quint. With opus est the perfect passive participle is often used instead of the supine in u; as, Opus est maturato. There is need of haste. Cf. § 243, R. 1.

(b.) The construction with ad and the gerund; as, res facilis ad intelligendum; or with sum and the infinitive active; as, facile est invenire, is used by the best writers after facilis, difficilis, and jucundus. The most common construction of dignus is with qui and the subjunctive, (§ 264, 9), but the poets and later prose writers have joined it with the infinitive passive.

ADVERBS.

§ 277. I. Adverbs modify or limit the meaning of verbs, adjectives, and sometimes of other adverbs; as, Bône mōnes, You advise well. Ter. Fortissime urgentes, Most vigorously pressing on. Plin. Māle narrando. Ter. Longe distmīlis. Cic. Valde bōne. Id.

REMARK 1. Adverbs may also modify nouns, when they are used as adjectives or participles, and accordingly denote a quality, or when a participle is understood. They are also joined to adjective pronouns, when their adjective-character predominates; and sometimes limit the meaning of a preposition; as, Pōpulus lāte rex, for lāte regnans,—ruling far and wide. Virg. Nihil admōdum, Nothing at all. Cic. Hōmo plāne noster,—entirely ours, that is, devoted to us. Id. Homērus plāne orātor. Id. Admōdum puella. Liv. Lāte tyrannus. Hor. Grātribus sūperne icibus conflictābantur, i. e. sūperne accidentibus. Tac. Mullārum circa ciuitātum, i. e. neighboring cities. Liv.

REM. 2. (a.) Most of the modifications made by adverbs may also be made by means of the various cases of nouns and adjectives, and many modifications may be made by these, for expressing which no adverbs are in use. In general those limitations which are most common can be expressed by adverbs; as, adpienter for cum adpientiā; hic for in hoc lōco; bōne for in bōno mōdo; nunc for hoc tempore.—(b.) The following are examples of other parts of speech used adverbially, viz. Nihil, 'in no way'; nonnihil, 'in some measure'; quidquam, 'at all'; āliquid, 'somewhat'; quid? 'why?'

REM. 3. A negative adverb, modifying another negative word, destroys the negation; as,

Non pārere nōluit, He was not unwilling to obey. Nep. Haud ignōra mīli, Not ignorant of evil. Virg. Haud nihil est, It is something. Ter. Nec hoc ille non vidit, And this he clearly perceived. Cic. So, nonnulli, some; nonnunquam, sometimes. Non, before a negative word, commonly heightens the affirmative sense, while it softens the expression; as, Hōmo non indoctus, i. e. hōmo sāne doctus. Non sēmel, i. e. sæpius; non ignōro, non nescio, non sum nescius, I know very well. Qui mortem in mālīs pōnit, non pōtest eam non timēre,—must needs fear it. Cic.

REM. 4. When the subject and predicate of a proposition are both modified by negative words, and also when the predicate contains two negatives, the proposition is affirmative; as,

Nemo non videt, Every one sees. Cic. Nēque hæc non evēnērunt, And this indeed took place. So, if both the antecedent and the predicate of a relative clause are negative, the proposition is affirmative; as, Nemo est, qui nesciat, Every body knows. Cic.

REM. 5. (a.) But in the case of non followed by ne—quidem, the two negatives do not destroy each other; as, Non fūgio ne hos quidem mōres; and when the negative leading proposition has subordinate subdivisions with nēque—nēque, nēve—nēve, or non—non, these negative particles are equivalent to aut—aut; as, Non me carminibus vincet, nec Ōrpheus, nec Linus. Virg. Nēmīnem, non re, non verbo, non vultu dēnique offēdi. Cic. Nullius rei nēque præs, nēque manceps factus est. Nep.

(b.) In a few passages, however, two negatives in Latin, as in Greek, strengthen the negation, and this exception appears to have been derived from the language of common life; as, Jura te non nocitūram hōmīni nēmīni. Plaut.

(c.) Nemo, nullus, nihil, and numquam have a different sense according as the non is placed before or after them; as, Non nemo, some one; nemo non, every one; non nulli, some; nullus non, every; non nihil, something; nihil non, every thing; non numquam, sometimes; numquam non, at all times. So, nusquam non, every where, but instead of nonnusquam, ālicubi is used.

REM. 6. (a.) Non is sometimes omitted after non mōdo or non solum, when followed, in a subsequent clause, by ne quidem, if both clauses have the same verb, and if the verb is contained in the second clause; as,

Mihi non modo trahi, sed ne dolere quidem impune licet, which is equivalent to Mihi non modo non trahi, sed ne dolere quidem impune licet, or Mihi non modo trahi, sed dolere quidem impune non licet. Not only am I not permitted to be angry, but not even to grieve with impunity. Cic. Quum cœditur non solum juvare rempublicam, sed ne lagere quidem liceret. Id.

(b.) Non is also rarely omitted after non modo when followed by sed or etiam with etiam, and also after vix; as, Qui non modo ea futura time, etiam etiam fert, sustinetque presentia. Who not only does not fear.... Cic. Hæc genera virtutum non solum in moribus nostris, sed vix jam in libris reperiuntur. These virtues are not only not found in life, but scarcely in books. Id.

REM. 7. Facile, in the sense of undoubtedly, clearly, is joined to superlatives, and words of similar import; as, Vir unus totius Græciæ facile doctissimus. Cic. Homo regionis illius virtute facile princeps. Id.

REM. 8. Sentences are often united by means of an adverb which is repeated before each of the connected clauses; as, modo—modo, and nunc—nunc, (sometimes—sometimes); as, Modo hoc, modo illud dixi; modo huc, modo illuc volat. Instead of the second modo other particles of time are sometimes used; as, quando, nonnumquam, interdum, sæpius, tum or deinde.—Partim—partim, 'partly—partly,' is sometimes used with a genitive or the preposition ex, in the sense of alii—alii, as a nominative in all the genders; as, Quum partim e nobis ita timidi sunt, ut, etc., partim ita republicâ aversi, ut, etc.—Simul—simul, 'as well—as,' like nunc—nunc, is not found in Cicero.—Quâ—quâ is equivalent to et—et.—Tum—tum is used sometimes like modo—modo, sometimes like partim—partim; as Eruptunt sæpe ritia amicorum tum in ipsos amicos, tum in alienos. Cic. Hæc (beneficia) tum in universam rempublicam, tum in singulos cives conferuntur. Id.

REM. 9. Quum—tum is equivalent to et—et, except in assigning a greater importance to the second part: hence it must be translated by 'both—and especially,' 'not only—but also,' or 'but more particularly.' Sometimes additional weight is given to the second part by means of vêro, certe, etiam, quodque, præcipue, imprimis or maxime. This use of quum—tum seems to have had its origin in the use of quum with the subjunctive and often with the indicative in the protasis, followed by tum in the apodosis. When quum followed by tum serves to express the opposition between single words which have the same verb, it is to be regarded as a complete adverb; as, Fortuna quum in reliquis rebus, tum præcipue in bello plurimum potest. Sometimes the verb stands in the first part of the sentence; as, Quum omnis arrogantia odiosa est, tum illa ingenii atque eloquentiæ multo molestissima. Tum is sometimes repeated in the second part of the sentence; as, Quem pater moriens quum tutoribus et propinquis, tum legibus, tum æquidati magistratuum, tum iudiciis vestris commendatum putavit. Cic. Sometimes the gradation is, quum—tum—tum vêro.

REM. 10. Non modo—sed etiam (or non solum, or non tantum—vêrum etiam) generally expresses the transition from less important to more important things, like the English 'not only—but (also)'. The transition from greater to smaller things is expressed by non modo—sed, without the etiam, which we render in English by 'I will not say—but only,' and in Latin, too, we may say non dicam or non dico—sed; as, Quid est enim minus non dico fratris, sed hominis.

REM. 11. Tam—quam expresses a comparison in degree; as, Nemo tam multa scripsit, quam multa sunt nostra. With superlatives they are rendered into English by 'the—the' and comparatives; as, Veterneus quam plurimum bibit, tam maxime sitit. The more he drinks, the more he thirsts. Cato. Quam quisque pessime fecit, tam maxime tatus est. Sall.—Tam—quam quod maxime significat, 'as much as possible.'—Non tam—quam signifies, 'not so much—as,' or 'less—than'; as, Provincia non tam gratioza et illustris, quam negotioza ac molesta. Cic.

REM. 12. Non minus—quam and non magis—quam are equivalent to æque—ac, 'as much as,' but in non magis—quam the greater weight is attached to the affirmative clause beginning with quam; as, Alexander non dicit magis quam militis mânia exequébatur, Alexander performed as much the service of a soldier as that of a commander. In this connection plus frequently supplies the place of magis.

(a.) Sic and ita are demonstrative adverbs corresponding to the relative ut. The restrictive meaning of ita (see § 191, R. 5.), is sometimes made more emphatic by the addition of tamen. Tantum is used in a like restrictive sense; as, Prædicti tantum est, ut ne mîrus quidem cingi possit, i. e. 'only so much.' Cæs.

(b.) Ut—ita or sic places sentences on an equality. They may sometimes be translated 'although—still,' or 'indeed—but.'—The adverb ut, 'as,' sometimes takes the signification of the conjunction quod, 'because'; as, Atque ille, ut semper fuitupertissimus, non se purgavit. Cic.

REM. 13. In an enumeration, primum, deinde, tum, dénique are commonly preferred to the numerals, primum, secundo, (for secundum is not often used), tertium, quartum, etc., unless the strict succession of the numbers is required. Sometimes tum is used once or twice instead of deinde, or the series is extended by accédit, huc adde, etc. Sometimes dénique is followed by postremo to form the conclusion of a series, but often dénique without the other adverbs concludes a series, and is then equivalent to 'in short' or 'in fine.' See Cic. Cat. 1, 5.

REM. 14. Minus is often used for non; as, Nonnumquam ea, quæ prædicta sunt, minus evéniant. Cic.—So, si minus—at, 'if not—yet'; and sin minus, 'but if not,' without a verb, after a preceding si; but with si non the verb is repeated.—The English 'how little' is in Latin quam non; and 'so little,' ita non or adeo non; as, adeo non cûrâbat, quid hómînes de se loqûerentur.

REM. 15. Nunc always expresses the time actually present, or the time to which a narrator transfers himself for the purpose of making his description livelier. Thus in speaking of the present time we may say, Nunc primum somnia me elâdunt or elâstrunt; but in a narrative we must say, Somnia tunc primum se dicébât elâsisse. Compare the use of hic and illa. See § 207, R. 23, (c.)

REM. 16. The conjunction dum, 'while,' when added to negatives, becomes an adverb, signifying 'yet'; as, nondum, 'not yet'; nequidum, 'and not yet'; nihilusum, 'no one yet'; nihildum, 'nothing yet.' Hence vixdum signifies 'scarcely yet'; as, Vixdum epistolam tuam ligéram, quum ad me Curtius vénit. Cic.—So, also, the conjunction nisi, by omitting its verb or uniting it with the leading verb, acquires, after negatives and negative questions, the sense of the adverb 'except,' which is generally expressed by præterquam or the preposition præter, and must be so expressed when no negative precedes. But the expression 'except that' may be rendered either by nisi quod or præterquam quod.—After nihil aliud we may use either nisi or quam, nisi referring to nihil and quam to aliud. Hence nihil aliud nisi signifies 'nothing further,' or 'nothing more,' and nihil aliud quam, 'nothing else,' or 'no other thing but this.'

REM. 17. Ut, 'as,' in interposed clauses, such as ut opinor, ut puto, ut censeo, ut credo, is frequently omitted. Credo, used in this manner often takes an ironical sense.

PREPOSITIONS.

II. 1. See respecting the construction of prepositions with the accusative, § 235; and with the ablative, § 241. See, also, for the different meanings of prepositions, § 195, and for their arrangement, § 279, 10.

2. Two prepositions must not be joined in Latin, as they sometimes are in English, with the same noun; as, to speak for and against a law; or, I have learned this with, and, to some extent, from him. These sentences may be thus expressed in Latin; pro lege et contra legem dicere; hæc cum eo, partim etiam ab eo dictæ. Those dissyllabic prepositions only, which are sometimes used as adverbs, may follow another, without being joined with a case; as, Quod aut secundum naturam esset, aut contra. Cic. Cis Padum ultraque. Liv. Cæsar reverses the order, Intra extraque mûnitiones. B. Civ. 3, 72.

3. When nouns mutually dependent upon a preposition are in apposition, when they constitute an enumeration without a connective, and when connected by copulative, disjunctive, adversative, or comparative conjunctions, the preposition is not repeated, unless such nouns are to be distinguished from each other, or are emphatic; as,

Quid dicam de thésauro omnium rerum, mēmōriā? Hoc apparet in bestiis, volucribus, nautibus, agrestibus, cicturibus, fēris, ut se ipsas diligant. Cic. Sapissime inter me et Scipionem de amicitia dissertebatur. Id. Quid faceres si in aliquam domum villamve venisses? Id. Nihil per iram aut cupiditatem actum est. Id. Thémistocles non minus in rebus gerendis promptus quam excogitandis erat. Nep.

4. The monosyllabic prepositions ab, ad, de, ex, and in are often used before each of two nouns connected by et, etc., especially if the qualities denoted by such nouns are to be considered separately. If the nouns are separated by et—et, nec—nec, etc., the prepositions must be repeated; as, Ut eorum et in bellicis et in civilibus officiis vigeat industria. Cic.—Inter is frequently repeated by Cicero after interesse, and other writers repeat it after other verbs also; as, Quid intersit inter populum—ciuem, et inter constantem, severum et gravem. Cic. Certitum inter Ap. Claudium maxime ferunt et inter P. Decium. Liv.

5. (a.) In poetry a preposition is occasionally omitted with the first of two nouns, and put with the second only; as, Quas nemora, aut quos agor in specus, (Hor.) for, in quas nemora aut in quos specus agor. So, Hor. Ep. 2, 1, 25.—

(b.) An ellipsis of a preposition with the relative pronoun sometimes occurs, together with that of the verb belonging to the preceding demonstrative; as, In eadem opinione fui, quam reliqui omnes, (Cic.), properly in qua reliqui omnes fuerunt.

CONJUNCTIONS.

§ 278. Copulative, disjunctive, and other coördinate conjunctions, connect similar constructions.

NOTE 1. Clauses are similarly constructed, which are mutually independent, whose subjects and verbs are in the same case and mood, and which have either no dependence or a similar dependence on another clause.

NOTE 2. (a.) Words have a similar construction, when they stand in the same relation to some other word or words in the sentence. Hence, (b.) Conjunctions connect the same cases of nouns and pronouns, dependent, if the cases are oblique, upon the same government; the same number, case, and gender of adjectives, belonging to the same noun; the same mood of verbs, either independent, or alike dependent; adverbs qualifying the same verbs, adjectives, etc.; and prepositions on which depends the same noun or pronoun; as, Concidunt venti, fugiuntque nubes, The winds subside, and the clouds disperse. Hor. Locum, quem et non cognat sol, et tangit ros. Varr. Ludi decem per dies, facti sunt, neque res ulla prætermissa est. Cic. Vides, ut alta stet nive candidum Soracte, nec jam sustineant onus silvas laborantes, gelisque flumina constiterint æcuto. Hor. Intelligitis et animum ei præsto fuisse, nec consilium defuisse. Cic. Gentri animantium omni est a natura tributum, ut se tueatur, declinetque ea, quas nocturna videantur. Id. Aut nemo, aut Cato sapiens fuit. Id. Pulvis et umbra sumus. Hor. Si tu et Tullia vultis, ego et Cicero volumus. Cic. Aggere jacto turribusque constitutis. Cæs. Clarus et honoratus vir, An illustrious and honorable man. Id. Cæsar Remos cohortatus, liberaliterque oratione prosecutus. Cæs. Pater tuus, quem colui et dilexi. Cic. Belgæ spectant in septentrionem et orientem solem. Cæs. Nāvibus junctis, rātibuscque compluribus factis. Id. Lēge, vel tābellas redde. Plant. Allobroges trans Rhodānum vicos possessionesque habebant. Cæs. Quum triumphum egēris, censorque fuēris, et obliēris legatus. Id. Quum ad oppidum accessisset, castrāque ibi pōneret. Cæs.

Ades animo, et omittite timorem. Cic. Ea videre ac perspicere potestis. Id. Graviter et copiose dixisse dicitur. Id. Cum fratre an sine. Id. Cf. § 277, II. 2. Cui carmina cordi, numerosque intendere nervis. Virg. Nec census, nec clarum nomen arorum, sed probitus magnos ingeniumque facit. Ovid. Philosophi negant quemquam virum bonum esse, nisi sapientem. Cic. Gloria virtutem tamquam umbra sequitur. Id.

REMARK 1. Copulative conjunctions may connect either single words and phrases or entire clauses; the other conjunctions, whether coördinate or subordinate, connect clauses only.

REM. 2. Words thus connected are sometimes in different cases, though in the same construction; as, Mea et reipublicæ interest. Cic. (See § 219.) Sive es Rómæ, sive in Epíro. Id. (See §§ 221 and 254. But see also § 221, Note.) In Mettii descendat iudicis aures, et patris et nostras. Hor. See § 211, R. 3. In like manner, Hannibal non aliter vinci potuit, quam morâ.

REM. 3. As the subjunctive is often used for the imperative, they may be connected by coördinate conjunctions; as, Disce nec invidias. Pers.

REM. 4. Where the purpose of the writer requires it, coördinate conjunctions sometimes connect independent propositions, whose verbs are in different moods; as, Stuporem hominis, vel dicam pécúdis, videte. Cic. Nec scitis scio, nec, si sciam, dicere ausim. Liv.

REM. 5. Et is used after multí followed by another adjective, where in English 'and' is usually omitted; as, Multa et magnas arbores, Many large trees. In such cases et supplies the place of et is, introducing a more accurate description. See § 207, R. 26, (c.)

REM. 6. The conjunction is often omitted; as, (a.) When two single words, as comprehending the whole idea, are opposed to each other, as, velim, nolim, whether I would or not; maxima minima, the greatest as well as the least; prima postréma, from the first to the last; dignos indignos dñre; ire redire, to go to and fro. Edificiis omnibus publicis privatis, sacris profanis sic pepercit. Cic. Nam glóriam, hññorem, impérium bonus ignavus aq̃ue sibi exoptant. Sall. C. 11.

(b.) Et is very frequently omitted between the names of two colleagues; as, Consules declarati sunt Cn. Pompeius M. Crassus. P. Lentulo L. Triario, quaestoribus urbanis. Cic. Sometimes, also, when the two persons are not colleagues. It is also occasionally omitted between two words in the oratorical style; as, Adèrant amici, propinquus. Id.; also with verbs; as, Adsunt, quèruntur Sicili. Id. In good prose, if three or more substantives are joined, it is usual either wholly to omit the conjunction or to insert it between each. The following may serve as an example of both cases: Qui non módo Curiis, Catiñibus, Pompeiis, antiquis illis, sed his recentibus, Mitriis et Didiiis et Valiis commemorandis jácabant. This is also the common practice with adjectives and verbs, and hence when et has not previously occurred in an enumeration of persons or things, we should not conclude the enumeration with et alii, et reliqui, et cetera, etc., but should make use of the adjectives alone, alii, reliqui, cetera, etc. But though et, ac and atque are not used alone in the third or fourth place, yet the enclitic que frequently occurs in this position; as, Præcor ut ea res vobis pæcem, tranquillitatem, dñum, concordiamque afferat. Cic. Et may be supplied also when two protases introduced by si are joined together; where we say 'if—and if,' or 'if—and.' See an example in Cic. Off. 3, 9.

(c.) An ellipsis of ut is supposed when ne precedes and et, atque, or que is used to continue the sentence, those copulative conjunctions in such case obtaining the meaning of the adversative sed; as, Mónere cepit Porum, ne ultima experiri perseveraret, dederetque se victuri. Curt.

REM. 7. Copulative conjunctions are often used, before each of two or more connected words or clauses, in order to mark the connection more forcibly; as, Et pécunia persuadet, et grátia, et auctoritas dicentis, et dignitas, et postrémo aspectus. Quint. Hoc et turpe, nec tamen tñtum. Cic. Nèque nata est, et aterna est. Id. Et tibi et mihi voluptati fore. Id. Before clauses the disjunctive conjunctions are used in a similar manner; as, Res ipsa aut innotābit aut detestābitur. Id. So, also, nunc...nunc, simul...simul, partim...partim, quā...quā, tum...tum, quum...tum, are used before successive clauses.

REM. 8. To connect different names of the same person or thing, sive or seu, rather than aut or vel, is employed; as, Mars sive Mavors. Cf. § 198, 2, (c.)

REM. 9. Instead of et and ut with the negatives nemo, nihil, nullus, and numquam, nēque (or nec), and ne are used with the corresponding affirmative words quisquam, ullus, unquam, and usquam. But 'in order that no one' is rendered in Latin by ne quis and not by ne quisquam, see § 207, R. 31, (a.); as, Hōrā quidem cēdunt, et dies, et menses, et anni: nec prætēritum tempus umquam revertitur. Cic. Scindus decēvit, dārent opēram consules, ne quid respūblica detrimēti cōpēret. Cæs.

REM. 10. The conjunctions igitur, vērū, vērūmāmen, sed, and sed tāmen, indicate a return to the construction of the leading clause, when it has been disturbed by the insertion of another clause. These conjunctions, in such connection, are usually rendered by 'I say,' and sometimes in Latin inquam is so used. Nam also is occasionally employed in this way and very rarely utāque.

REM. 11. Vēro and autem are frequently omitted in adversative clauses, especially in short ones; as, Vincere scit Hannibal, victoriā ūti nescit. Liv. This omission often occurs in describing a progress from smaller to greater things, as in Cic. Cat. 1, 1. And it is to be remarked that non in the second member of such adversative sentences is used without et or vērō; as, aliēna vltia videt, sua non videt. But in unreal suppositions or ironical sentences, where the second member contains the truth, et non or ac non must be used, where we may supply 'rather'; see § 198, 1, (c.); as, Quāsi nunc id agātur,—ac non hoc quærātur. Cic.

INTERJECTIONS.

Respecting the construction of interjections with the nominative, see § 209, R. 13:—with the dative, § 228, 3:—with the accusative, § 238, 2:—and with the vocative, § 240.

ARRANGEMENT.

I. OF THE WORDS OF A PROPOSITION.

§ 279. 1. In arranging the parts of a proposition in English, after connectives, are placed, first, the subject and the words which modify or limit it; next, the verb and its modifiers; then, the object of the verb; and finally, prepositions and the words depending upon them. This is called the logical or natural order.

2. (a.) In Latin, either of the four principal parts of a sentence may be placed first, and there is great freedom in the arrangement of the rest, but with this general restriction in prose, that words which are necessary for the complete expression of a thought should not be separated by the intervention of other words. In ordinary discourse, especially in historical writing, the following general rule for the arrangement of the parts of a sentence is for the most part observed.

(b.) In a Latin sentence, after connectives, are placed, first, the subject and its modifiers; then, the oblique cases and other words which depend upon or modify the verb; and last of all, the verb.

(c.) Hence a Latin sentence regularly begins with the subject and ends with the principal verb of its predicate; as, Dumnōrix grātiā et largitiōne apud Sēquanos plāritum pōtērat. Cæs. But the verb is often not placed at the end of a sentence, especially if the sentence is long, or if two many verbs would be thus brought together at the end. In the familiar style, also, the verb is often placed earlier in the sentence, and in explanatory clauses it is sometimes placed at the very beginning of the proposition, in which case a conjunction is generally added.

(d.) It is also to be remarked, as a further modification of the general rule of arrangement, that, in sentences containing the expression of emotion, the word whose emphasis characterizes it as especially affecting the feelings, or as forming a contrast, is placed at the beginning; as, Cito drescit lacrima, prorsertim in aliēnis malis, Quickly dries the tear, especially when shed for others' woes. Cic. Sua otia insipientes et suam culpam in senectūtem conftrunt. Id.

(e.) If there be no emotive or pathetic word requiring prominence, the place at the end of the proposition is reserved for the significant word, that is, the word which is to be most strongly impressed upon the understanding or memory; as, Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres. Cæs. Quod ante id tempus accidērat numquam. Id. Quod aliud ūer hābērent nullum. Id. Qua virtus ex prōvidendo appellāta prudentia. Cic.

3. (a.) Connectives generally stand at the beginning of the clause which they introduce, and with the following this is their only position; viz. et, ētēnim, ac, at, atque, atqui, nēque or nec, aut, vel, sive, sin, sed, nam, vērūm, and the relatives quāre, quōcirca, and quāmbrem.

(b.) Most other connectives generally stand in the first place, but when a particular word is peculiarly emphatic, this word with all that belongs to it stands first, and the conjunction follows it. Ūt, even when there is no particular emphasis, is commonly placed after vix, pene, and prōpe, and also after the negatives nullus, nemo, nihil, and the word tantum. In Cicero, idque stands first and igitur is commonly placed after the first, and sometimes after several words.

(c.) Autem, enim, and vērō (but), are placed after the first word of the clause, or after the second, when the first two belong together, or when one of them is the auxiliary verb sum; as, Ille enim revocātus resistere cepit. Cæs. Ego vērō vellem, affuisses. Cic. Incrēdibile est enim, quā sit, etc. Id. They rarely occur after several words; as, Cur non de integro autem dātum. Id. The enclitics que, ne, ve, are usually subjoined to the first word in a clause; but when a monosyllabic preposition stands at the beginning, they are often attached to its case; as, Rōmam Cato dēmigrāvit, in fōrque esse cepit; and this is always the case with a, ad and ob. So, also, for the sake of euphony, Apud quosque. Cic.

(d.) Quidem and quōque, when belonging to single words, are always subjoined to the emphatic word in a clause; as, Verbo ille reus erat, re quidem vērō Oppianicus. Cic. Me scilicet maxime, sed proxime illum quōque fēfellissem. Id. In negative sentences, ne precedes, and quidem follows, the emphatic word; as, Ne ad Cātōnem quidem prōvōcābo. Cic.—Quidem is sometimes attracted from the word to which it properly belongs to a neighboring pronoun; as, Tibique persuāde, esse te quidem mihi carissimum, sed multo fōre cariorē, si, etc., instead of, te carissimum quidem mihi esse.—Prepositions and conjunctions belonging to the word on which the emphasis rests are placed with it between ne and quidem; as, Ne in fānis quidem. Cic. Ne si dubitētur quidem. Id. Ne quum in Siciliā quidem fuit. Id.; and even Ne cūjus rei arguērētur quidem.—So, also, in Cicero, non nisi, 'only,' are separated; and the negative may even be contained in a verb.

(e.) The preceding rules respecting the position of connectives are often violated by the poets, who place even the prepositive conjunctions after one or more words of a proposition; as, Et tu, pōtes nam, etc.. Hor. Vivos et rōdēret angues. Id. They even separate et from the word belonging to it; as, Audire et videor pios errare per lúcos. Id. So, Auctius atque dñi melius fecere. Id. And they sometimes append que and ve neither to the first word, nor to their proper words in other connections; as, Messallam terrā dum sequiturque mōri, instead of terrā mōrique. Tib. In such arbitrary positions, however, these conjunctions are almost invariably joined to verbs only.

4. When a word is repeated in the same clause, so that one is opposed to, or distinguished from, the other, they must stand together; as, Hōmīnes hōmīnibus maxime útiles esse possunt. Cic. Equites alif alio dilapsi sunt. Liv. Lēgitur virum vir. Virg. Mānus manum lēvat. Petr. So, also, the personal and possessive pronouns; as, Sēquere quo tua te nātura dūcit. Suum se nēgōtium agere dicunt.

5. Words used antithetically are also placed near each other; as, Dum tācent, clāmant. Cic. Frāgile corpus ānīmus sempiternus mōvet. Id.

6. Inquam and often aiō, introducing a quotation, follow one or more of the words quoted; as, 'Non nosti quid pāter,' inquit, 'Chrýsippus dicat.' Hor. 'Quid,' aiō, 'tua crimina prōdis?' Ovid. When a nominative is added to inquit, it usually follows this verb; as, Mihi vērō, inquit Cotta, vidētur. Cic.—Dicit and dicūt are used like inquit only by the poets.

7. (a.) The adjective may be placed before or after its noun according as one or the other is emphatic, the more emphatic word being placed before the other. When any thing is dependent on the adjective, it usually follows its noun. When a noun is limited by another noun, as well as by an adjective, the adjective usually precedes both; as, Ulla officii praecepta. Cic. Tuum erga dignitatem meam stūdium. Id.

(b.) Demonstratives, and the adjectives primus, mēdius, etc., when signifying the first part, the middle part, etc., (see § 205, R. 17), usually precede their nouns; as, Ea res. Cæs. His ipsis verbis. Cic. Mēdia nox. Cæs. Rēliqua Egyptus. Cic.

8. Monosyllables are usually prefixed to longer words with which they are connected; as, Vir clarissimus. Cic. Dñi immortāles. Res innūmerābiles. Vis tempestātis. Cæs.

9. (a.) When nouns are put in apposition, the one which explains or defines the other is generally put last, unless it is to be made emphatic; as, Opes irrāmēnta mālōrum. Ovid. Hence names of honors or dignities, and every thing of the nature of a title, are commonly placed after the proper name, as explanatory additions. Thus, especially, the names of changeable Roman dignities; as, Cicēro consul; C. Cūriōni tribūno plēbis; but also permanent appellations; as, Ennius poēta; Plātō philōsōphus; Diōnysius tyrānnus; and such epithets as vir hōnestissimus; hōmo doctissimus. But the hereditary title rex is frequently placed before the name; as, rex Dēiōtārus; and so the title Impērātor after it became permanent.

(b.) In the arrangement of the Roman names of persons, the prænōmen stands first, next the nōmen or name of the gens, third the cognōmen or name of the fāmilia, and last the agnōmen; as, Publius Cōrnēlius Scipio Africānus. The prænōmen is usually denoted by a letter. In the imperial times the nōmen is often either omitted or follows as something subordinate.

10. (a.) Oblique cases precede the words on which they depend, but they follow prepositions; as,

Pōpūli Rōmāni laus est. Cic. Landis dñi, pēcūniæ libērāles. Sall. Cunctis esto bēnignus, nulli blandus, paucis fāmiliāris, omnibus æquus. Sen. Mōnūmentum erē pērennius. Hor. Hanc tibi dōno do. Ter.—Ad mēridiem spectans. Cic. Extra pēricūlum. Id.

(b.) Genitives depending upon neuter adjectives are commonly placed last; as, Incerta fortūne. Liv. Nec tibi plus cordis, sed minus ōris inest. Ovid.

REMARK. This rule, so far especially as it relates to genitives, is in a great degree arbitrary, as the position of the governed and governing words depends on the idea to be expressed; thus, mors patris tui, contrasts the death with the preceding life; but, frātris tui mors distinguishes this case of death from others. Hence we say, ānīmi mōtus, ānīmi morbus, corpōris partes, terrā mōtus.—An objective genitive usually follows the word on which it depends; as, ānd signīficātiōne lītērārū, by means of a single notice by letters.—When several genitives are dependent on one noun, the subjective genitive commonly precedes and the objective genitive may either precede or follow the governing noun.—The genitive dependent on causā or gratiā, 'on account of,' regularly precedes these ablatives; as, glōriā causā mortem obire; smōlūmenti sui grātiā.

(c.) When a noun which is governed by a preposition, is modified by other words which precede it, the preposition usually stands before the words by which the noun is modified; as, A primā luce ad sextam hōram. Liv. Ad ānīmi mei lētitiām. Cic. Ad bōnē beatēque vivendū. Id.

(d.) Sometimes, however, the preposition comes between its noun and an adjective or a genitive, by which the noun is modified; as, Nullā in re. Cic. Iustis de causis. Id. Suos inter aquāles. Id. Hanc ob causam. Id. Magno cum mētē. Id. Quā in urbe. Id. Eā in re. Id. Etātis suae cum primis. Nep.—So, also, a conjunction may follow the preposition; as, Post vērō Sullā victōriam.

(e.) Per, in adjurations, is often separated from its case by other words; as, Per ego te deos oro. Ter.—In the poets, other prepositions are sometimes separated in the same manner; as, Vulnēra, quae circum plurima mūros accēpit patrios. Virg.

(f.) Tenus and versus, and sometimes other prepositions, (cf. § 241, R. 1.) follow their cases, especially when joined with qui or hic. This occurs most frequently with the prepositions ante, contra, inter, and propter; more rarely with circa, circum, pēnae, ultra and adversus; and with still less frequency with post, per, ad, and de; as, quam ante, quem contra, quos inter, quem propter, quos ad, quem ultra, hunc adversus, hunc post, quam circa.—The preceding prepositions, and more rarely others also, sometimes, especially in the poets and later prose writers, follow nouns and personal pronouns. In such case, if the noun be modified by an adjective or a genitive, the preposition sometimes stands between them, and sometimes follows both; as, Postes sub ipso. Virg. Eipam apud Euphrātis. Tac. Māria omnia circum. Virg. And more rarely other words intervene; as, His accensa super. Id. Vitiis nemo sine nascitur. Hor.

11. Infinitives precede the verbs on which they depend; as, Jugurtha, ubi eos Africā dēcessisse rātus est, neque propter loci naturā Cirtam armis expugnare possit, monia circumdat. Sall. Servire magis quam impārare parati estis. Id.

12. A word which has the same relation to several words, either precedes or follows them all; as, Vir gravis et sapiens. Cic. Clarus et honoratus vir. Id. In scriptoribus legendis et imitandis, or In legendis imitandisque scriptoribus; but not In legendis scriptoribus et imitandis. Quum respondere neque vellet neque posset. Habentur et dicuntur tyranni. Amicitiam nec usu nec ratione habent cognitam.

13. Relatives are commonly placed after their antecedents, and as near to them as possible; as,

Qui sim, ex eo, quem ad te misi, cognosces. Sall. Litēras ad te misi, per quas grātiās tibi ēgi. Cic.

14. Quisque is generally placed after se, suis, qui, ordinals and superlatives; as, Suos quisque debet tueri. Cic. Satis superque est sibi suarum cuique rerum cura. Id. Severitas animadvertionis infimo cuique gratissima. Id. Maxime decet, quod est cuiusque maxime suum. Id. Quisque very rarely begins a proposition.

15. (a.) An adverb is usually placed immediately before the word which it qualifies; but if the same word is modified by the oblique case of a noun, the latter commonly follows the adverb; as, Male parva male dilabuntur. Cic. Nihil tam asperum neque tam difficile esse, quod non cupidissime facturi essent. Sall.—Impērium facile iis artibus retinebatur, quibus initio partum est. Id. Sed maxime adulescentium familiaritates appetebat. Id. Non tam in bellis et ira praeliis, quam in promissis et fide firmiorem. Cic.—(b.) When non belongs to a single word of the proposition, it always stands immediately before it; as, non te reprehendo, sed fortinam. But if it belongs to the proposition generally, it stands before the verb, and particularly before the finite verb, if an infinitive depends on it; as, Cur tantopere te angas, intelligere sane non possum. Instead of non dico, nego is generally used; as, negavi eum adesse.—The negatives non, neque, nemo, nullus, when joined to general negative pronouns or adverbs, such as quoquam, ullus, unquam, always precede them though not always immediately; as, nemini quidquam negavi; non memini me unquam te viderisse. § 207, R. 81.

NOTE 1. In some phrases, custom has established a certain order, which must be observed and imitated; as, Civis Romanus, populus Romanus, jus civile, res publica, terra marique, Pontifex maximus, magister equitum, tribunus militum, tribunus militum consulari potestate, Jupiter optimus maximus, via Appia; ne quid republica detrimenti capias. Cic. The ablatives opinione, spe, iusto, solito, (see § 256, R. 9), generally precede the comparative.

NOTE 2. Exceptions to the foregoing principles are very numerous. These may arise (a) from emphasis; (b) from poetic license; and (c) from regard to the harmony of the sentence. The following general rule sometimes modifies nearly all the preceding.

16. The emphatic word is placed before the word or words connected with it which are not emphatic.

NOTE 3. The last place is often an emphatic one, except for the verb. When the verb is neither first nor last in a proposition the word before it is emphatic. An adjective, when emphatic, commonly precedes its substantive; when not emphatic, it commonly follows it. But with the demonstrative pronouns the rule is reversed.

NOTE 4. The principal poetical variation in the arrangement of words consists in the separation of the adjective from its noun, and in putting together words from different parts of a proposition.

17. A sentence should not close like a hexameter verse, with a dactyl and spondee; as, Esse videtur; nor, in general, with a monosyllable.

18. Hiatus should be avoided; that is, a word beginning with a vowel should not follow a word ending with a vowel.

19. A concurrence of long words or long measures,—of short words or short measures,—of words beginning alike or ending alike,—should be avoided.

II. OF THE ARRANGEMENT OF CLAUSES.

§ 280. A compound sentence, whose clauses are united as protasis and apodosis, or in which the leading clause is divided by the insertion of one or more subordinate clauses, is called a period.

1. (a.) In the former kind of period the protasis must precede the apodosis; as, Quum Pausanias semidntimis de templo elatus esset, confestim animam efflavit. When Pausanias had been carried out of the temple but just alive, he immediately expired. In a period of the latter kind the verb of the principal proposition is placed at the end, and the subordinate clauses between the parts of the leading clause; as, Pausanias, quum semidntimis de templo elatus esset, confestim animam efflavit. Pausanias, when he had been carried out of the temple but just alive, immediately expired. Nep.

(b.) A sentence, such as Scipio exercitum in Africam trajecit, ut Hannibalem ex Italia deduceret, is not periodic in its structure, but it becomes so when we ay, Scipio, ut Hannibalem ex Italiâ deduceret, exercitum in Africam trajecit. Periods in which the subordinate clause precedes with two conjunctions; as, Quum igitur Rômam venisset, statim imperatorem adiit, are made still more strictly periodic by placing first the conjunction which belongs to the whole, and then inserting the subordinate proposition; as, Itaque, quum Rômam venisset, statim imperatorem adiit.

2. (a.) If the verbs of the leading and dependent clauses have the same subject, or the same noun depending on them, they are commonly formed into a period; as, Antigonus, quum adversus Seleucum Lydimachumque dimicaret, in prælio occisus est. Nep. Quem, ut barbari incendium effugisse eminus viderunt, telis missis interfecerunt. Id.

(b.) So, also, when the noun which depends on the verb of the leading clause is the subject of the dependent clause; as, L. Manlio, quum dictator fuisset, M. Pompônus, tribûnus plêbia, diem dixit. Cic.

3. When obscurity would arise from separating the leading subject and verb by dependent words or clauses, they are often placed together at the beginning or end of the sentence; as, Lætæ (sunt) deinde lëges, non solum quas regni suspiciône consulem absolverent, sed quas ideo in contrarium vertèrent, ut popularem diem facerent. Liv. The position of the leading verb is also often otherwise varied, from regard to emphasis, to avoid monotony, or to prevent its meeting with the verb of the last dependent clause; but clauses, when so arranged, do not constitute a period.

4. When one clause is interrupted by the introduction of another, the latter should be finished before the first is resumed.

5. Clauses expressing a cause, a condition, a time, or a comparison, usually precede the clauses to which they relate.

6. A short clause usually stands before, rather than after, a long one.

III. OF THE CONNECTION OF CLAUSES.

(1.) In connecting propositions, relatives, whether pronouns, pronominal adjectives, or adverbs, are often employed in order to avoid the too frequent recurrence of et, autem, and certain other conjunctions. Every relative may be used for this purpose instead of its corresponding demonstrative with et; as, qui for et is, quâlis for et talis, quo for et eo, etc. They are used also before those conjunctions which are joined with et or autem at the beginning of a proposition; as, si, nisi, ut, quum, etc. (see § 206, (14.)); as, quod quum audivissem, quod si fecissem, quod quomvis non ignorassem, for et quum hoc, et si hoc, et quomvis hoc; or quum autem hoc, etc.; and, often, also, where in English no conjunction is used, and even before other relatives; as, quod qui facit, eum ego impium iudico, i. e. et qui hoc facit, or, qui autem hoc facit. In the ablative with comparatives the relative is often used as a connective; as, Cato, quo nemo tum erat prudentior, i. e. Cato, who was more prudent than all others.

(2.) In propositions consisting of two members, the relative pronoun is joined grammatically either to the apodosis or to the protasis; with the former in, Qui, quum ex eo quæreretur, cur tam diu vellet esse in vilâ, Nihil habeo, inquit, quod accusem senectutem. Cic. de Sen. 6. But is more frequent with the protasis or secondary clause; as, A quo quum quæreretur, quid maxime expèderet, respondit. Cic. Off. 2, 25. When it is thus joined with the protasis, the nominative of the demonstrative is supplied with the apodosis from another case of the relative in the protasis, as, in the preceding passage, from the ablative. But for the sake of emphasis the demonstrative may be expressed, and frequently, also, for the sake of clearness; as, Qui mos quum a posteroribus non esset retentus, Arcesilas eum revocavit. Cic. de Fin. 2, 1. The accusative is sometimes to be supplied; as, Qui (Hæraclitus) quoniam intelligi noluit, dimittimus. Cic. N. D. 3, 14. When the demonstrative precedes, and is followed by a proposition consisting of two members, the relative is attached to the protasis, which is placed first, and not to the leading clause or apodosis; as, Ez sudsi Pompeio, quibus ille si pāruisset, Cæsar tantas opes, quantas nunc habet, non habēret. Cic. Fam. 6, 6. Nōi adversus eos me velle dūcere, cum quibus ne contra te arma ferrem, fidēiam reliqui. Nep. Att. 4.

(3.) Where in English we use 'however' with the relative; as, He promised me many things, which, however, he did not perform, the Latins made use of the demonstrative with sed or vērū, or the relative alone implying the adversative conjunction; as, multa mihi prōmisit, sed ea non præstitit, or, quæ non præstitit, but not quæ autem or quæ vērō. Qui autem and qui vērō are used however in protases, where the relative retains its relative meaning, and there is a corresponding demonstrative in the apodosis; as, Qui autem omnia bona a se ipsis petunt, eis nihil malum videri potest, quod naturæ necessitas afferat. Cic. de Sen. 2.

(4.) In double relative clauses, especially where the cases are different, Cicero frequently for the second relative clause substitutes the demonstrative; as, Sed ipsius in mente insidebat species pulchritudinis eximia quædam, quam intuens, in eaque defixus, ad, etc. for et in quâ. Cic. Orat. 2. And sometimes even when the cases are the same; as, Quem Philentem venisse ferunt, eumque cum Leonte dissēruisse quædam. Cic. Tusc. 5, 8; where et alone would have been sufficient.

(5.) From this tendency to connect sentences by relatives arose the use of quod before certain conjunctions merely as a copulative. See § 206, (14.)

(6.) Nēque or nec is much used by Latin writers instead of et and a negation, and may be so used in all cases except when the negative belongs to one particular word; see § 278, R. 9. Nēque or nec is added to enim, vērō, and tāmen, where we cannot use 'and.' To these negative expressions a second negative is often joined, in which case nēque enim non is equivalent to nam; non vērō non, to atque etiā, a stronger et; nec tāmen non, to attāmen.

ANALYSIS.

§ 281. I. 1. The analysis of a complex or a compound sentence consists in dividing it into its several component propositions, and pointing out their relation to each other.

2. In resolving a sentence into its component clauses, the participial constructions equivalent to clauses should be mentioned, and ellipses be supplied. See § 203, 4; § 274, 3; and § 257.

3. In a continued discourse the connection and relation of the successive sentences also should be specified.

Rules for the Analysis of Complex and Compound Sentences.

(1.) State whether the sentence is complex or compound. § 201, 11, 12.

(2.) If complex, (1) specify the principal and subordinate clauses. (2) Specify the class to which the subordinate proposition belongs, (§ 201, 7), and (3), its connective, and the class to which such connective belongs, (§ 201, 8 and 9.)

(3.) If compound, specify the principal propositions, with their subordinates, if any they have, as in the case of complex sentences.

II. The analysis of a proposition or simple sentence consists in distinguishing the subject from the predicate, and, in case either of them be compound, in pointing out the simple subjects or predicates of which it is composed, and, if complex, in specifying the several modifiers, whether of the essential or subordinate parts.

Rules for the Analysis of a Simple Sentence.

1. Divide it into two parts—the subject and the predicate, § 201, 1–3. If these are simple, the analysis is complete, but if either is compound:—
2. Specify the simple subjects or predicates of which the compound consists.—If either is complex:—
3. Point out the grammatical subject, and the words, phrases, etc. directly modifying it.
4. Point out the words, phrases, etc., which modify the direct modifiers of the grammatical subject, and those which modify them, and so on successively, until the relation of each of the words composing the logical subject is specified.
5. Point out the grammatical predicate, and the words, phrases, etc., directly modifying it.
6. Point out the words, phrases, etc., which modify the direct modifiers of the grammatical predicate, and those which modify them, and so on successively, until the relation of each of the words composing the logical predicate is specified.

PARSING.

III. Parsing consists in resolving a proposition into the parts of speech of which it is composed, tracing the derivation of each word, and giving the rules of formation and construction applicable to it.

Rules for Parsing.

1. Name the part of speech to which each word belongs, including the subdivision in which it is found.
2. If it is an inflected word:—
 - (1.) Name its root or crude form, and decline, compare, or conjugate it.
 - (2.) If it is a noun or pronoun, tell its gender, number and case:—if in the nominative or in the accusative with the infinitive, tell its verb:—if in an oblique case depending on some other word, tell the word on which its case depends.
 - (3.) If it is an adjective, adjective-pronoun, or participle, tell the word which it modifies.
 - (4.) If it is a finite verb or an infinitive with the accusative, tell its voice, mood, tense, number, person, and subject.
3. If it is a conjunction, tell its class and what it connects.
4. If it is a preposition, tell the words whose relation is expressed by it.
5. If it is an adverb, tell its class and what it qualifies.
6. Prove the correctness of each step of the process by quoting the definition or rule of formation or construction on which it depends.

NOTE. The words constituting a proposition are most conveniently parsed in that order in which they are arranged in analysis.

Examples of Analysis and Parsing.

1. Equus currit, The horse runs.

Analysis. This is a simple sentence: its subject is equus, its predicate is currit, both of which are simple. See § 201, 1–3; § 202, 2; and § 203, 2.

Parsing. Equus is a common noun, § 26, 1 and 3; of the 2d decl., § 38; masc. gender, § 28, 1; third person, § 85, 2; its root is equ-, § 40, 10; decline it, § 46; it is in the nominative case, singular number, § 85, 1, (b.); the subject of currit, § 209, (a).—Currit is a neuter verb, § 141, II.; of the 3d conjugation, § 149, 2, from curro; its principal parts are curro, cūcurri, cursum, currere, § 151, 4; it is from the first root curr-; give the formations of that root, § 151, 1; it is in the active voice, § 142, 1; indicative mood, § 143, 1; present tense, § 145, 1; third person, § 147; singular number, § 146; agreeing with its subject-nominative equus, § 209, (b.)

NOTE. The questions to be asked in parsing equus are such as these, Why is equus a noun? Why a common noun? Why of the second declension? Why masculine? etc.—In parsing currit, the questions are, Why is currit a verb? Why a neuter verb? Why of the third conjugation? Which are the principal parts of a verb? Of what does the first root of a verb consist? What parts of a verb are derived from the first root? etc. The answer in each case may be found by consulting the etymological rules and definitions.

2. Sævius ventis aglütatur ingens pinus, The great pine is more violently shaken by the winds. Hor.

Analysis. This also is a simple sentence:—its subject is ingens pinus, its predicate sævius ventis aglütatur; both of which are complex, § 201, 10, § 202, 6, and § 203, 5.

The grammatical subject is pinus, the pine; this is modified by ingens, great, § 201, 2, § 202, 2, and § 202, 6, (3.)

The grammatical predicate is aglütatur, is shaken; this is modified by two independent modifiers, sævius, more violently, and ventis, by the winds, § 203, II. 3, Rem., § 203, I. 1, (2), and (3.)

Parsing. Pinus is a common noun, § 26, 1 and 3; of the 2d and 4th declensions, § 38 and § 99; feminine gender, § 29, 2; 3d person, § 85, 2; from the root pin-, § 40, 10; (decline it both in the 2d and 4th declensions);—it is found in the singular number, § 85, 1, and the nominative case, the subject of aglütatur, § 209, (a.)

Ingens is a qualifying adjective of quantity, § 104, 4, and § 205, N. 1; of the 3d decl., § 105, 1, and § 38; of one termination, § 108, and § 111; from the root ingent-, § 40, 10; (decline it like presens, § 111, but with only i in the ablative, § 113, Exc. 3.);—it is found in the singular number, feminine gender, § 26, R. 4; and nominative case, agreeing with its noun pinus, § 206.

Agglütatur is an active frequentative verb, § 141, I., and § 187, II. 1; of the 1st conjugation, § 149, 2; from the first root of its primitive ago, § 187, II. 1, (b.); (name its principal parts in both voices, see § 151, 4; and give the conjugation of the passive voice, indicative mood, present tense, see § 156.);—it is found in the singular number, § 146; third person, § 147; agreeing with its subject-nominative pinus, § 209, (b.)

Sævius is a derivative adverb of manner, § 190, 2-4; in the comparative degree, from the positive sæve or sæviter, which is derived from the adjective sævus, § 194, 1 and 2, and § 192, II. 1, and Exc. 1 and 2; modifying the verb aglütatur, by expressing its degree, § 277.

Ventis is a common noun, § 26, 1 and 3; of the 2d declension, § 38; masculine gender, § 46; from the root vent-, § 40, 10; (decline it);—it is found in the plural number, § 85, 1; ablative case, modifying aglütatur by denoting its means or instrument, § 247.

3. Mithridātes, duārum et viginti gentium rex, totidem linguis jura dixit, Mithridates, king of twenty-two nations, pronounced judicial decisions in as many languages. Plin.

Analysis. This also is a simple sentence; its subject is Mithridātes, duārum et viginti gentium rex, its predicate is toidem linguis jura dixit, both of which are complex, § 201, 10, § 202, 6, and § 203, 5.

The grammatical subject is Mithridates; this is modified directly by rex, § 202, I. (1.)

Rex is limited by gentium, § 202, I. 1, (2.)

Gentium is limited by the compound addition duarum and viginti connected coordinately by et, § 202, III. 8.

The grammatical predicate is dixit; this is limited by jara and linguis, the former a simple, the latter a complex addition, as it is modified by utudem, § 203, I. 1, (2.) and II. 1.

Parsing. Mithridates is a proper noun, § 26, 2; of the third declension, § 38; masculine gender, § 28, 1; from the root Mithridat-, § 40, 10; genitive Mithridatis, § 78, 1; (decline it in the singular number only, § 95, (a).)—it is found in the nominative case, the subject of dixit, § 209, (a.)

Rex is a common noun—third declension, § 38; masculine gender, § 28, 1; from the root reg-, § 40, 10; genitive regis, § 78, 2; (decline it);—it is found in the singular number—the nominative case, in apposition to Mithridates, § 204.

Gentium is a common noun from gens—third declension—feminine gender, § 62² from the root gent-, § 56, I. R. 1; genitive gentis, § 77, 2 and (2.); (decline it);—it is found in the plural number—genitive case, § 83, II. 3; limiting rex subjectively, § 211 and R. 2.

Duarum is a numeral adjective, § 104, 5; of the cardinal kind, § 117; from duo, duas, duo; from the root du-; (decline it, § 118, 1.);—it is found in the plural number, § 118, 2; feminine gender, genitive case, § 26, R. 4; agreeing with its noun gentium, § 205.

Et is a copulative conjunction, § 198, 1, connecting duarum and viginti, § 278.

Viginti is a numeral adjective of the cardinal kind, indeclinable, § 118, 1; limiting gentium, § 205.

Dixit is an active verb, § 141, I.; of the third conjugation, § 149, 2; from dico, (give the principal parts in the active voice, and its first, second, and third roots, § 159, 4, and § 171, 1.); it is formed from the second root dix-, (give the formations of the second root);—it is found in the active voice, § 141, 1; Indicative mood, § 143, 1; perfect indefinite tense, § 145, IV. and Rem.; singular number, third person, agreeing with Mithridates, § 209, (b.)

Jara is a common noun, of the third declension, from jus, root jār-, § 56, I. R. 1. genitive jāris, § 76, Exc. 3; neuter gender, § 66; (decline it);—it is found in the plural number, accusative case, § 40, 8; the object of dixit, § 229.

Linguis is a common noun, of the first declension, feminine gender, from lingua, root lingu-, (decline it);—found in the plural number, ablative case, after dixit, § 247.

Utudem is a demonstrative pronominal adjective, § 189, 5, (2.) and (3.); indeclinable, § 115, 4; it is in the ablative plural, feminine gender, limiting linguis, § 205.

4. Pausānias, quum sēmiāntimis de templo ēlātus esset, confestim ānīm efflāvit. Nep. Paus. 4.

Analysis. This is a complex sentence, § 201, 11; consisting of two members, which are so arranged as to constitute a period, § 280, 1.

The principal proposition is, Pausānias confestim ānīm efflāvit, § 201, 5. The subordinate proposition is, quum (is) sēmiāntimis de templo ēlātus esset, § 201, 6.

The leading proposition has a simple subject, Pausānias, § 202, 2, and a complex predicate, confestim ānīm efflāvit, § 203, 3; in which efflāvit is the grammatical predicate, § 203, 2; which is modified by confestim and ānīm, § 203, I. 1, (2.) and (3.), and II. R. 2., and also by the adverbial clause quum sēmiāntimis, etc. § 201, 6 and 7, and § 203, I. 8.

The subordinate proposition, which is connected to the leading clause by the subordinate conjunction quum, § 201, 9, has a simple subject, viz. is understood, and a complex predicate, sēmiāntimis, de templo ēlātus esset, § 203, 3.—The grammatical predicate is ēlātus esset, § 203, 2; which is modified by sēmiāntimis, § 203, I. 1, (1.), and de templo, § 203, I. 2, and II. Rem. 2.

Parsing. Pausanias, a Greek proper noun, § 26, 2;—1st decl., §§ 41 and 44; masc. gender, § 28, 1; root Pausan-; found in sing. num., nom. case, the subject of efflavit, § 209, (a.)

Confestim, an adv. of time § 190, 3; limiting efflavit, § 277.

Animam is a com. noun of 1st decl., fem. gender, § 41; from anima, root anim-; (decline it);—it is found in the sing. num., acc. case, the object of efflavit, § 229.

Eflavit, an act. verb, 1st conj., from efflo, compounded of ex and flo, § 196, 6; (give the principal parts in the act. voice and the three roots);—it is formed from the second root; (give the formations of that root); in the active voice, ind. mood, perfect indefinite tense, sing. num., 3d pers., agreeing with Pausanias, § 209, (b.)

Quum is a temporal conjunction, § 198, 10; connecting the dependent to the principal clause, § 278.

Semidivinis is a predicate adj., of the 3d decl., of two terminations, § 109; (decline it);—it is in the sing. num., masc. gen., nom. case, agreeing with is understood, § 210, R. 1, (a.)

De is a preposition, expressing the relation between elatus esset and templo, § 196.

Templo is a com. noun, 2d decl., neut. gen., from templum, root templ-; (decline it);—in the sing. num., abl. case, after de, § 241.

Elatus esset is an irregular active verb, of the third conjugation, § 179; from effero, compounded of ex and fero, § 196, 6; (see fero and compounds, § 172); (give the principal parts in both voices, and the 1st and 3d roots);—it is formed from the third root, elāt-, (give the formations of that root in the passive voice); in the subjunctive mood, pluperfect tense, § 145, V.; sing. num., third person, agreeing with is understood referring to Pausanias, § 209, (b.)

5. Rōmāna pūbes, sēdātō tandem pāvōre, postquam ex tam turbīdo die sērēna et tranquilla lux rediit, ūbi vācuam sēdem rēgiām vidit, etsi sātis crēdēbat patrībūs, qui proximī stētērant, sublimem raptum prōcellā; tāmen, vēlūt orbitātis mētū icta, mōestum āliquamdiu silentium obtinuit. Liv. 1, 16.

Analysis. This is a complex sentence, whose clauses constitute a period, § 280. It is composed of the following members or clauses:—

1. Rōmāna pūbes [tāmen] mōestum āliquamdiu silentium obtinuit. This is the leading clause. The following are dependent clauses.

2. vēlūt orbitātis mētū icta,

3. sēdātō tandem pāvōre,

4. postquam ex tam turbīdo die sērēna et tranquilla lux rediit,

5. ūbi vācuam sēdem rēgiām vidit,

6. etsi sātis crēdēbat patrībūs,

7. qui proximī stētērant,

8. sublimem raptum prōcellā.

NOTE 1. In the preceding clauses the predicates are printed in Italics.

NOTE 2. The connective of the 1st clause, is the adversative tāmen, which is inserted on account of etsi intervening between the principal subject and predicate. The connective of the 2d clause is vēlūt, of the 4th postquam, of the 5th ūbi, of the 6th etsi, followed by a clause constituting the protasis, and of the 7th qui. The 3d and 8th clauses have no connectives.

(1.) The grammatical subject of the leading clause is pūbes, which is limited by Rōmāna.—The grammatical predicate is obtinuit, which is limited by āliquamdiu and silentium, and also either directly or indirectly by all the dependent clauses. Silentium is itself modified by mōestum.

The second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth clauses are used adverbially to denote the time and other circumstances modifying the principal predicate silentium obtinuit, § 201, 7.

(2.) The second is a participial clause, equivalent to cessat (ea scil. pābes) orbitalis mētu icta cessat, § 274, 8, (a.)

(3.) The third clause is also participial, and is equivalent to quam tandem pavor seditus cessat, § 257, R. 1; and hence pavore represents the subject, and sedito tandem the predicate—the former being simple, the latter complex.

(4.) The grammatical subject of the 4th clause, which is connected to the leading clause by postquam, § 201, 9, is lux, which is modified by serena and tranquilla.—The grammatical predicate is recluit, which is modified by postquam and ex tam turbido die, § 203, I. 1, (3.), and II. 1.

(5.) The grammatical subject of the fifth clause is ea understood.—The grammatical predicate is videt, which is modified by ubi and vacuam sedem regiam, § 203, I. 1, (3.) and II. 1.

(6.) The grammatical subject of the sixth clause also is ea. Its grammatical predicate is credēbat, which is modified by satis and patribus, § 203, I. (2.) and (3.), and by the 8th clause, II. 3.

(7.) The grammatical subject of the seventh clause is qui. Its grammatical predicate is stillerant, which is modified by proximi, § 203, I. (1.) It is an adjective clause, modifying patribus, § 201, 7 and 9.

(8.) The grammatical subject of the eighth clause, which has no connective, § 202, Rem., is eum, i. e. Rōmānum, understood. Its grammatical predicate is raptum (esse), which is modified by sublimem and præcella.

Parsing. Rōmāna is a patrial adjective, § 104, 10, derived from Rōma, § 128, 6, (a.) and (c.); of the 1st and 2d declensions, § 105, 2; fem. gender, sing. number, nom. case, agreeing with pābes, § 205.

Pābes, a collective noun, § 26, 4; 3d decl., fem. gender, § 62; from the root pāb-, § 56, I. R. 6; genitive pābis, § 73, 1; (decline it);—found in the nom. sing., the subject of obtinuit, § 209, (a.)

Tamen, an adversative conjunction, § 198, 9, relating to etsi in the 6th clause.

Mestum, a qualifying adj., § 205, N. 1; of the 1st and 2d declensions, neut. gender, sing. num., acc. case, agreeing with silentium.

Aliquamdiu, an adverb of time, § 191, II.; compounded of aliquis and diu, § 193, 6; and limiting obtinuit, § 277.

Silentium, a com. noun, 2d decl., neut. gender, § 46; sing. number, acc. case, the object of obtinuit, § 229.

Obtinuit, an active verb, of the 2d conj., § 149, 2; from obtineo, compounded of ob and teneo, see § 168; (give the principal parts in the act. voice, and the formations of the 2d root, § 157 at the end);—found in the active voice, ind. mood, perf. indef. tense, sing. num., 3d person, agreeing with pābes, § 209, (b.)

Velut for velut si, an adverb, compounded of vel and ut, § 193, 10; modifying icta, and obtinuisset understood, (as they would have done if, etc.)

Orbitalis, an abstract noun, § 26, 5; from the primitive orbis, § 101, 1 and 2; 3d decl., fem. gender, § 62; from the root orbital-, § 56, I., and R. 1; (decline it);—found in the sing. num., subjective gen. case, limiting mētu, § 211.

Mētu, an abstract noun, 4th decl., masc. gen., § 87; sing. num., abl. case, § 247.

Icta, a perf. part. pass., from the active verb ico, of the 3d conj. (give the principal parts in both voices, and decline the participle);—found in the fem. gen., sing. num., nom. case, agreeing with pābes, § 205.

Sedito, a perfect pass. part. from the active verb sedo, of the 1st conj., § 149, 2; (give the principal parts in both voices, § 151, 4; and decline it, § 105, R. 2.);—found in the masc. gender, sing. num., abl. case, agreeing with pavore, § 205.

Tandem, an adverb of time, § 191, II.; modifying sedito, § 277.

Pavore, an abstract noun, § 26, 5, and § 102, 1; (from paveo), 3d decl., masc. gen., § 58; root pavor, § 56, II., and § 70, (decline it);—found in the sing. number, abl. case, absolute with sedito, § 257.

Postquam, an adverb of time, compounded of post and quam, § 193, 10; modifying recluit, and connecting the 1st and 4th clauses, § 201, 9.

Ex, a preposition, § 195, R. 2.

Tum, an adverb of degree, § 191, R. 2; modifying turbido, § 277.

Turbido, an adjective, agreeing with dñs.

Die, a common noun, 5th decl., masc. gender, § 90, Exc. 1; sing. number, abl. case, after the prep. ex, § 241.

Serēna, an adj., 1st and 2d decls., fem. gen., sing. num., nom. case, agreeing with lux, § 205.

Et, a copulative conjunction, § 198, 1; connecting serēna and tranquilla, § 278.

Tranquilla, like serēna.

Lux, a common noun, 3d decl., fem. gen., § 62; from the root lūc-, § 56, I., and R. 2; genitive lūcis, § 78, 2.

Rēdūt, an irregular neuter verb, of the 4th conj., § 176; from rēdeo, compounded of eo, § 182, and the inseparable prep. red-, § 196, (b.), 3; (give its principal parts);—found in the ind. mood., perf. indef. tense, sing. num., 3d pers., agreeing with lux, § 209, (b.)

Ubi, an adverb of time, and like postquam, a connective, § 201, 9; and modifying vidit, § 277.

Vacuam, an adj., qualifying sēdem.

Sēdem, a common noun, 3d decl., fem. gen., § 62; from the root sēd-, § 56, I., R. 6; genitive sēdis, § 73, 1; (decline it);—found in the sing. num., acc. case, the object of the transitive verb vidit, § 229.

Rēgiā, a denominative adj., § 128, I., 2, (a.); from the primitive rex, agreeing with sēdem.

Vidit, an active verb, of the 2d conj., (give its principal parts in the active voice, and the formations of the 2d root); found in the active voice, ind. mood., perf. indef. tense, sing. num., 3d pers., agreeing with ea, i. e. pūbes, understood.

Etsi, a concessive conjunction, § 198, 4; corresponding to the correlative adverbative conj. tāmen, § 198, 4, R. and 9.

Satis, an adverb of degree, § 191, III., and R. 2; modifying crēdebāt, § 277.

Crēdebāt, an act. verb, § 141, I.; 3d conj., (give the principal parts in the active voice and the formations of the 1st root);—found in the act. voice, ind. mood., imperfect tense, sing. num., 3d person, agreeing with ea, scil. pūbes, understood.

Patribus, a common noun, § 26, 3; 3d decl., from the root patr-, § 56, II., R. 3; gen. patris, § 71; masc. gender, § 28, 1; plur. num., dat. case, depending on crēdebāt, § 228, R. 2.

Qui, the subject of the 7th clause, is a relative pronoun, § 186; masc. gender, plur. num., agreeing with its antecedent patribus, § 206, R. 19, (a.); and is nominative to sistērant, § 209, (a.)

Proximi, an adj. of the superlative degree, § 126, 1, (compare it); of the 1st and 2d decls., masc. gen., plur. num., nom. case, agreeing with qui, § 205, § 210, R. 1, (a.) and R. 3, (2.)

Sistērant, a neuter verb, 1st conj., irregular in its 2d root, § 165; (give its principal parts, and the formations of the 2d root);—found in the act. voice, ind. mood., plup. tense, § 145, V.; 3d person plural, agreeing with its subject qui, § 209, (b.)

Sublimem, an adj., of the 3d decl., and two terminations, § 109; masc. gen., sing. num., acc. case, agreeing with eum, (i. e. Rōmūlum), understood, and modifying also raptum esse, § 206, R. 15.

Raptum (esse), an act. verb, 3d conj., (give the principal parts in both voices and the formations of the 3d root in the passive voice);—found in the pass. voice, inf. mood., perf. tense; but, following the imperfect, it has the meaning of a pluperfect, § 268, 2, and § 145, V.; depending on crēdebāt, § 272.

Prōcellā, a com. noun, 1st decl., fem. gen., sing. num., abl. case, § 247.

PROSODY.

§ 282. Prosody treats of the quantity of syllables, and the laws of versification.

QUANTITY.

1. The quantity of a syllable is the relative time occupied in pronouncing it. Cf. § 13.

2. A syllable is either short, long, or common.

(a.) The time occupied in pronouncing a short syllable is called a mora or time.

(b.) A long syllable requires two moræ or double the time occupied in pronouncing a short one; as, āmārē.

(c.) A common syllable is one which, in poetry, may be made either long or short; as the middle syllable of tēnēbrae.

3. The quantity of a syllable is either natural or accidental;—natural, when it depends on the nature of its vowel; accidental, when it depends on its position.

Thus the e in rēsisto is short by nature; while in rēsistis it is long by its position, since it is followed by two consonants: § 283, IV. On the contrary, the e in dēduco is naturally long, but in dēterro it is made short by being placed before a vowel: § 283, I.

4. The quantity of syllables is determined either by certain established rules, or by the authority of the poets.

Thus it is poetic usage alone that determines the quantity of the first syllables of the following words, viz. māter, frāter, prāvus, dico, dāco; pāter, āvus, cādo, māneo, grāvis, etc.; and hence the quantity of such syllables can be ascertained by practice only or by consulting the gradus or lexicon.

5. The rules of quantity are either general or special. The former apply alike to all the syllables of a word, the latter to particular syllables.

GENERAL RULES.

§ 283. I. (a.) A vowel before another vowel, or a diphthong, is short; as, e in mēus, i in patriæ. Thus, Conscia mens recti fāmæ mendācia ridet. Ovid. F. 4, 811.

Ipeo etiam extimæ laudis succensus amōre. Virg. A. 7, 498.

(b.) So also when h comes between the vowels, since h is accounted only a breathing; as, nihil: (see § 2, 6.) Thus,

Dē nihilis nihil, in nihilum nil posse reverti. Pers. 4, 84.

Exc. 1. (a.) F is long in f followed by u and when followed by er; as fiunt, fiēbam. Thus, Omnia jam fiunt, fieri quae posse negābam. Ovid. Tr. 1, 8, 7.

(b.) It is sometimes found long even before er; as, fiēret. Ter.; fiēri. Plant: and, on the contrary, Prudentius has fiō with i short.

Exc. 2. (a.) E is long in the termination of the genitive and dative of the fifth declension, when preceded and followed by i; as, fāciēi. Thus,

Non rādi sōlis, nēque lācida tēla dīci. Lucr. 1, 148.

(b.) In spei, rei, and fidei, e is short.

NOTE. In Lucretius, the e of rei is, in a few cases, long, and that of fides is lengthened once in Lucretius and once in a line of Ennius.

Exc. 3. (a.) A is long in the penult of old genitives in at of the first declension; as, aulāi, piculāi. Cf. § 43, 1.

(b.) A and e are also long in proper names in atus, etus, or etas; as, Cātus, Pompēius, Aquilēta; and in the adjectives Grātus and Vētus. Thus, Æthērium sensum, atque aurāt simplicis ignem. Verg. A. 6, 747.

Accipe, Pompēi, dūductum carmen ab illo. Ovid. Pont. 4, 1, 1.

Neonem cum Vēntis Aquilēta perfrūt armis. Sil. 8, 606.

Exc. 4. (a.) I is common in genitives in ius; as, unius, illius. Thus, Illius et nītido stillent unguenta capillo. Tibull. 1, 7, 51.

Illius pāro dēstillent tempōra nardo. Id. 2, 2, 7.

(b.) But i in the genitive of alter is commonly short; and in that of alius it is always long.

Exc. 5. The first vowel of ēheu is long; that of Dīdna, io, and ōhe, is common.

Exc. 6. Greek words retain their original quantities, and hence, in many Greek words, a vowel is long, though immediately followed by another vowel; as, āēr, Achāta, Achēlōus, dīa, ēos, Lāertes, and Greek words having in the original a long e or o (u or au). See also § 283, 3.

(1.) Words which, in Greek, are written with ei (u) before a vowel, and in Latin with a single e or i, have the e or i long; as, Ænēas, Alexandria, Cassio-pēa, Chio, Dārius, ēlēgia, Gālātēa, Mēdēa, Mausolēum, Pēnelōpēa, Thāia, Atrides.

Hence, most adjectives in eus, formed from Greek proper names, have the e long; as, Cythēreus, Pēlōpēus; and the e remains long when et is restored; as, Pēlōpēta.

Exc. Accadēmīa, chōrea, Mālea, plātēa, and some patronymics and patrials in eis; as, Nēreis, have the penult common.

(2.) Greek genitives in eos, and accusatives in ea, from nominatives in eus, generally shorten the e; as, Orphēos, Orphēa;—but the e is sometimes lengthened by the Ionic dialect; as, Cēphēos, Ithōnēa.

(3.) Greek words in aīs, ois, aius, eius, oius, aon, and ion, generally lengthen the first vowel; as, Nāis, Minoīs, Grātus, Nērētus, Minoūs, Māchāon, Ixon. But Thēbāis, Stimōis, Phāon, Deucālīon, Pygmālīon, and many others, shorten the former vowel.

NOTE 1. Greek words in aon and ion, with o short in the genitive, have the penult long; but with o long in the genitive, they have it short; as, Amynthāon, -āonis; Deucālīon, -ōnis.

NOTE 2. In Greek proper names in eus (gen. eos), as Orpheus, the eu in the nominative is always a diphthong in the original, and, with very few exceptions, in the Latin poets.

II. A diphthong is long; as, aurum, fœnus, Eubœa, Pompæus, Orphœu. Thus, Infernique læus, Eubœus insula Circæ. Virg. A. 3, 386.

Thesæuros ignotum argenti pendus et ævi. Id. A. 1, 369.
Harpyiæque obstant ævis, Phœnæia postquam. Id. A. 3, 212.

Exc. 1. Præ, in composition, is short before a vowel; as, præustus, præcûtus. Thus,

Nec totâ tamen ille prior præeunte carinâ. Virg. A. 5, 136.

In Statius, and Sidonius Apollinaris, it is found long.

Exc. 2. A diphthong at the end of a word, when the next word begins with a vowel, is sometimes made short; as, Ensilæ Rôulo in magno, quas dira Cœlæno. Virg. A. 3, 211.

Exc. 3. The diphthongs consisting of u followed by a vowel are either long or short; the two vowels thus combined being subject to the same rules of quantity, as their final vowel would be if standing alone; as, quâ, quî, quorum, quâ, quibus, quâtio, quéror, æquôr, linguâ, sanguis.

III. A syllable formed by contraction is long; as;

altus for altius; côgo for côdgo; nîl for nîhil; jûnior for jûvénior. Thus, Titÿre coge pœnas, tu post cœrecta lætæbas. Virg. E. 3, 20.

IV. A vowel naturally short, before two consonants, a double consonant, or the letter j, is long by position; as, ârma, bêllum, âxis, gâza, mâjor. Thus,

Pascere spërtes ôves deductum dicere cårmen. Virg. E. 6, 5.
Nec mÿrtûs vincet corymbos; nec laurea Phœbi. Id. E. 7, 64.
At nôbia, Pax alma, veni, spicamque ténêto. Tibull. 1, 10, 67.
Rara jûvant: primis sic mâjor grâtia pœnis. Mart. 4, 29, 8.

NOTE 1. A vowel (other than i) before j is in reality lengthened by forming a diphthong with it, since i and j are in fact but one letter. Thus major is equivalent to maÿ-or, which would be pronounced mâÿ-yor. See § 9, 1.

Exc. 1. The compounds of jûgum have i short before j; as, bijûgus, quadrjûgus. Thus, Intèreâ bijûgis infert se Læcæus albis. Virg. A. 10, 575.

REMARK. The vowel is long by position, when either one or both of the consonants is in the same word with it; but when both stand at the beginning of the following word, the vowel is either long or short; as,

Tolle mûras; semper nûcuss differre pârâtis. Lucan. 1, 281.
Ferte citi ferrum; date telâ; scandite mûros. Virg. A. 9, 37.
Ne tamen ignôrât, quæ sit sententiâ scripto. Ovid.

NOTE 2. A short vowel at the end of a word, before an initial double consonant or j in the following word, is not lengthened.

NOTE 3. In the comic poets a vowel frequently remains short though followed by two consonants, especially if only one of them is in the same word.

Exc. 2. A vowel naturally short, before a mute followed by a liquid, is common; as, āgrīs, phārētra, vōlūcrīs, pōplūes, cōchlea. Thus,

Et primo stans vōlūcrī, mox vēra vōlūcrīs. Ovid. M. 13. 607.
Nātum ante ora pātīs, pātrem qui obruncat ad āras. Virg. A. 2, 662.
Nox tēnēbrās prōfert, Phœbus fugat inde tēnēbrās. Ovid.

REM. 1. If the vowel before a mute and liquid is naturally long, it continues so; as, sālūbrīs, ambālācrum.

REM. 2. In compound words, of which the former part ends with a mute, and the latter begins with a liquid, a short vowel before the mute is made long by position; as, ābluo, obruo, sūblēvo, quāmbōrem.

REM. 3. A mute and liquid at the beginning of a word seldom lengthen the short vowel of the preceding word, except in the arsis of a foot; as, Terræque tractusque mārīs cōlumque prōfundum. Virg. E. 4, 51.

REM. 4. In Latin words, only the liquids l and r following a mute render the preceding short vowel common; but, in words of Greek origin, z and s after a mute have the same effect, as in Tēcnessa, Prēcne, Ojcnus.

SPECIAL RULES.

FIRST AND MIDDLE SYLLABLES.

I. DERIVATIVE WORDS.

§ 284. Derivative words retain the quantity of their primitives; as, by conjugation, āmo, amat, amābat, amāvī, amātus, etc.; by declension, āmor, amōris, amōri, amōribus, etc.; so, ānīmal, ānīmātus, from ānīma; gēmētundus, from gēmēre; fāmīliā, from fāmīllus; māternus, from māter; prōpīnquus, from prōpe.

NOTE 1. Lār, pār, sāl, and pēs in declension shorten the vowel of the nominative; as, sālūs, pēsūs, etc.

NOTE 2. The vowel of the primitive is sometimes lengthened or shortened in the derivative by the addition or removal of a consonant.

REM. 1. Derivatives from increasing nouns of the second or third declension agree in quantity with the increment of their primitives; as, puērtitā, from puēri; virgīneus, from virgīnis; sālūber, from sālūs.

REM. 2. In verbs, the vowels of the derived tenses and of derivative words agree in quantity with the verbal root from which they are formed; as, mōvēbam, mōvēbo, mōveam, mōvērem, mōve, mōvēre, mōvens, mōvendus, from mōv, the root of the present, with o short;—mōvēram, mōvērīm, mōvissem, mōvēro, mōvisse, from mōv, the root of the perfect, with o long; mōtūrus and mōtus;—mōto, mōtio, mōtor, and mōtus,—ās, from mōt, the root of the supine, with o also long.

REM. 3. (a.) Sōlūtum and vōlūtum from solvo and volvo have the first syllable short, as if from sōlvo, vōlvo. So, from gigno come gēnui, gēnītum, as if from gēno; and pōtui, from pōtis sum (possum).

(b.) The a in da, imperative of do, is long, though short in other parts of the verb. See § 294, 2.

(c.) The o in pōsi and pōtūm is short, though long in pōno.

Exc. 1. Perfects and supines of two syllables have the first syllable long, even when that of the present is short; as, vēni, vidī, fēci, from vēnio, video, facio; cāsum, mōtum, visum, from cādo, mōveo, video.

NOTE 3. Such perfects are supposed to have been formed either by the contraction of reduplicated syllables, as vēnio, perf. vēvēni, by syncope vēēni, by crasis vēni, or by the omission of a consonant, as video, perf. vidī, by syncope vidī, the vowel retaining the quantity which it had by position.

NOTE 4. The long vowel of dissyllabic supines probably arose in like manner from syncope and contraction; as, video, vidsum, by syncope visum; mōveo, mōvitum, by syncope mōitum, by contraction mōtum.

(1.) (a.) These seven perfects have the first syllable short:—bibi, dēdi, fidī, (from findo), scīdi, slēti, stīti, tūli. So also percūli, from percello.

(b.) The first syllable is also short before a vowel (§ 283, I.); as, rāi.

(2.) (a.) These ten supines have the first syllable short:—ctūm, (from cio), dātum, ūtum, litum, quītum, rātum, rūtum, sātum, stūm, and stūtum.

(b.) So, also, had the obsolete fūtum, from fūb, whence comes fūturus.

Exc. 2. (a.) Reduplicated polysyllabic perfects have the first two syllables short; as, cēcīdi, cēcīni, tētēgi, dādīci, from cādo, cāno, tango, and disco.

(b.) The second syllable of reduplicated perfects is sometimes made long by position; as, mōmōrēdi, tētēndi.—Cēcīdi from cādo, and pēpēdi from pēdo, retaining the quantity of their first root also have the second syllable long.

Exc. 3. Desiderative verbs in urio have the u short, though, in the third root of the verbs from which they are formed, it is long; as, canātūrio from canātā, the third root of cāno. So partūrio, esūrio, nuptūrio.

Exc. 4. Frequentative verbs, formed from the third root of verbs of the first conjugation, have the i short; as, clāmāto, cōlūto. See § 187, II. 1.

Exc. 5. A few other derivatives deviate from the quantity of their primitives.

1. Some have a long vowel from a short one in the primitive
Such are,

Dēni , from dēcem .	Mōbilis , from mōveo .	Stipendium , from stips
Fōmes and } from	Persōna , from persōno .	(stīpis).
Fōmentum , } fōveo .	Rēgūla and } from	Suspicio, ōnis , from sus
Hūmānus , from hōmo .	Rex (rēgis), } rēgo .	plcor .
Lāterna , from lāteo ,	Sēcūs , from sēcus .	Tēgūla , from tēgo .
Litēra from līno .	Sēdes , from sēdeo .
Lex (lēgis), from lēgo .	Sēmen , from sēro .

2. Some have a short vowel from a long one in the primitive.
Such are,

Dicax , from dīco .	Mōlestus , from mōles .	Sāgax , from sāgio .
Dux (dūcia), from dūco .	Nāto , from nātu. sup .	Sōpor , from sōpio .
Fides , from fīdo .	Nōto , from nōtu. sup .	Vādum , from vādo .
Lābo , from lābor , dep. v .	Ōdium , from ōdi .	Vōco , from vox (vōcia).
Lūcerna , from lūceo .	Quāsillus , from quālus .

NOTE 1. Disertus comes regularly (by syncope) from dissertus, the prefix dis being short, § 299, 1. Cf. dirimo and diribeo, where s is changed to r. See § 196, (b.) 2.

NOTE 2. Some other words might, perhaps, with propriety be added to these lists; but, in regard to the derivation of most of them, grammarians are not entirely agreed.

REMARK 1. Some of these irregularities seem to have arisen from the influence of syncope and crasis. Thus mobilis may have been móvibilis; mórum, móritum, etc.

REM. 2. Sometimes the vowel in the derived word being naturally short, is restored to its proper quantity by removing one of the consonants which, in the primitive, made it long by position; as, nāx, nācis. So, when the vowel of the primitive is naturally long, but has been made short before another vowel, it is sometimes restored to its original quantity by the insertion of a consonant; as, hibernus, from hiems.

REM. 3. The first syllable in liquidus is supposed to be common, as coming either from liquor or liquo; as, Crassique convéniant liquidis, et liquida crasis. Lucr. 4, 1255.

II. COMPOUND WORDS.

§ 285. 1. Compound words retain the quantity of the words which compose them; as, dēfēro, of dē and fēro; dāōro, of dā and ōro. So dōōrior, āmōōdo, circūōdo, comēōdo, enīōro, prōōdico, sūōōrno.

2. The change of a vowel or a diphthong in forming the compound does not alter its quantity; as, concīdo, from cādo; concīdo, from cādo; ēōōro, from rēō; reclīdo, from clādo; inīquus, from āquus.

Exc. 1. A long syllable in the simple word becomes short in the following compounds:—agnītus and cognītus, from nōtus; dēōōro and pēōōro, from jāro; hōōdie, from hōc die; nīhīlum and nīhīl, from hīlum; causēōōdicus, and other compounds ending in dicus, from dico.

Exc. 2. Imbēcillus, from bēcillum, has the second syllable long. The participle ambītus has the penult long from itūm, but the nouns ambītus and ambītio follow the rule.

Exc. 3. Innūba, prōnūba, and subnūba, from nūbo, have u short; but in consubium, it is common.

Exc. 4. O final, in the compounds of do and sto, is common, though long in the simple verbs. § 294, (a.)

NOTE 1. Prepositions of one syllable, which end in a vowel, are long (§ 294, (a.); those which end in a single consonant are short (§ 299, 1.)—Trā from trans is long; as, trādo, trādūco.

Exc. 5. Pro, in the following compounds, is short:—prōōfēnus, prōōfārī, prōōfēctio, prōōfēstus, prōōfīcīscor, prōōfīteor, prōōfūgio, prōōfūgus, prōōcella, prōōfundus, prōōnepos, prōōneptis, and prōōtervus. It is common in prōōcāro, prōōfundo, prōōpāgo, prōōpello, and prōōptuo.—Respecting prō in composition before a vowel see § 283, II. Exc. 1.

REM. 1. The Greek preposition pro (before) is short; as, prōōphēta. In prōōdus, prōōpōla, and prōōpino, it is common.

REM. 2. The inseparable prepositions di (for dīs) and se are long; as, dīōōdico, sēōōdro. Respecting dīsertus, see § 284, Exc. 5, 2, N. 1.

REM. 3. (a.) The inseparable preposition re or red is short; as, rēmitto, rēfēro, rēddō.

(b.) Re is sometimes lengthened in religio, reliquia, reliquus, reperit, retulit, repulit, recidit, redūcere, where some editors double the consonant following re. Cf. § 307, 2. In the impersonal verb refert, re is long, as coming from res.

REM. 4. A ending the former part of a compound word, is long; the other vowels are short; as, mālo, quāpropter, trādo, (trans do); nēfas, valēdico, hujuscēmōdi; biceps, tridens, omnipotēns, significo; hōdie, quandōquidem, philosōphus; dūcenti, lōcuples, Trōjāgenā; Polūdorus, Eurypylus, Thrāsībūlus.

EXC. 1. A. A is short in quādi, ēddem, when not an ablative, and in some Greek compounds; as, cātāpūlia, hexēmēter.

EXC. 2. E. E is long in crēdo, nēmo, nēquam, nēquāquam, nēquidquam, nēquis, nēquitiā; mēmēt, mēcum, tēcum, sēcum, sēc, vēcora, vēsāmus, vēnēficus, and vidēlicet;—also in words compounded with se for sex or sēmi; as, sēdēcim, sēmestris, sēmōdius; but in selibra it is found short in Martial.

NOTE 2. (a.) The first e in vidēlicet, as in vide, is sometimes made short. See § 295, EXC. 3.

(b.) E is common in some verbs compounded with fācio; as, liquefācio, pātefācio, rārefācio, tābefācio, ūpefācio.

EXC. 3. I. (1.) I is long in those compounds in which the first part is declined, (§ 296;) as, quidā, quivis, quilibet, quantūvis, quantūcumque, tantūdem, uticūque, eīdem, reipūblicā, utrique.

(2.) I is also long in those compounds which may be separated without altering the sense, (§ 296;) as, lūdmāgister, signis, agricultūra.

(3.) I, ending the former part of a compound word, is sometimes made long by contraction; as, fibicen for fibitcen, from fibia and cāno. See § 283, III.

(4.) I is long in biga, quadriga, ilicet, scilicet.

(5.) In idem, when masculine, i is long; but when neuter, it is short. The i of ubique and utrobique, the second in ibidem, and the first in nimirum, are long. In utricumque, as in ubi, i is common.

(6.) Compounds of dies have the final i of the former part long; as, bichnum, tridum, mēridies, quōtidie, quōtidianus, pridie, postridie.

NOTE 3. In Greek words, i, ending the former part of a compound, is short; as, Callimāchus; unless it comes from the diphthong ei (εἰ), or is made long or common by position.

EXC. 4. O. (1.) In compounds, the final o of contro, intro, retro, and quando (except quandōquidem), is long; as, controvērsia, intrōdūco, retrocēdo, quandōque. O is long also in aliōque (—quin), and utroque.

(2.) O is long in the compounds of quō and eo; as, quōmōdo, quōcumque, quōnam, quōlibet, quōminus, quōcirca, quōvis, quōque (i. e. et quo); ēddem, ēōne; but in the conjunction quōque, it is short.

(3.) Greek words which are written with an omēga (ω) have the o long; as, geōmetra, Mindaurus, lōgopus.

EXC. 5. U. U is long in Jūpiter (Jōvis pāter), and jūdico (jūs dico).

III. INCREMENT OF NOUNS.

§ 286. 1. A noun is said to increase, when, in any of its cases, it has more syllables than in the nominative singular; as, pax, pācis; sermo, sermōnis. The number of increments in any case of a noun is equal to that of its additional syllables.

2. Nouns in general have but one increment in the singular, but iter, stipellæ, compounds of cāpūt ending in ps, and sometimes jēcur, have two increments; as, iter, i-tēr-i-ris; stipellæ, stī-pel-læc-ā-lis; anceps, an-cip-i-tis; jēcur, jī-cin-ō-ris.

REMARK. The double increase of iter, etc., in the singular number arises from their coming from obsolete nominatives, containing a syllable more than those now in use; as, itāner, etc.

3. The dative and ablative plural of the third declension have one increment more than the genitive singular; as,

rex ,	Gen. rē-gis ,	D. and Ab. rēg-i-bus .
sermo ,	— ser-mō-nis ,	— ser-mōn-i-bus .
iter ,	— i-tēr-i-ris ,	— it-i-nēr-i-bus .

4. The last syllable of a word is never considered as the increment. If a word has but one increment, it is the penult; if two, the antepenult is called the first, and the penult the second; and if three, the syllable before the antepenult is called the first, the antepenult the second, and the penult the third increment; as, ser-mo, ser-mō-nis, ser-mōn-i-bus; i-ter, i-tēr-i-ris, it-i-nēr-i-bus.

5. In the third declension, the quantity of the first increment is the same in all the other cases as in the genitive singular; as, sermōnis, sermōni, sermōnem, sermōne, sermōnes, sermōnum, sermōnibus. Bōbus, or bōbus, from bos, bōvis, is lengthened by contraction from bōvibus.

NOTE. As adjectives and participles are declined like nouns, the same rules of increment apply to all of them; and so also to pronouns.

INCREMENTS OF THE SINGULAR NUMBER.

OF THE FIRST, FOURTH, AND FIFTH DECLENSIONS.

§ 287. 1. When nouns of the first, fourth, and fifth declensions increase in the singular number, the increment consists of a vowel before the final vowel, and its quantity is determined by the first general rule with its exceptions, § 283, I.

Thus, aurā, gen. aurāi, § 283, I. Exc. 3, (a.): fructus, dat. fructūi, § 283, I. (a.): dies, gen. dīei, § 283, I. Exc. 2, (a.)

INCREMENTS OF THE SECOND DECLENSION.

2. The increments of the second declension in the singular number are short; as, gēner, gēnēri; sātur, sātūri; tēnēr, tēnēri; vīr, vīri. Thus,

Ne, puēri, ne tanta animis assuescitis bella. Virg. A. 6, 833.
Monstra sinunt; gēntes externis affere ab oris. Id. A. 7, 270.

Exc. The increment of Iber and Celāber is long. For that of genitives in us, see § 283, Exc. 4.

INCREMENTS OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

3. The increments of the third declension and singular number in a and o are long; those in e, i, u, and y, are short; as, animal, animālis; audax, audācis; sermo, sermōnis; ferox, fērōcis; opus, opēris; celer, cēlētis; miles, milītis; supplex, supplicis; murmur, murmuris; dux, dūcis; chlāmys, chlāmēdis; Styx, Stēgis. Thus, Prōnāque cum spectent animālia cōtēra terram. Ovid. M. 1, 84.

Hæc tum multiplici pōpūlos sermōne replēbat. Virg. A. 4, 139.

Incumbent gēnēris lapai sarcire ruīnas. Id. G. 4, 249.

Quālem virgīneo dāmessum pōltice flōrem. Id. A. 11, 68.

Adspice, ventūci cōcidērunt murmuris aures. Id. E. 9, 68.

Exceptions in Increments in A.

1. (a.) Masculines in al and ar (except Car and Nar) increase short; as, Annibal, Annibālīs; Amīlcar, Amīlcārīs.

(b.) Par and its compounds, and the following—ānas, mas, vas (vādīs), bac-car, hēpar, jūbar, lar, nectar, and sal—also increase short.

2. A, in the increment of nouns in s with a consonant before it, is short; as, daps, dāpis; Arabs, Arābis.

3. Greek nouns in a and as (ādīs, ānis, or ātis) increase short; as, lampas, lampādīs; Mēlas, Mēlānis, pōēma, pōēmātīs.

4. The following in az increase short:—ābaz, anthraz, Arctōphylaz, Ataz, Aīraz, climaz, cōlaz, cōraz, and nyctīcōraz, drōpaz, fax, harpaz, pānaz, smīlan, and stēraz.—The increment of Sēphas is doubtful.

Exceptions in Increments in O.

1. O, in the increment of neuter nouns, is short; as, marmor, marmōris; corpus, corpōris; ēbur, ēbōris. But os (the mouth), and the neuter of comparatives, like their masculine and feminine, increase long. The increment of ādor is common.

2. O is short in the increment of Greek nouns in o or on, which, in the oblique cases, have omicron, but long in those which have omēga; as, Aēdon, Aēdōnis; Agāmēmon, Agāmēmōnis;—Plāto, Plātōnis; Sīnon, Sīnōnis; Sīcyon, Sīcyōnis. Sīdon, Orīon, and Egēon, have the increment common.

3. (a.) In the increment of gentile nouns in o or on, whether Greek or barbaric, o is generally short; as, Mācēdo, Mācēdōnis. So, Amazōnes, Aōnes, Myrmidōnes, Santōnes, Saxōnes, Sēnōnes, Teutōnes, etc.

(b.) But the following have o long:—Eburōnes, Lacōnes, Iōnes, Nasamōnes, Suesōnes (or -iōnes), Vettōnes, Burgundīōnes. Brūtones has the o common.

4. Greek nouns in or increase short; as, Hector, Hectōris; rhētor, rhētōris; Agēnor, Agēnōris.

5. Compounds of pus, (πῦς), as tripus, pōlypus, Edipus, and also arbor, mēmor, bos, compos, impos, and lepus, increase short.

6. O, in the increment of nouns in s with a consonant before it, is short; as, scrobs, scrōbis; inaps, ināpis; Dōlōps. But it is long in the increment of eērops, Cyclops, and hydrops.

7. The increment of Allobroa, Cypādoz, and pracoa, is also short.

Exceptions in Increments in E.

1. Nouns in en, enis (except Hymen), lengthen their increment; as, Siren, Strēnis. So, Aniēnis, Nēriēnis, from Anio and Nerio, or rather from the obsolete Anien and Nēriēnes.

2. Hæres, locuples, mansues, merces, and quies—also Iber, ver, lex, rex, alec or alex (hāl-) narthex and vervex—plebs and seps—increase long.

3. Greek nouns in es and er (except aēr and æther) increase long; as, magnes, magnētis; crāter, crātēris.

Exceptions in Increments in I.

1. Nouns and adjectives in iz, increase long; as, victrix, victricis; felix, fēlicis.

Exc. Ciliæ, Ciliæ, coenædæ, filiæ, fornæ, hystriæ, latriæ, niæ, piæ, siliæ, striæ, and rarely sandæ or sandæz, increase short.

2. Vibex and the following nouns in is increase long:—diis, glis, Ne, vis, Nēsis, Quiris, and Sammis. The increment of Psēphis is common.

3. Greek nouns, whose genitive is in inis increase long; as, delphin, delphīnis; Sālāmis, Sālāminis.

Exceptions in Increments in U.

1. Genitives in adis, uris, and utis, from nominatives in us, have the penult long; as, pilus, pilūdis; tellus, tellūris; virtus, virtūtis. But intercus, Ligus and pīcus, pēcūdis, increase short.

2. Fur, fruz, (obs.), luz, and Pollus, increase long.

Exceptions in Increments in Y.

1. Greek nouns whose genitive is in ynis, increase long; as, Trāchyn, Trāchynis.

2. The increment of bombyz, Cefz, gryps, and mormyr, is long; that of Beryz and sandyz is common.

INCREMENTS OF THE PLURAL NUMBER.

§ 288. 1. A noun in the plural number is said to increase, when, in any case, it has more syllables than in the ablative singular.

REMARK. When the ablative singular is wanting, or its place is supplied by a form derived from a different root, an ablative may, for this purpose, be assumed, by annexing the proper termination to the root of the plural.

2. When a noun increases in the plural number, its penult is called the plural increment; as, sa in māstrum, no in dōminōrum, pi in rūpius and rūpius.

3. In plural increments, a, e, and o, are long, i and u are short; as, bōndrum, dāndūbus, rērum, rēbus, gēnērōrum, ambōbus; cōmēntibus, lācōbus.

Thus,

Appia, longōrum, tēritur, rēgna vidērum. Stat. S. 2, 2, 12.
Sunt lacrymę rērum, et mentem mortalia tangunt. Virg. A. 1, 462.
Atque illi, quōrum cōmēdia prisca vīrōrum est. Hor. S. 1, 4, 2.
Fortūbus ēgrēdiōr, ventisque fīrensibus āsus. Ovid.

IV. INCREMENT OF VERBS.

§ 289. 1. A verb is said to increase, when, in any of its parts, it has more syllables than in the second person singular of the present indicative active; as, das, dā-tis; dōces, dō-cē-mus.

2. The number of increments in any part of a verb is equal to that of its additional syllables. In verbs, as in nouns, the last syllable is never considered the increment. If a verb has but one increment, it is the penult; and this first increment, through all the variations of the verb, except in reduplicated tenses, continues equally distant from the first syllable. The remaining increments are numbered successively from the first; as,

ā-mas,	mō-neas,	au-diā,
ā-mā-mus,	mō-nē-tur,	au-dī-tis,
1 2	1 2	1 2
ām-ā-bā-mus,	mōn-ē-rē-tur,	au-di-ē-bas,
1 2 3	1 2 3	1 2 3 4
ām-ā-vē-rā-mus.	mōn-ē-bim-i-ni.	au-di-ē-bām-i-ni.

3. A verb in the active voice may have three increments; in the passive, it may have four.

4. In determining the increments of deponent verbs, an active voice, formed from the same root, may be supposed.

Thus the increments of lāt-tur, lāt-ā-bā-tur, etc., are reckoned from the supposed verb lato, latas.

§ 290. In the increments of verbs, a, e, and o, are long; i and u are short; as, āndre, mōnere, faciōte, vōlāmus, rēgēbāmini. Thus,

Et cantāre pāres, et respondere pārti. Virg. E. 7, 5.
Et equidem dēscēbam ānimo, rēbarque fātūrum. M. A. 6, 690.
Cumque loqui pōtērit, mātrem faciōte pslātet. Ovid. M. 9, 378.
Scinditur incertum stūdia in contrāria vulgus. Virg. A. 2, 39.
Nos nūmērus stūmus, et frūges cōsumēre nātū. Hor. Ep. 1, 2, 27.

(a.) Exceptions in Increments in A.

The first increment of do is short; as, dāmus, dābāmus, dāret, dāturus, circumdāre, circumdābāmus.

(b.) Exceptions in Increments in E.

1. E before r is short in the first increment of all the present and imperfect tenses of the third conjugation, and in the second increment in bēris and bēre; as, rēgere (infin. and imperat.), rēgeris or rēgere (pres. ind. pass.), rēgerem and rēgerer (imp. subj.); amābēris, amābēre; mōnēbēris, mōnēbēre.

NOTE 1. In vellim, vellis, etc., from volo, (second person, regularly vōlis, by syncope and contraction vis), ē is not an increment, but represents the root vowel o, and is therefore short; § 284, and § 178, 1.

2. E is short before ram, rim, ro, and the persons formed from them; as, amāveram, amāverat, amāverim, mōnuērimus, razēro, audivēritis.

NOTE 2. In verbs which have been shortened by syncope or otherwise, e before r retains its original quantity; as, flēram, for flēvēram.

For the short e before runt, in the perfect indicative, as, steterunt, see Systole, § 307.

(c.) Exceptions in Increments in I.

1. I before v or s, in tenses formed from the second root, is long; as, pētiui, audivi, quæsiuit, divisiit, audivimus, divisimus, audivēram.

2. I is long, after the analogy of the fourth conjugation, in the final syllable of the third root of gaudeo, arcesso, divido, fūcesso, lūcesso, pēto, quæro, rēcenseo and obliviscor; as, gāvisus, arcessitus, divisus, fūcessitus, lūcessitus, pēlitus, quæsitus, rēcensitus, oblitus; gāvisūrus, etc.

3. I in the first increment of the fourth conjugation, except in imus of the perfect indicative, is long; as, audire, audīrem, audītus, audītūrus, pres. venimus, but in the perfect venimus. So in the ancient forms in ibam, ibo, of the fourth conjugation; as, nutribat, lēmibunt; and also in ibam and ibo, from eo.

NOTE 3. When a vowel follows, the i is short, by § 283; as, audīunt, audībā- dam.

4. I is long in the first and second persons plural of subjunctives in sim, sis, sit, etc., (§ 162, 1.); as, simus, sitis, velimus, velitis, and their compounds; as, posuimus, adsumus, mālimus, nōlimus. So also in nōlito, nōlite, nōlitūle, after the analogy of the fourth conjugation.

5. I in ris, rimus and ritis, in the future perfect and perfect subjunctive, is common; as, vidēris, Mart., occidēris, Hor.; vidēritis (Ovid), dōdēritis (Id.); fēcērimus (Cattull.), ēgērimus (Virg.)

(d.) Exceptions in Increments in U.

U is long in the increment of supines, and of participles formed from the third root of the verb; as, secūtus, solūtus, secūtūrus, solūtūrus.

RULES FOR THE QUANTITY OF PENULTIMATE AND ANTEPENULTIMATE SYLLABLES.

I. PENULTS.

§ 291. 1. Words ending in acus, icus, and icum, shorten the penult; as, amāricus, Ægyptiacus, rusticus, triticum, viaticum.

Except Dācus, māricus, opācus; amicus, apricus, ficus, mendicus, picus, posticus, pādicus, spicus, umbilicus, vicus.

2. Words ending in abrum, ubrum, acrum, and atrum, lengthen the penult; as, candelābrum, dēlabrum, lāvacrum, vērātrum.

3. Nouns in ca lengthen the penult; as, apōthēca, clodca, lactāca, lōrica, phōca.

Except ālīca, brassicā, dīca, fālīca, manīca, pāīca, perīca, scītīca, phālārīca, tīmīca, vōmīca; and also some nouns in ca derived from adjectives in icus; as, fabrīca, grammātica, etc. So mānica.

4. Patronymics in ades and ides shorten the penult; as, Atlantiādes, Priāmīdes.

Except those in ides which are formed from nouns in eus or ēs (nc); as, Atrīdes, from Atrēs; Neoclīdes, from Neoclēs; except, also, Amphitrāides, Bēlīdes, Amjclīdes, Lycurgīdes.

5. Patronymics and similar words in ais, eis, and ois, lengthen the penult; as, Achāis, Chrjstēis, Mindis. Except Phōcāis and Thēbāis. The penult of Nēreis is common.

6. Words in do lengthen the penult; as, vādo, cēdo, dulcēdo, formīdo, rādo, testādo. Except cōdo, dīdo, ēdo (to eat), comēdo, Macēdo, mōdo, sōlido, spādo, trēpido. Rudo is common.

7. Words in idus shorten the penult; those in udus lengthen it; as, callīdus, herbīdus, līmpīdus, lōīdus, perfidus; crūdus, lūdus, nūdus, sūdus, ūdus. Except īdus, fīdus, infīdus, nīdus, sīdus.

8. Nouns in ga and go lengthen the penult; as, sāga, collēga, aurīga, rāga; īmāgo, cālīgo, aurīgo. Except odīga, ossīfrāga, tōga, plāga, (a region, or a net), fūga and its compounds, stēga, eclōga, ēgo, harpāgo, līgo.

9. Words in le, les, and lis, lengthen the penult; as, crīmāle, mantēle, ancile; ales, miles, prōles; annālīs, crūdēlīs, ctōlīs, cārālīs.—Except mālē;—verbals in īlīs and bīlīs; as, āgīlīs, āmābīlīs;—adjectives in atīlīs; as, umbrātīlīs;—and also, indōles, sōbōles; pērisclīlīs, dapeīlīs, grācīlīs, hāmīlīs, pārīlīs, stīlīs, stērīlīs, māgīlīs, strīgīlīs.

10. Words in elus, ela, elum, lengthen the penult; as, phāsēlus, quērēla, prētum. Except gēlus, gētum, scētus.

11. Diminutives in olus, ola, olum, ulus, ula, ulum, also words in ilus, and those in ulus, ula, and ulum, of more than two syllables, shorten the penult; as, urceolus, filiola, lectulus, ratuncula, corculum, pabulum; rutilus, garrulus, fabula. Except asilus.

12. Words in ma lengthen the penult; as, fama, poëma, rima, plama. Except anima, côma, décima, lacrima, victima, hama.

13. A vowel before final men or mentum is long; as, ludmen, grômen, crimen, flamen, jamentum, dramentum. Except lâmen, côlmen, Hymen, ilamentum, and a few verbal nouns derived from verbs of the second and third conjugations; as, âkimentum, dôctimen or dôcumentum, imôlâmentum, mônâmentum, régimen, spécimen, légimen, etc.

14. Words ending in imus shorten the penult; as, ânimus, décimus, finitimus, fortissimus, maximus. Except binus, litus, minus, optimus, quadrismus, simus, trismus, and two superlatives, imus and primus.

NOTE. When an adjective ends in imus for imus, the quantity remains the same; as, décimus, optimus, maximus, for décimus, etc.

15. A, e, o, and u, before final mus and mum, are long; as, râmus, rêmus, extrêmus, prômus, dâmus, pômum, vôlênum. Except âtômus, balâdum, cinnâdum, dômus, glômus, hûmus, postûmus, thâlâmum, tômus, collâmum, nêmus.

16. (a.) Words in na, ne, ni, and nis, lengthen the penult; as, lâna, drêna, cârîna, mâtrôna, lâna, mâne, septîmi, octôni, indânis, finis, immânis. Except advêna, cottâna, plûsâna, mîna, gêna, bêne, sine, cânis, cînis, jûvênis; and the following in ina,—buccina, dômina, fiscina, femîna, fuscina, lâmina, mâchina, pâgina, pâtina, sarcina, tibicina, trâtina; and in plur. âpinâ, mînâ, nundânâ. So compounds of gêno; as, indâgêna.

(b.) Verbs in ino and inor shorten the penult; as, destîno, fascîno, inquîno, sîno, crimînor. Except festîno, propîno, âgîno, optînor, and the compounds of cîno; as, inclîno, etc.

17. (a.) Adjectives in inus, when they express time, or indicate a material or an inanimate substance, shorten the penult; as, crastînus, diutînus, pristînus, peregrînus: fâgînus, crôcînus, hyâcînthînus, âdâmantînus, crystallînus, oleâgînus, bombîcînus. Except mâtûrînus, repentînus, vesperînus.

(b.) Other adjectives and words in inus and in inum lengthen the penult; as, canînus, binus, peregrînus, mârtînus, clandestînus, sâpinus: linum. Except dâcinus, âsinus, coccînus, côminus, emînus, côphînus, dôminus, fâcînus, fâtîcînus, prôtînus, sînus, terminus, gêminus, circînus, minus, vâlicînus, succînum, fascînum.

18. A, e, o, and u, before final nus and num, are long; as, urbânus, âtrênus, patrônus, prônus, mânus, tribânus, fânum, vênênum, dônum. Except ânus, an old woman, galbânus, mânus, ocêânus, plûtânus, ebênus, gênus, limigênus, pênus, lênus, Vênus, ômus, bônus, âonus, thrônus; lagânum, peucedânum, pôpânum, timpânum, abrôlônum.

19. Words ending in ba, bo, pa, and po, shorten the penult; as, fâba, jûba, syllâba; bîbo, cûbo, prôbo; âlâpa, lîpa, scâpha; crêpo, partîcipo. Except glêba, scriba, bâbo, glâbo, libo, nâbo, scribo, sîpho, cêpa, cûpa, pâpa, pîpa, rîpa, scâpa, stîpa; câpo, repo, stîpo.

20. Words in al, ar, are, and aris, lengthen the penult; as, tribūnāl, vectīgāl: lāpānar, pulvīnar; altāre, lāqueāre; nāris. Except ānīmāl, cāpitāl, cūbītāl, lōrāl, jūbar, sālar, māre, bīmāris, hīlāris, canthāris, cappāris, lōdris.

21. Before final ro or ror, a and e are short; i, o, and u, are long; as, āro, pāro, fēro, gēro, āro, cēlēro, tempēro, quēror; mīror, spīro, tīro; auclōro, ignōro, ōro; cūro, dūro, figūro; lāror. Except dēclāro, pēro, spēro; fōro, mō- ror, sōror, vōro, fūro, sātūro; and derivatives from genitives increasing short; as, augūror, dēcōro, mēmōro, murmāro, etc.; from augur, augūris; dēcus, dēcō- ris, etc.

22. Before final rus, ra, rum, e is short; the other vowels are long; as, mērum, mērus, hēdēra, ārum, cēlērum; cārus, mīrus, mōrus, mārus, gīrus; āra, spīra, ōra, nātūra, lōrum.

Except, 1. auslērus, gālērus, plērus, prōcērus, sincērus, sērus, sēvērus, vērus, crātēra, cēra, pēra, panthēra, stātēra.

Exc. 2. barbārus, cammārus, cāmūrus, canthārus, chōrus, fōrus, hellēbōrus, mīrus, ōpīpārus, ōvipārus, phosphōrus, pīrus, sātīrus, scārus, spārus, variārus, lōrus, zēphīrus; amphōra, ancōra, cithāra, hāra, līra, mōra, pūrpāra, philīra, pīra, sālūra; fōrum, gārum, pārum, suppārum.

23. Adjectives in osus lengthen the penult; as, fūmōsus, vinōsus.

24. Nouns in etas and itas shorten the penult; as, piētās, ciuitās, bōnitas.

25. Adverbs in tim lengthen the penult, those in iter and itus shorten it; as, stātīm, (constantly), virtitīm, tribūtīm; acriter, functus. Except stātīm, (immediately), offātīm.

26. (a.) Words in ates, itis, otis, and in ata, eta, ota, uta, lengthen the penult, as, vātes, pēnātes, vītis, mītis, cāryōtis, lōdrīōtis, pirāta, mēta, poēta, ālūta, cicūta.

Except stīs, pōtis, drāpēta, nōta, rōta.

(b.) Nouns in ita shorten the penult; as, āmīta, nāvīta, orbīta, sēmīta. Except pītuīta.

27. Nouns in atum, itum, utum, lengthen the penult; as, lāpātum, acōnitum, vērūtum. Except dēfrūtum, pulpitum, pēlōritum, lūtum (mud), compūtum.

28. Nouns and adjectives ending in tus lengthen the penult; as, barbātus, grātus, bolētus, fācētus, crīnitus, pēritus, agrōtus, lētus, argūtus, hīr- sūtus. Except cātus, lātus, (-ēris), impētus, mētus, vēgētus, vētus; anhēlitus, digī- tus, grātuitus, hālitus, hospītus, servītus, spirītus; antīdōtus, nōtus, quōtus, lōtus (= great); arbūtus, pūtus; inclītus; and derivatives from perfect participles having a short penult; as, exercītus, hābitus.

29. A penultimate vowel before v is long; as, clāva, olīva, āves, nāvis, civis, pāpāver, pāvo, prīvo, ovum, prāvus, astīvus, fūgīvius. Except avis, brēvis, grāvus, lēvis, ovis; cavo, grāvo, jāvo, lāvo, lūvo, ovo; āvus, cāvus, fāvus, nōvus, jāvor, pāvov, mōvem.

30. Words ending in dex, dix, mex, nix, lex, rex, lengthen the penult; as, cōdex, jūdex; lōdix, rādix; cīnēx, pāmēx; jūnīx; ilēx; cārexx, mārēx.

Except cālex, ālex, rāmēx.

II. ANTEPENULTS.

§ 292. 1. I is short in diminutives in icūlus and icellus (a, um), whether nouns or adjectives; as, collicūlus, dulcicūlus, crāticūla, pellicūla, mollicellus. Except words in which the preceding vowel is short; as, cāticūla, cānicūla: or in which i is long in the primitive; as, cornicūla, from cornix, -icis.

2. Numerals in ginti, ginta, ėni, and esīmus, lengthen the antepenult; as, vīginti, quādrāginta, tricēni, quinquagēsīmus.

3. O and u before final lentus are short; as, vīolēntus, fraudulēntus, pulvērulēntus, trāculēntus.

4. A vowel before final nea, neo, nia, nio, nius, nium, is long; as, drānea, līnea, cāneo, mānia, pūnio, Fāvōnius, patrimōnium. Except castānea, ānea, mōneo, mīneo, mōneo, sēneo, lēneo, ignōminia, luscīnia, vēnia, lānio, vēnio, ingēnium, gēnium, sēnio, sēnium; words in cinium, as, lēnōcinium; and derivatives in onius, when o in the root of the primitive is short; as, Agāmēmnōnius, from Agāmēmnōn, -ōnis.

5. Words ending in areo, arius, arium, erium, orius, orium, lengthen the antepenult; as, āreo, cibārius, plantārium, dictērium, censōrius, tentōrium. Except cāreo, vārius, dēsīdērium, impērium, māgīstērium, ministērium.

6. Adjectives in āticus, āllis, lengthen the antepenult; as, āquātīcus, plumātīlis. Except some Greek words in āticus; as, grammātīcus.

7. I before final tūdo is short; as, alītūdo, longītūdo.

8. Verbals in āllis lengthen a but shorten i in the antepenult; as, āmābīlis, mirābīlis; crēdībīlis, terrībīlis. In hābīlis, b belongs to the root.

9. U before v is short, (except in Jūverna); as, jūvénis, jūvénālis, jūvénīltas, flāvius, dīlūvium.

III. PENULT OF PROPER NAMES.

§ 293. 1. Patrials and proper names of more than two syllables, found in the poets with the following terminations, shorten the penult:—

ba,	de,	o, ⁶	ges,	dus, ¹⁸	ena, ¹⁹	arus,	atus, ²²
ca, ¹	le, ⁴	on, ⁷	les,	eus, ¹⁴	anes,	erus, ²¹	itus, ²³
la, ²	pe, ⁵	os, ⁸	lis, ¹⁰	gus, ¹⁵	enes,	yrus,	otus, ²⁴
be,	re,	er, ⁹	bus,	lus, ¹⁶	aris,	asus,
ce, ³	al,	mas,	cus, ¹¹	mus, ¹⁷	yris,	osus,
che,	il,	ras,	chus, ¹²	phus, ¹³	asis, ²⁰	usus,

Exceptions.

¹Mārica, Nāsica.—²Eriphyla, Messala, Philōmēla, Suādēla.—³Bērēnice.—⁴Eriphyle, Neōbble, Pērīmēla.—⁵Eurōpe, Sinōpe.—⁶Carthāgo, Cūpāvo, Cūpido, Origo, Theāno.—⁷Alēmon, Anthēdon, Chalcedon, Iāson, Philēmon, Pōlypēmon, Sarpēdon, Thermōdon.—⁸Cercyrōs, Pēpārsthos, Pharsālos, Sērīphos.—⁹Mēlcāger.—¹⁰Bessālis, Eumēlia, Jūvēnālis, Martiālis, Phāsālis, Stymphālis.—¹¹Bēnācus, Calcus, Grānicus, Nūmicus, Trivicus.—¹²Ophituchus.—¹³Abydus.—¹⁴Cāphāreus, Enipeus, Prōmētheus, Phōrōneus, Salmōneus, Oileus.—¹⁵Cēthēgus.—¹⁶Names in -clus, in -olus (except Eōlus, Naubōlus), in -bulus, (except Bibūlus) Eumēlus, Gætūlus, Iūlus, Massylus, Orbēlus, Pharsālus, Sardānāpālus, Stymphālus.—¹⁷Some in -dēmus and -phēmus; as, Acādēmus, Pōlyphēmus.—¹⁸Serīphus.—¹⁹Alcmēna, Athēna, Cāmēna, Flēna, Messēna, Mūrēna, Mýcēna.—²⁰Amāsia.—²¹Hōmērus, Ibērus.—²²Arātus, Cērātus, Torquātus.—²³Hērāclitus, Hermāphrōditus.—²⁴Būthrōtus.

2. Proper names of more than two syllables, found in the poets with the following terminations, lengthen the penult:—

ana, ¹	sa,	num, ⁷	tas,	nus, ¹²	urus,	etus, ¹⁶
ina, ²	ta, ⁴	tum, ¹³	des, ⁹	pus, ¹³	esus, ¹⁴	utus, ona, ³	tes, ⁵	or, ⁸	tes, ¹⁰	irus,	isus,	ytus, ¹⁷
yna,	ene, ⁶	nas,	tis, ¹¹	orus, ¹⁴	ysus,	xus.

Exceptions.

¹Sēquāna.—²Mūtina, Prōserpina, Ruspina, Sārsina.—³Axōna, Matrōna.—⁴Dalmāta, Prōchyta, Sarmāta, Lāpitha.—⁵Galātē, Jaxāmētē, Massāgētē, Mācētē, Saurōmātē.—⁶Clymēne, Hēlēne, Melpōmēne, Nyctimēne.—⁷Arimīnum, Drēpanum.—⁸Nūmītor.—⁹Miltiādes, Pylādes, Sōtādes, Thūcydides; patronymics in -des, (§ 291, 4,) and plurals in -ades.—¹⁰Antiphātes, Chārites, Eurybātes, Ichnōbātes, Euergetēs, Massāgetēs, and all names in -crates.—¹¹Derctētis.—¹²Apīdānus, Apōnus, Cārānus, Chrysōgōnus, Ciminus, Clymēnus, Concānus, Dardānus, Diādūmēnus, Eārinus, Eridānus, Fācinus, Hēlēnus, Libānus, Mōrini, Mýcōnus, Nebriphōnus, Olēnus, Pēriclymēnus, Rhōdānus, Santōnus, Sēquāni, Stēphānus, Telēgōnus, Terminus, and names in -gonus and -xenus.—¹³Edipus.—¹⁴Pācōrus, Bospōrus, and names in -chorus and -phorus; as, Stēsichōrus, Phosphōrus.—¹⁵Ephēsus, Vogēsus, Vōlēsus.—¹⁶Lāpētus, Tāygētus, Vēnētus.—¹⁷Epytus, Anytus, Eurytus, Hippolytus.

3. The penultimate vowel of the following proper names, and adjectives derived from proper names, though followed by a vowel, is long. See § 283, I. Exc. 6.

Enēas, Æthion, Achēlōus, Achillēus, Alcýonēus, Alexandrīa, Alōeus, Alphēus, Aminēus, Amphīāraus, Amphigēnia, Amphion, Amythāon, Arion, Anchisēus, Atlantēus, Antiochia, Biōnēus, Cēsāreā, Cālaurēa, Calliōpēa, Cassiōpēa, Cleanthēas, Cydōnēus, Cymōdōcēa, Cýthērēa, Dārtus (-eus), Dēldāmia, Didymāon, Diōmēdēus, Dolichāon, Echion, Elēus, Endymionēus, Enyo, Eōus, Erēbēus, Erechthēus, Galātēa, Gigantēus, Hērāclēa (-eus), Hippodāmīa, Hypērion, Ilithyia, Imāon, Iōlāus, Iphigēnia, Ixion, Lāodāmīa, Lātōus, Lesbōus, Lycāon, Māchāon, Mausōlēum, Mēdēa, Mēnēlāus, Mēthion, Myrtōus, Ophion, Orion, Orithyia, Orphēus, Pallantēum (-us), Paudion, Paphagēa, Pēnēus, Penthesillēa, Phœbēus, Poppēa, Protēsillāus, Pyrēnēus, Sardcus, Thāia.

NOTE. Eus in the termination of Greek proper names, is commonly a diphthong; as, Aiceus, Ōneus, Orpheus, Pēleus, Perseus, Prōteus, Thēseus, Tydeus, which are dissyllables; Briāreus, Enipeus, Macāreus, Typhōeus, which are trisyllables, Idomēneus, etc. Cf. § 283, Exc. 6, Note 2. But in those which in Greek are written εως (eios), eus forms two syllables; as, Alphēus. So also in adjectives in eus, whether of Greek or Latin origin; as, Erēbēus, Erechthēus, Orphēus; aurēus, lignēus.

QUANTITY OF FINAL SYLLABLES.

I. VOWELS.

MONOSYLLABLES.

§ 294. (a.) All monosyllables, except enclitics, ending in a vowel, are long; as, ā, āh, dā, sīā, ē, dē, mē, tē, sē, nē, rē, ī, fī, hī, quī, nī, sī, Ō or ōh, dō, prō, prōh, quō, sō, tō.

POLYSYLLABLES.

A final.

1. A final, in words declined, is short; as, mūsā, templā, cāpī-tā, Tȳdeā. Thus,

Mūsā mīhi causas mēmōrā; quo nūmīne laeo.... Virg. A. 1, 8.

Exc. A final is long in the ablative of the first declension, and in the vocative of Greek nouns in as and es; as,

Mūsā, fundā; Ō Enēā, Ō Pollā, Ō Anchusā.

2. A final, in words not declined, is long; as, āmā, frustrā, antēā, ergā, intrā. Thus,

Extrā fortūnam est quidquid dōnātur amīcis. Mart. Epig. 6, 42, 7.

Exc. A final is short in ciā, tūā, quā, and in pūtā, when used adverbially, in the sense of 'for example.' It is sometimes short in the preposition contra, and in numerals ending in ginta; as, trīginta, etc. In postea, it is common.

A final is also short in the names of Greek letters; as, alphā, bētā, etc., and in tūrāntātūrā, the imitated sound of the trumpet.

E final.

§ 295. E final, in words of two or more syllables, is short; as, nātē, patrē, ipsē, currē, rēgērē, nempē, antē. Thus,

Incipē, parvū puer, risu cognoscere matrem. Virg. E. 4, 60.

REMARK. The enclitics -que, -ne, -ve, -ce, -te, -pte, etc., as they are not used alone, have e short, according to the rule; as, nēquē, hūjuscē, suapitē. Cf. § 294, (a.)

Exc. 1. E final is long in nouns of the first and fifth declensions; as, Calliōpē, Tȳdītē, fidē. So also in the compounds of rē and dīs; as, quadrē, hōdiē, pridē, postridē, quōtidē, and in the ablative fāmē, originally of the fifth declension.

Exc. 2. E final is long in Greek vocatives from nouns in -es, of the third declension; as, Achillē, Hippomēnē; and in Greek neuters plural; as, cētē, mētē, pēlāgē, Tempē.

Exc. 3. In the second conjugation, e final is long in the second person singular of the imperative active; as, dōcē, mōnē;—but it is sometimes short in cāve, vāle, and vīde.

Exc. 4. E final is long in adverbs formed from adjectives of the second declension; as, placide, pulchrē, valde for valide, maxime; but it is short in bene, male, inferne, and superne.

Exc. 5. Fere, ferme, and ohe, have the final e long.

I final.

§ 296. I final is long; as, dōminī, fili, classi, doceri, si. Thus,

Quid dōmini facient, audent cum tāla fūres. Virg. E. 8, 16.

Exc. 1. (a.) I final is common in mīhi, tibi, sibi, vbi, and ubi.

(b.) In ubique and commonly in ibidem it is long, but in ubique and ubique it is short.—(c.) In mihi, quāsi, and cui, when a dissyllable, i final is common, but usually short. In ubique and ubique, and rarely, also, in ubi, it is short.

Exc. 2. I final is short in the dative singular of Greek nouns of the third declension, which increase in the genitive; as, Pallādē, Minervā, Tēphē.

Exc. 3. I final is short in the vocative of Greek nouns in -is; as, Alexi, Daphni, Parti. But it is long in vocatives from Greek nouns in -is, (us) -entes; as, Simoi, Pyro.

Exc. 4. I final is short in Greek datives and ablatives plural in -ei, or, before a vowel, -sin; as, Dryadi, herōi, Troāsin.

O final.

§ 297. O final, in words of two or more syllables, is common; as, virgō, amō, quandō. Thus, Ergo mētu cāpita Scylla est inimica pāterno. Virg. Cir. 386.

Ergo sollicitas tu causa, pecunia, vitae es! Prop. 8, 6, 1.

Exc. 1. O final is long in the dative and ablative singular; as, dōminō, regnō, bonō, suō, illō, eō.

Exc. 2. O final is long in ablatives used as adverbs; as, certo, falso, merito, vulgō, eō, quō; and also in omniō, in ergō, 'for the sake of,' and in the interjection iō.

REMARK 1. The final o of verbs is almost always long in poets of the Augustan age.

REM. 2. In poets subsequent to the Augustan age, final o in verbs, in gerunds, and in the adverbs adeo, ideo, ergo, sēro, vērō, porro, retro, immo, idcirco, subito, and postremo, is sometimes short.

Exc. 3. O final is short in cito, illico, profecto, and the compounds of mōdo; as, dummodō, postmodō, etc.; and in ego and homo it is more frequently short than long.

Exc. 4. O final in Greek nouns written with an omēga (ω) is long; as, Clō, Didō, Athō, and Andrōgēō, (gen.)

U final.

§ 298. 1. U final is long; as, vultū, cornū, Panthū, dictū, diū. Thus, Vultū, quo oculum tempestātesque sērēnat. Virg. A. 1, 255.

Exc. Indē and nēdē, ancient forms of in and non, have e short. U is also short in terminations in us short, when s is removed by elision; as, contentus?, for contentūs. See § 305, 2.

Y final

2. Y final is short; as, Mōlŷ, Tiphŷ. Thus,

Mōlŷ vōcant sup̄eri: nigrā rādice tēstur. Ovid. M. 14, 292.

Exc. Y in the dative Tīthŷ, being formed by contraction, is long. § 283, III.

I L CONSONANTS.

MONOSYLLABLES.

§ 299. 1. Monosyllabic substantives ending in a consonant are long; all other monosyllables ending in a consonant are short; as, sōl, vīr, fūr, jūs, splēn, vēr, fār, līr, Nār, pār, Sēr, fūr, fūs, mās, rēs, pēs, Dīs, glīs, līs, vīs, flōs, mōs, rōs, Trōs, ōs, (ōris), dōs, grūs, rūs, tūs;—nēc, in, ān, ab, dē, quid, quis, quidē, et; as,

Ipsē docet quid āgam. Fūs est et ab hoste dōcēri. Ovid. M. 4, 428.

Vēr ādeo frondi nēmōrum, vēr ūtile sīvis. Verg. G. 2, 323.

NOTE. The rules for the quantity of final syllables ending in a consonant imply that the consonant is single, and that it is preceded by a single vowel. If otherwise the syllable will be long by § 283, IV. and II.

Exc. 1. Ōr, fēl, mēl, pōl, vīr, ūs (gen. ossis), and probably vas (vādis), are short.

Exc. 2. En, nōn, quīn, sīn, crās, plūs, cūr, and pār, are long: so also are particles and pronouns ending in c, except nēc, which is short, and the pronouns hic and hoc, in the nominative and accusative, which are common.

Exc. 3. Monosyllabic plural cases of pronouns and forms of verbs in as, es, and is, are long; as, hās, quās, hōs, nōs, vōs, quōs, hīs, quīs;—dās, flēs, stēs, is, flēs, sis, vīs; except ēs from sum which is short.

Exc. 4. The abridged imperatives retain the quantity of their root; as, dāc, dāc, from dīco, dāco; fāc, fēr, from fācio, fēro.

POLYSYLLABLES.

D, L, N, R, T, final

2. Final syllables ending in d, l, n, r, and t, are short; as, illūd, consūl, carmēn, pāter, cāpūt. Thus,

Obstupuit simul ipse, simul percussus Achates. Verg. A. 1, 513.

Nēmēn Artōnium Sicūlas implēvērūt urbes. Ovid. F. 2, 96.

Dum loquor, horrōr, habet; parque est mēmīnās dōlōris. Id. M. 9, 291.

Exc. 1. E in lēn is long.

Exc. 2. In Greek nouns, nominatives in n (except those in on, written with an omicron), masculine or feminine accusatives in an or en, and genitives plural in on, lengthen the final syllable; as,

Tūān, Orīōn, Ānēān, Anchīsēn, Calliōpēn; ēpigrammātōn.

Exc. 3. Ær, æthër, and nouns in ër which form their genitive in ëris, lengthen the final syllable; as, cratër, solër. So also lër; but the compound Celäber has sometimes in Martial its last syllable short.

REMARK. A final syllable ending in t, may be rendered long by a diphthong, by contraction, by syncope, or by position; as, aut, äbit for äbiti, fumät, for fumävit, ämant. See § 283, II. III. IV., and § 162, 7, (d.)

M final.

NOTE. Final m with the preceding vowel is almost always cut off, when the next word begins with a vowel. See Echthipsis, § 305, 2.

3. Final syllables ending in m, when it is not cut off, are short; as,

Quam laudas, plümä? cocto nüm ädest hönor idem. Hor. S. 2, 2, 23.

REMARK. Hence in composition the final syllables of cum and circum are short; as, cümädo, circümädo.

C final.

4. Final syllables ending in c are long; as, älëc, illïc, istäc, illüc. Thus,

Illïc indocto primum se exëruit arcu. Tib. 2, 1, 69.

Exc. The final syllable of dönëc is short; as,

Dönëc ëris fälix, multos nümäräbils ämicos. Ovid. Trist. 1, 9, 5.

AS, ES, and OS, final.

§ 300. Final syllables in as, es, and os, are long; as, mädäs, püttäs, ämdäs, Äntäs, quäs, sermönäs, diäs, Pëndlöpäs, däcentiäs, mönäs, hönäs, vüräs, döminäs. Thus, Häs autem terräs, Itällique hanc litoris öram. Virg. A. 3, 396.

Si mädö däs illis cultus, stümilësque pärätus. Ovid. M. 6, 454.

Exc. 1. (a.) AS. As is short in ändäs, in Greek nouns whose genitive ends in ääs or ädos; as, Arcäs, Palläs; and in Greek accusatives plural of the third declension; as, hëródäs, lampädäs.

(b.) As is short also in Latin nouns in as, ädos, formed like Greek patronymics; as, Appidäs.

Exc. 2. ES. (a.) Final es is short in nouns and adjectives of the third declension which increase short in the genitive; as, hospës, äimës, hëbës; gen. hospëtis, etc.

(b.) But it is long in äbiäs, äriäs, päriäs, Öriäs, and päs, with its compounds cornipës, sönipës, etc.

(c.) Es, in the present tense of sum and its compounds, and in the preposition pëndes, is short.

(d.) Es is short in Greek neuters in es; as, cäcöthëäs, and in Greek nominatives and vocatives plural from nouns of the third declension, which increase in the genitive; as, Arcädäs, Trödäs, Amazönäs; from Arcas, Arcädäs, etc.

Exc. 3. OS. (a.) Os is short in compös, impös, and ös (osis), with its compound exös.

(b.) Os is short in Greek nouns and cases written in the original with omacron; as (1) in all neuters; as, chabē, ēpōs, Argōs; (2) in all nouns of the second declension; as, Iliās, Tŷrōs, Dēlōs; except those whose genitive is in ō, (Greek ō); as, Athōs, gen. Athōs; (3) in genitives singular of the third declension; as, Pallādōs, Tēthyōs, from Pallās and Tēthys.

IS, US, and YS, final.

§ 301. Final syllables in is, us, and ys, are short; as, turris, militis, mīlis, amālis, amōlis, mōlis; pectus, dōnus, ējis, amānis, rursus, tēdis; Cūpis, lēis. Thus,

Non āpis inde tūlit collectos sēdūle fiores. Ovid. M. 12, 928.

Sertus aut citius sēdem prēpārānis ad unam. Id. M. 10, 88.

At Cūpis, et quōrum mēllor sententia menti. Virg. A. 2, 85.

Exc. 1. IS. (a.) Is is long in plural cases; as, māsis, nōbis; omnis, urbis, (for omnis, urbīs); quis, (for quīs or quibus). So also in the adverbs grātis, ingrātis, and fōris, which are in reality datives or ablatives plural.

Et liquidī simūl ignis; ut āis exordia pīmis. Virg. A. 6, 83.

Quis ante trā patrum Trōjē sub mōnibus altis. Id. A. 1, 95.

Non omnis arbusta jūvant, hūmilesque myrtes. Id. E. 4, 2.

Adde tūt ēgrēgias urbis, opērumque libērem. Id. G. 2, 155.

(b.) Is is long in the nominative of nouns whose genitive ends in īis, īnis, or ōnis; as, Samnis, Sālūinis, Simois.

(c.) Is is long in the second person singular of the present indicative active of the fourth conjugation; as, audis, nescis. So also in the second persons, fis, is, sis, vis, vēlis, and their compounds; as, adsis, possis, quavis, mālis, nōlis, etc. Cf. § 299, 1, Exc. 8.

(d.) Ris, in the future perfect and perfect subjunctive, is common; as, videris.

Exc. 2. US. (a.) Us is long in nouns of the third declension which increase long, and in the genitive singular, and the nominative, accusative, and vocative plural of the fourth declension, (§ 89, Rem., and § 283, III.); as, tellus, virtus, incus;—fructus. But pōlus, with the us short, occurs in Horace, Art. Poet. 65.

(b.) Us is long in Greek nouns written in the original with the diphthong ous (ōur); whether in the nominative or genitive; as, nom. Amāthūs, Opūs, Edipūs, tripūs, Panthūs; gen. Didūs, Sapphūs. But compounds of pus (πους), when of the second declension, have us short; as, pōlīpus.

NOTE. The last syllable of every verse, (except the anapæstic and the Ionic a minōre), may be either long or short at the option of the poet.

REMARK. By this is meant, that, although the measure require a long syllable, a short one may be used in its stead; and a long syllable may be used where a short one is required; as in the following verses, where the short syllable ma stands instead of a long one, and the long syllable cu instead of a short one:—

Sanguineaue mēnu crēpītantia concūtit armē. Ovid. M. 1, 143.

Non ēget Mauri jūcūlis, nec arcē. Hor. Od. 1, 22, 2.

VERSIFICATION.

FEET.

§ 302. A foot is a combination of two or more syllables of a certain quantity.

Feet are either simple or compound. Simple feet consist of two or three syllables; compound feet of four.

I. SIMPLE FEET.

1. Of two Syllables.

Spondee ,.....	two long, — — ; as,.....	fāndant.
Pyrrhic ,.....	two short, — — ; as,.....	Déus.
Trochee , or choree ,.....	a long and a short, — — ; as,.....	ārmā.
Iambus ,.....	a short and a long, — — ; as,.....	ērānt.

2. Of three Syllables.

Dactyl ,.....	a long and two short, — — — ; as,.....	cōrpōrā.
Anapæst ,.....	two short and a long, — — — ; as,.....	ādmīni.
Tribrach ,.....	three short, — — — ; as,.....	fūcērē.
Molossus ,.....	three long, — — — ; as,.....	cōniēndānt.
Amphibrach ,.....	a short, a long, and a short, — — — ; as,.....	āmārē.
Amphimæcrus , or Cretic ,.....	a long, a short, and a long, — — — ; as,.....	cāstīdā.
Bacchius ,.....	a short and two long, — — — ; as,.....	Cālōnā.
Antibacchius ,.....	two long and a short, — — — ; as,.....	Rōmānā.

II. COMPOUND FEET.

Dispondee ,.....	a double spondee, — — — — ; as,.....	cōnflāxērānt.
Proceleusmatic ,.....	a double Pyrrhic, — — — — ; as,.....	hōmīnībūs.
Ditrochee ,.....	a double trochee, — — — — ; as,.....	cōmprōbāvīt.
Diambus ,.....	a double iambus, — — — — ; as,.....	āmāvērānt.
Greater Ionic ,.....	a spondee and a Pyrrhic, — — — — ; as,.....	cōrrēximās.
Smaller Ionic ,.....	a Pyrrhic and a spondee, — — — — ; as,.....	prōpērāvānt.
Choriambus ,.....	a choree and an iambus, — — — — ; as,.....	tērrificānt.
Antispast ,.....	an iambus and a choree, — — — — ; as,.....	ādhasissē.
First epitrit ,.....	an iambus and a spondee, — — — — ; as,.....	āmāvērānt.
Second epitrit ,.....	a trochee and a spondee, — — — — ; as,.....	cōndūlōrēs.
Third epitrit ,.....	a spondee and an iambus, — — — — ; as,.....	discōrādis.
Fourth epitrit ,.....	a spondee and a trochee, — — — — ; as,.....	ādūzistis.
First pæon ,.....	a trochee and a Pyrrhic, — — — — ; as,.....	tēmpōribūs.
Second pæon ,.....	an iambus and a Pyrrhic, — — — — ; as,.....	pōtēntiā.
Third pæon ,.....	a Pyrrhic and a trochee, — — — — ; as,.....	ānimātūs.
Fourth pæon ,.....	a Pyrrhic and an iambus, — — — — ; as,.....	cēlērītās.

REMARK. Those feet are called isochronous, which consist of equal times; as the spondee, the dactyl, the anapæst, and the proceleusmatic, one long time being considered equal to two short.

METRE.

§ 303. 1. Metre is an arrangement of syllables and feet according to certain rules.

2. In this general sense, it comprehends either an entire verse, a part of a verse, or any number of verses.

3. Metre is divided into dactylic, anapæstic, iambic, trochaic, choriambic, and Ionic. These names are derived from the original or fundamental foot employed in each.

4. A metre or measure, in a specific sense, is either a single foot, or a combination of two feet. In the dactylic, choriambic, and Ionic metres, a measure consists of one foot; in the other metres, of two feet. Two feet constituting a measure are sometimes called a syzygy.

VERSES.

§ 304. A verse is a certain number of feet, arranged in a regular order, and constituting a line of poetry.

1. Two verses are called a distich; a half verse, a hemistich.

2. Verses are of different kinds, denominated sometimes, like the different species of metre, from the foot which chiefly predominates in them; as, dactylic, iambic, etc.;—sometimes from the number of feet or metres which they contain; as, sēnārius, consisting of six feet; octōnārius, of eight feet; mōnōmēter, consisting of one measure; dimēter, of two; trimēter, tetramēter, pentamēter, hexamēter;—sometimes from a celebrated author who used a particular species; as, Sapphic, Anacreontic, Alcaic, Asclepiadic, Glyconic, Phalæcian, Sotadic, Archilochian, Alcmanian, Pherecratic, Aristophanic, etc., from Sappho, Anacreon, Alcæus, Asclepiādes, Glŷcon, Phalæcus, Sotādes, Archilōchus, Alcman, Pherecrātes, Aristophānes, etc.—and sometimes from the particular uses to which they were applied; as, the prosodiac, from its use in solemn processions, the paræmiac, from its frequent use in proverbs.

3. A verse, with respect to the metres which it contains, may be complete, deficient, or redundant.

(1.) A verse which is complete is called acatalectic.

(2.) A verse which is deficient, if it wants one syllable at the end, is called catalectic; if it wants a whole foot or half a metre, it is called brachycatalectic.

(3.) A verse which wants a syllable at the beginning, is called acephalous.

(4.) A verse which has a redundant syllable or foot, is called hypercatalectic or hypermēter.

4. Hence, the complete name of every verse consists of three terms—the first referring to the species, the second to the number of metres, and the third to the ending; as, the dactylic trimēter catalectic

5. A verse or portion of a verse of any kind (measured from the beginning) which contains three half feet, or a foot and a half, is called a trihēmimēris; if it contains five half feet, or two feet and a half, it is called a pentihēmimēris; if seven half feet, or three feet and a half, a hepthēmimēris; if nine half feet, or four feet and a half, an ennehēmimēris. A portion of a verse consisting of one whole metre and a half, is called a hēmimētrius, as being the half of a trimeter.

NOTE. The respective situation of each foot in a verse is called its place.

6. SCANNING is the dividing of a verse into the feet of which it is composed.

REMARK. In order to scan correctly, it is necessary to know the quantity of each syllable, and also to understand the following poetic usages, which are sometimes called

FIGURES OF PROSODY.

SYNALŒPHA.

§ 305. 1. Synalœpha is the elision of a final vowel or diphthong in scanning, when the following word begins with a vowel.

Thus, terra antiqua is read terr' antiqua; Dardānidas infensi, Dardānid' infensi; vento huc, vent' huc. So, Quidve mōror? si omnes āno ordīne hābētis Achivos. Virg. A. 2, 102.

Which is scanned thus—

Quidve mōror? s' omnes ān' ordīn' hābētis Achivos.

(1.) The interjections O, heu, ah, proh, væ, vah, are not elided; as,

O et de Iātriā, O et de gente Sābinā. Ovid. M. 14, 882.

REMARK. But O, though not elided, is sometimes made short; as,

Te Cōrydon O Alexi; trāhit sua quemque vōluptas. Virg. E. 2, 65.

(2.) Other long vowels and diphthongs sometimes remain unelided, in which case, when in the thesis of a foot, they are commonly made short; as,

Victor āpud rāpidum Sīmōnta sūb Ilīō alto. Virg. A. 5, 261.

Annī tempōre eo quī Etēsia esse fērantur. Lucr. 8, 717.

Ter sunt cōnātī impōnere Pelīō Ossam. Virg. G. 1, 281.

Glauco et Pānōpēæ, et Inō Mēlicertæ. Id. G. 1, 436.

(3.) Rarely a short vowel, also, remains without elision; as,

Et vērā incessu pātuit dē. Ille ūbi mātrem.... Virg. A. 1, 406.

(4.) Synalœpha in a monosyllable occasionally occurs; as,

Si ad vitīlām spectas. nīhil est, quod pocūla laudes. Virg. E. 3, 48.

For synalœpha at the end of a line, see Synapheia, § 307, 3.

ECTHLIPSIS.

2. Ecthlipsis is the elision of a final m with the preceding vowel, when the following word begins with a vowel. Thus,

O cētes hōmīnum, O quantū est in rēbus Ināne! Pers. 1, 1.

Which is thus scanned—

O cūras hōmin' O quant' est in rēbus infāne.

Monstrum horrendum, informe, ingens, cui lūmen dēsumptum. Virg. A. 2, 658.

- (1.) This elision was sometimes omitted by the early poets; as,
Corpūrum officium est quōniam prēmēre omnia deorsum. Lucr. 1, 363.

See § 299, 2.

- (2.) Final s, also, with the preceding vowel, is sometimes elided by the early poets before a vowel, and sometimes s alone before a consonant; as, content' atque (Enn.), for contentus atque; omnibū' rēbus. (Lucr.) So,
Tum lūtrālī' dōlor, certissimū' nūnciū' mortis. Lucil.

REMARK. This elision took place principally in short syllables.

For ecthipsis at the end of a line, see Synapheia, § 307, 2.

SYNÆRESIS.

§ 306. 1. Synæresis is the contraction into one syllable of two vowels which are usually pronounced separately. Thus,

Aurē percussam virgā, versumque venēns. Virg. A. 7, 190.

Eosdem habuit sēcum, quibus est slāta, cāpillos. Prop. 4, 7, 7.

Tittire, pascentes a flūmine reice cāpellas. Virg. E. 3, 96.

REMARK 1. So Phaethon is pronounced Phaethon; alveo, alvo; Orphea, Orpha; deorsum, dorsum.

- (1.) Synæresis is frequent in ii, īdem, īsdem, dīi, dīs, dein, deinceps, deinde, deest, deerat, deēro, deērit, deesse; as,

Præcipitātur āquis, et āquis nox surgit ab īsdem. Ovid. M. 4, 92.

Sint Mæcōnātes; non deerunt, Flacce, Mārōnes. Mart. 8, 56, 6.

REM. 2. Cui and huic are usually monosyllables.

- (2.) When two vowels in compound words are read as one syllable, the former may rather be considered as elided than as united with the latter; as, e in anteambūlo, anteire, antēhac, dehinc, mehercūle, etc., and a in contraire.

(3.) The syllable formed by the union of i or u followed by another vowel retains the quantity of the latter vowel, whether long or short; as, abiēte, ariēte, abiēgnæ, pāriētibz, consiliūm, fortuitus, Nāsidiēnus, vindēmiātor, omniā; gēnuū, tēnuū, pītuū, flūviūrum, etc. In such examples, the i and u are pronounced like initial y and w; as, abyēte, pāryētibz, consilyum, fortwitus, Nāsidyēnus, omn-yū, tenwis, pītwiū, etc.; and, like consonants, they have, with another consonant, the power of lengthening a preceding short vowel, as in the above examples.

NOTE. In Statius, the word tēnuōre occurs as a trisyllable, in which the three vowels, uio, are united in pronunciation; thus, tēn-uio-re.

- (4.) Sometimes, after a synalcepha or ecthipsis, two vowels suffer synæresis; as, stellio et, pronounced stell-yet: consilium et,—consil-yet.

(5.) If only one of the vowels is written, the contraction is called crasis; as, dī, consilt, for dīi, consilii.

DIÆRESIS.

2. Diærēsis is the division of one syllable into two; as, aulāz, Trōtā, silāz, sūdent; for aula, Troia or Troja, silva, sūdent. So, sūscō for suesco; rēliqūāz for rēliquis; ecqūāz for equis; mīlūāz for mīlvis, etc., as, Æthereum sensum, atque cœcū simplicis ignem. Virg. A. 6. 747.

Atque illos illi irrident, Veneremque sudent. Lucr. 4, 1158.
Grammatici certant; et adhuc sub iudice lis est. Hor. A. P. 78.
Aurūrum et silicis mētū. Id. O. 1, 23, 4.

(1.) So in Greek words originally written with a diphthong (u or y); as, illegia for illegia, Bacchida for Bacchida, Rhoetius for Rhoetius, Plidis for Plidis; and also in words of Latin origin; as, Vetus for Vetus, Aquileid for Aquileid.

REMARK. This figure is sometimes called dialysis.

SYSTOLE.

§ 307. 1. Systole is the shortening of a syllable which is long by nature or by position; as, vidē'n for vidēne, in which e is naturally long; adit'n for aditine, in which i is long by position;—hōdne for hōc die; multimōdis for multis mōdis. So, Ducere multimōdis vōces, et flectere cantus. Lucr. 5, 1406.

(1.) By the omission of j after ab, ad, ob, sub, and re, in compound words, those prepositions retain their naturally short quantity, which would otherwise be made long by position; as, abici, adici, obici, etc. Thus,

Si quid nostra tuis adici vexatio rebus. Mart. 10, 82, 1.

REMARK. In some compounds the short quantity of ad and ob is preserved before a consonant by the elision of the d or b of the preposition, as in apērio, opērio, omitto, etc.

(2.) The penult of the third person plural of certain perfects is said by some to be shortened by systole; as, steterunt, tellexerunt, etc.; but others ascribe these irregularities to the errors of transcribers, or the carelessness of writers.

DIASTOLE.

2. Diastole is the lengthening of a syllable which is naturally short.

(1.) It occurs most frequently in proper names and in compounds of re; as, Præmides, religio, etc. Thus, Hanc tibi Præmides mitto, Lædaea, silūtem. Ovid. H. 16, 1.

Religione patrum multos servata per annos. Virg. A. 2, 715.

(2.) Some editors double the consonant after the lengthened re; as, rellegio.

(3.) Diastole is sometimes called ectasis.

SYNAPHEIA.

3. Synapheia is such a connection of two consecutive verses, that the first syllable of the latter verse has an influence on the final syllable of that which precedes, either by position, synalœpha, or ecthipsis. See §§ 283 and 305.

(1.) This figure is most frequent in anapæstic verse, and in the Ionic a minore.

The following lines will illustrate its effect:—

Præceps silvas montesque fugit Citus Actæon. Sen.

Here the i in the final syllable of fugit, which is naturally short, is made long by position before the following consonants, tc.

Omnia Mercurio similla, vöcemque cölörumque Et crines flävos.... Virg. A. 4, 558.
Dissidens pläbi nüméro beatörum Eximit virtus. Hor. O. 2, 2, 18.

In the former of these examples, synapheia and synalœpha are combined, que being elided before et in the following line; in the latter there is a similar combination of synapheia and ecthipsis.

(2.) By synapheia, the parts of a compound word are sometimes divided between two verses; as,

.... si non offendêret enem-
Quemque postärum limas labor et mœra... Hor. A. P. 290.

(3.) In hexameter verse a redundant syllable at the end of a line elided before a vowel at the beginning of the next line, by causing the accent to fall on the second syllable of the concluding spondee, and connecting the two verses by synapheia, excites the expectation of something which is to follow, and often tends to magnify the object; as,

Quäs süpër- | -ätrâ sî- | -läx, jäm- | -jäm läp- | -sürâ cä- | -dënti- | -que Immañet assimilis. Virg. A. 6, 602.

REMARK. The poets often make use of other figures, also, which, however, are not peculiar to them. Such are prosthesis, aphæresis, syncope, epenthesis, apocope, paragoge, anæstis, antithesis, and metathesis. See § 322.

ARIS AND THESIS.

§ 308. (1.) Rhythm is the alternate elevating and depressing of the voice at regular intervals in pronouncing the syllables of verse.

(2.) The elevation of the voice is called arsis, its depression thesis. These terms designate, also, the parts of a foot on which the elevation or depression falls.

1. The natural arsis is on the long syllable of a foot; and hence, in a foot composed wholly of long, or wholly of short syllables, when considered in itself, the place of the arsis is undetermined; but when such foot is substituted for the fundamental foot of a metre, its arsis is determined by that of the latter.

REMARK. Hence, a spondee, in trochaic or dactylic metre, has the arsis on the first syllable; but in iambic or anapæstic metre, it has it on the last.

2. The arsis is either equal in duration to the thesis, or twice as long.

Thus, in the dactyl, — — —, and anapæst, — — —, it is equal; in the trochee, — —, and iambus, — —, it is twice as long. This difference in the proportionate duration of the arsis and thesis constitutes the difference of rhythm. A foot is said to have the descending rhythm, when its arsis is at the beginning, and the ascending, when the thesis is at the beginning.

3. The stress of voice which falls upon the arsis of a foot, is called the ictus. When a long syllable in the arsis of a foot is resolved into two short ones, the ictus falls upon the former.

NOTE 1. Some suppose that the terms arsis and thesis, as used by the ancients, denoted respectively the rising and falling of the hand in beating time, and that the place of the thesis was the syllable which received the ictus

NOTE 2. As the ancient pronunciation of Latin is not now understood, writers differ in regard to the mode of reading verse. According to some, the accent of each word should always be preserved; while others direct that the stress of voice should be laid on the arsis of the foot, and that no regard should be paid to the accent.

It is generally supposed that the final letters elided by synalopha and oethlipsis, though omitted in scanning, were pronounced in reading verse.

CÆSURA.

§ 309. Cæsura is the separation, by the ending of a word, of syllables rhythmically or metrically connected.

Cæsura is of three kinds:—1, of the foot; 2, of the rhythm; and 3, of the verse.

1. Cæsura of the foot occurs when a word ends before a foot is completed; as,

Silves | -trem tenu- | -i Mu- | -sam medi- | -târis a- | -vñâ. Virg. E. 1, 2.

2. Cæsura of the rhythm is the separation of the arsis from the thesis by the ending of a word, as in the second, third, and fourth feet of the preceding verse.

REM 1. It hence appears that the cæsura of the rhythm is always a cæsura of the foot, as e. g. in the 2d, 3d, and 4th feet of the preceding verse; but, on the contrary, that the cæsura of the foot is not always a cæsura of the rhythm, as e. g. in the fifth foot of the same verse.

(1.) Cæsura of the rhythm allows a final syllable naturally short, to stand in the arsis of the foot instead of a long one, it being lengthened by the ictus; as,

Pœtôr- | -ûs inhi- | -âns spi- | -rântik | cōnsulit | exta. Virg. A. 4, 64.

This occurs chiefly in hexameter verse.

REM. 2. Cæsura of the foot and of the verse do not of themselves lengthen a short syllable, but they often coincide with that of the rhythm.

3. Cæsura of the verse is such a division of a line into two parts, as affords to the voice a convenient pause or rest, without injury to the sense or harmony.

REM. 3. The cæsura of the verse is often called the cæsural pause. In several kinds of verse, its place is fixed; in others, it may fall in more than one place, and the choice is left to the poet. Of the former kind is the pentameter, of the latter the hexameter.

The proper place of the cæsural pause will be treated of, so far as shall be necessary, under each species of verse.

REM. 4. The effect of the cæsura is to connect the different words harmoniously together, and thus to give smoothness, grace, and sweetness, to the verse.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF METRE.

DACTYLIC METRE.

§ 310. I. A hexameter or heroic verse consists of six feet. Of these the fifth is a dactyl, the sixth a spondee, and each of the other four either a dactyl or a spondee; as,

Āt tūbā | tērrībī- | -lēm sōnī- | -tām prēcū | ērē cā- | -nōrē. Virg. A. 9, 503.
 Intōn- | -et cri- | -nās lōn- | -gā cēr- | -vīcō fū- | ēbānt. Tibull. 3, 4, 27.
 Lādērē | quē vāl- | -lām cālā- | -mō pār- | -mīst ā- | -grēstī. Virg. E. 1, 10.

1. The fifth foot is sometimes a spondee, and the verse in such case is called spondaic; as,

Cārē dē- | -lām sōbē- | -lēš mīg- | -nūm Jōvis | Inerē- | -mētūm. Virg. E. 4, 49.

REMARK 1. In such verses, the fourth foot is commonly a dactyl, and the fifth should not close with the end of a word. Spondaic lines are thought to be especially adapted to the expression of grave and solemn subjects.

2. A light and rapid movement is produced by the frequent recurrence of dactyls; a slow and heavy one by that of spondees; as,

Quādrūpē- | -dāntē pū- | -trēm sōnī- | -tā quātīt | āngūlā | cāmpum. Virg. A. 8, 506.
 Illī in- | -tēr sē- | -sē mīg- | -nā vī | brāchiā tollunt. Id. A. 8, 452.

REM. 2. Variety in the use of dactyls and spondees in successive lines, has an agreeable effect. Hexameter verse commonly ends in a word of two or three syllables, and a monosyllable at the end of a line is generally ungraceful, but sometimes produces a good effect; as,

Stērnūtūr- | ēxānī- | -mīsqūē, trē- | -mēns prō- | -cūmbīt hū- | -mī bīs. Virg. A. 5, 481.
 Pārūrī- | -dnt mōn- | -tās nās- | -cētūr rīdīcū- | -lūs mūs. Hor. A. P. 129.

3. The beauty and harmony of hexameter verse depend much on due attention to the cæsura. (See § 309.) A line in which it is neglected is destitute of poetic beauty, and can hardly be distinguished from prose; as,

Rōmē | mōnē | tērrūt | Impīgēr | Hānībāl | ārmīs. Enn.

4. The cæsural pause most approved in heroic poetry is that which occurs after the penthemimēris, i. e. after the arsis in the third foot. This is particularly distinguished as the heroic cæsura. Thus,

Āt dōmūs | Intēri- | -ōr | rē- | -gālī | splēndidā | lāxā. Virg. A. 1, 637.

5. Instead of the preceding, a cæsura in the thesis of the third foot, or after the arsis of the fourth, was also approved as heroic; as,

Infān- | -dām rē- | -gīnā | jū- | -bēs rēnē- | -vārē dō- | -lōrem. Virg. A. 2, 8.

REM. 3. When the cæsural pause occurs, as in the latter example, after the penthemimēris, i. e. after the arsis of the fourth foot, another but slighter one is often found in the second foot; as,

Primā tē- | -nēt, | plāū- | -sūquē vō- | -lāt | frēmī- | -tāquē sē- | -cūndo. Virg. A. 5, 338.

6. The cæsura after the third foot, dividing the verse into exactly equal parts, was least approved; as,

Cui nōn | dictūs Hī- | -lās pūr | ēt Lā- | -tēm | Dēlos. Virg. G. 3, 6.

REM. 4. The cæsural pause between the fourth and fifth feet was considered as peculiarly adapted to pastoral poetry, particularly when the fourth foot was a dactyl, and was hence termed the bucolic cæsura; as,

Stānt vītū- | -lī ēt tēnē- | -ris mū- | -gītībūs | ārkī | cōmplēt. Nemes.

NOTE 1. The cæsura after the arsis is sometimes called the masculine or syllabic cæsura; that in the thesis, the feminine or trochaic, as a trochee immediately precedes. When a cæsura occurs in the fifth foot it is usually the trochaic cæsura, unless the foot is a spondee; as,

Frāxinīs | in sil- | -vis pāl- | -chērrimā, | pītūs in | hōrtīs. Virg. E. 7, 65.

(a.) It is to be remarked that two successive trochaic cæsuras in the second and third feet are, in general, to be avoided, but they are sometimes employed to express irregular or impetuous motion; as,

Una Eu- | -râsqû Nô- | -tâsqû rû- | -ânt crê- | -bêrquê prô- | -câllis. Virg. A. 1, 85.

(b.) Successive trochaic cæsuras are, in like manner, to be avoided in the third and fourth feet, but are approved in the first and second, in the fourth and fifth, and in the first, third and fifth. See Virg. A. 6, 651: 1, 94: and 6, 522.

NOTE 2. In the principal cæsura of the verse poets frequently introduce a pause in the sense, which must be attended to in order to determine the place of the cæsural pause. For in the common place for the cæsura in the third foot there is often a cæsura of the foot; while, in the fourth foot, a still more marked division occurs. In this case, the latter is to be considered as the principal cæsura, and distinguished accordingly; as,

Belli | ferrâ- | -tês pês- | -tes, || pôr- | -tâsqû rê- | -frêgit. Hor. S. 1, 4, 61.

II. The Priapëan is usually accounted a species of hexameter. It is so constructed as to be divisible into two portions of three feet each, having generally a trochee in the first and fourth place, but often a spondee and rarely a dactyl; in the second, usually a dactyl; and an amphimacer and more rarely a dactyl in the third; as,

Ū cê- | -lônâ | quê cûpis | pôtê | lûdêrê | lônâ. Catull. 17, 1.

It is, however, more properly considered as choriambic metre, consisting of alternate Glyconics and Pherecratics. See § 316, IV. V. Thus,

Ū cê- | -lônâ, quê cûpis
Pôtê | lûdêrê lôn- | -go.

NOTE. A regular hexameter verse is termed Priapëan, when it is so constructed as to be divisible into two portions of three feet each; as,

Têrtâ | pârs pâ- | -trî dâtâ | pârs dâtâ | têrtâ | mâtî. Catull. 62, 64

See above, 6.

§ 311. III. A pentameter verse consists of five feet.

REMARK 1. It is generally, however, divided, in scanning, into two hemistichs, the first consisting of two feet, either dactyls or spondees, followed by a long syllable; the last, of two dactyls, also followed by a long syllable; as,

Nâtâ- | -rê sêquî- | -tûr || sêminâ | quîsqû sâ- | -s. Prop. 3, 7, 20.
Cârminî- | -bûs vî- | -vês || tâmpûs in | ômnê mê- | -is. Ovid.

1. According to the more ancient and correct mode of scanning pentameter verse, it consists of five feet, of which the first and second may each be a dactyl or a spondee; the third is always a spondee; and the fourth and fifth are anapæsts; as,

Nâtâ- | -rê sêquî- | -tûr || sêm- | -inâ quîs- | -quê sûs.
Cârminî- | -bûs vî- | -vês || têm- | -pûs in ôm- | -nê mês.

2. The cæsura, in pentameter verse, always occurs after the penthemimeris, i. e. at the close of the first hemistich. It very rarely lengthens a short syllable.

3. The pentameter rarely ends with a word of three syllables. In Ovid, it usually ends with a dissyllable.

REM. 2. This species of verse is seldom used, except in connection with hexameter, a line of each recurring alternately. This combination is called elegiac verse. Thus, Flâbîlis Indîgnûs, Klêgôn, sôivê cûpîllus.

Ah nimis ex vërô nûnô tibi nômnê êrit! Ovid. Am. 2, 9, 8.

§ 312. IV. The tetrameter a priore, or Alcmanian dactylic tetrameter, consists of the first four feet of a hexameter, of which the fourth is always a dactyl; as,

Gärrülä | pēr rä- | -mäs, kväs | öbeträpitt. Sen. Oed. 454.

V. The tetrameter a posteriore, or spondaic tetrameter, consists of the last four feet of a hexameter; as,

Idimäs, | Ö säci- | -i, cömi- | -töque. Hor. Od. 1, 7, 23.

REMARK. The penultimate foot in this, as in hexameter verse, may be a spondee, but in this case the preceding foot should be a dactyl; as,

Mänsö- | -räm cöhi- | -bänt Ar- | -chytä. Hor. Od. 1, 23, 2.

VI. The dactylic trimeter consists of the last three feet of a hexameter; as,

Grätö | Pfärrhä säb | äntro. Hor. Od. 1, 5, 2.

REMARK. But this kind of verse is more properly included in choriambic metre. See § 316, V.

VII. The trimeter catalectic Archilochian consists of the first five half feet of a hexameter, but the first and second feet are commonly dactyls; as,

Pälvis ät | ämbä sä- | -mus. Hor. Od. 4, 7, 16.

VIII. The dactylic dimeter, or Adonic, consists of two feet, a dactyl and a spondee; as,

Ristt ä- | -pöllo. Hor. Od. 1, 10, 12.

IX. The Æolic pentameter consists of four dactyls preceded by a spondee, a trochee, or an iambus. Thus

— — | — — — | — — — | — — — | — — —

X. The Phalæcian pentameter consists of a dactylic penthimimeris and a dactylic dimeter; as,

Visä- | -bät gäli- | -dä || äidäkä | brämme. Boethius.

REMARK. A trochee is sometimes found in the first place and an iambus in the first and second places.

XI. The Tetrameter Meiurus, or Falscan consists of the last four feet of a hexameter, except that the last foot is an iambus instead of a spondee; as,

Ut növä | frögö grä- | -vis Cörös | äat. Boethius.

XII. The Tetrameter Catalectic consists of the tetrameter a priore wanting the latter half of the concluding dactyl; as,

Ömne hömi- | -näm gänds | In tär- | -ris. Boethius.

ANAPÆSTIC METRE.

§ 313. I. The anapæstic monomëter consists of two anapæsts; as,

Ulläsa- | -sä cänäs Sen.

III. The iambic tetrameter or quadrātus, called also from the number of its feet octonarius, a measure used by the comic poets, consists of four iambic measures, subject to the same variations as the iambic trimeter (I); as,

Nūc hīc | dīc | klīm | vītān ēf- | -fērt, kl- | -sē mō- | -rēs pō- | -tūlat. Ter. A. 1, 2, 18.

REMARK. The caesura regularly follows the second measure.

IV. The iambic tetrameter catalectic or Hipponactic, is the iambic tetrameter, wanting the last syllable, and having always an iambus in the seventh place, but admitting in the other places the same variations as the trimeter and tetrameter; as,

Dēprēn- | -cū nā- | -vīs īn | mīrī, | vēcā- | -nīōn- | -tē vēn- | -to. Catull. 25, 12.

V. The iambic trimeter catalectic or Archilochian, is the iambic trimeter (I), wanting the final syllable. Like the common iambic trimeter, it admits a spondee into the first and third places, but not into the fifth; as,

Vēcā- | -tīs ēt- | -quē nōn | vēcā- | -tīs ēū- | -dīt. Hor. Od. 2, 18, 40.

Trāhūt- | -quē sīo- | -cās māch- | -īnē | cīrt- | -nas. Id. Od. 1, 4, 2.

VI. The iambic dimeter consists of two iambic measures, with the same variations as the iambic trimeter (I); as,

Fērtī | sēquē- | -mūr pō- | -tōre. Hor. Epod. 1, 14.

Cēndī- | -t trāc- | -tāvīt | dīpēs. Id. Epod. 2, 8.

Vīdē- | -rē prōpē- | -rāntēs | dūmum. Id. Epod. 3, 62.

REMARK. The iambic dimeter is also called the Archilochian dimeter.

The following is its scale:—

VII. The iambic dimeter hypermeter, called also Archilochian, is the iambic dimeter, with an additional syllable at the end; as,

Rēdē- | -gīt īn | vērēs | tīmō- | -rēs. Hor. Od. 1, 87, 15.

REMARK. Horace always makes the third foot a spondee.

VIII. The iambic dimeter acephalous is the iambic dimeter, wanting the first syllable; as,

Nōn | ēbūr | nēque ēū- | -rēm.... Hor. Od. 2, 18, 1.

REMARK. This kind of verse is sometimes scanned as a catalectic trochaic dimeter. See § 315, IV.

IX. The iambic dimeter catalectic, or Anacreontic, is the iambic dimeter, wanting the final syllable, and having always an iambus in the third foot; as,

Ut tī- | grīs ōr- | -bā gnē- | -tīs. Sen. Med. 863.

X. The Galliambus consists of two iambic dimeters catalectic, the last of which wants the final syllable.

REMARK 1. It was so denominated from the Galli or priests of Cybele, by whom it was used.

REM. 2. In the first foot of each dimeter the anapaest was generally preferred to the spondee. The catalectic syllable at the end of the first dimeter is long, and the second foot of the second dimeter is commonly a tribrach; as,

Sūpēr M- | -tū vō- | -tū A- | -tys || cōlōrī | rātē mī- | -rīa. Catull. 68, 1.

REM. 3. The cæsura uniformly occurs at the end of the first dimeter.

TROCHAIC METRE.

§ 315. 1. Trochaic verses bear a near affinity to iambics. The addition or retrenchment of a syllable at the beginning of a pure iambic verse, renders it pure trochaic, and the addition or retrenchment of a syllable at the beginning of a pure trochaic line, renders it pure iambic, with the deficiency or redundancy of a syllable in each case at the end of the verse.

I. The trochaic tetrameter catalectic consists of seven feet, followed by a catalectic syllable. In the first five places and very rarely in the sixth, it admits a tribrach, but in the seventh a trochee only. In the even places, besides the tribrach, it admits also a spondee, a dactyl, an anapaest, and sometimes a proceleusmatic; as,

Jūssēs | ſet in | ſrmīs | Irē : || pūrīs | Irē | Jūssēs | ſet. Auct. P. Vñ.
Rōmū | lēās | Ipſū | fōct || eūm Sū- | -bīnīs | nūptī- | -ās. Id.
Dānī | dās, cō- | -itē || vētrās || hīc dī- | -ſe quā- | -rit mī- | -nīa. Sen.

The following is its scale:—

REMARK 1. The pure trochaic verse was rarely used, and the dactyl very rarely occurs in the fourth place. The cæsural pause uniformly occurs after the fourth foot, thus dividing the verse into a complete dimeter and a catalectic dimeter. The comic writers introduced the spondee and its equivalent feet into the odd places.

REM. 2. The complete trochaic tetrameter or octonarius properly consists of eight feet, all trochees, subject, however, to the same variations as the catalectic tetrameter; as,

Ipſū | ſūmmīs | sāxis | fixūs | āspē- | -rīs, ē- | -vīcō- | -rātūs. Enn.

II. The Sapphic verse, invented by the poetess Sappho, consists of five feet—the first a trochee, the second a spondee, the third a dactyl, and the fourth and fifth trochees; as,

Intē- | -gēr vī- | -tē, || scōlō- | -rīquē || pūrīs. Hor. Od. 1, 22, 1.

1. Sappho, and, after her example, Catullus, sometimes made the second foot a trochee.

2. Those Sapphics are most harmonious which have the cæsura after the fifth semi-foot.

NOTE 1. In the composition of the Sapphic stanza, a word is sometimes divided between the end of the third Sapphic, and the beginning of the Adonic which follows; as,

Lābī- | -tūr rī- | -pā Jōvē | nōn prō- | -bānte ux-
-cētūs | āmnīs. Hor. Od. 1, 2, 19.

It has been thought by some that such lines should be considered as one Sapphic verse of seven feet, the fifth foot being either a spondee or a trochee.

NOTE 2. This verse is sometimes scanned as epichoriambic, having an epitrite in the first place, a choriambus in the second, and ending with an iambic sizygy catalectic; thus,

Intēgr vi- | -tē, solēris- | -quē pārūs.

III. The Phalæcian verse consists of five feet—a spondee, a dactyl, and three trochees; as,

Nōn ēst | vivērē, | aēd vā- | -lārē | vitā. Mart.

REMARK 1. Instead of a spondee as the first foot, Catullus sometimes uses a trochee or an iambus. This writer also sometimes uses a spondee in the second place.

REM. 2. The Phalæcian verse is sometimes called hendecasyllabic, as consisting of eleven syllables; but that name does not belong to it exclusively.

IV. The trochaic dimeter catalectic consists of three feet, properly all trochees, and a catalectic syllable, but admitting also in the second place a spondee or a dactyl; as,

Nōn ē | -būr nē- | -que aūrē- | -um. Hor. Od. 2, 18, 1.

Lēnis | āc mōdi- | -cūm flū- | -sūs

Aūrē, | nēc vēr- | -gēs lā- | -tus. Sen. Oed. 887.

NOTE. This measure is the same as the acephalous iambic dimeter (see § 314, VIII.), and it is not important whether it be regarded as iambic or trochaic.

CHORIAMBIC METRE.

§ 316. (a.) In a pure choriambic verse each metre except the last is a choriambus, and the last an Iambic syzygy.

NOTE. A spondee and iambus, i. e. a third epitrite, are sometimes used in place of the Iambic syzygy.

(b.) An epichoriambic verse is composed of one or more choriambi with some other foot, especially a ditrochee or a second epitrite, joined with it.

I. The choriambic pentameter consists of a spondee, three choriambi, and an iambus; as,

Tū nē | quēstēris, | scirō nēfās, | quēm mīhi, quēm tibi., Hor. Od. 1, 11, 1.

II. The choriambic tetrameter consists of three choriambi, or feet of equal length, and a Bacchius; as,

Omnē nēmūs | cūm flūvīis, | ōmnē cānāt | prōfūdum. Claud.

2. In this verse Horace substituted a spondee for the iambus contained in the first choriambus; as,

Tē dēōs ē- | -rō, Sībārīn | cūr prōpērēs | āmāndō. Hor. Od. 1, 8, 2.

3. Some scan this verse as an epichoriambic tetrameter catalectic, beginning with the second epitrite.

III. 1. The Asclepiadic tetrameter (invented by the poet Asclepiades) consists of a spondee, two choriambi, and an iambus; as,

2. This form is invariably observed by Horace; but other poets sometimes, though rarely, make the first foot a dactyl.

3. The caesural pause occurs at the end of the first choriambus.

4. This measure is sometimes scanned as a dactylic pentameter catalectic. See § 311, III. Thus,

Mācē- | -nās, ātā- | vīs | ēdītā | rēgībūs.

IV. 1. The choriambic trimeter, or Glyconic (invented by the poet Glyco), consists of a spondee, a choriambus, and an iambus; as,

Sic tē | divā pōtēs | Cypri... Hor. Od. 1, 3, 1.

2. The first foot is sometimes an iambus or a trochee.

3. When the first foot is a spondee, the verse might be scanned as a dactylic trimeter. Thus,

Sic tē | divā pō- | -tēs Cypri.

V. 1. The choriambic trimeter catalectic, or Pherecratic (so called from the poet Pherecrates), is the Glyconic deprived of its final syllable, and consists of a spondee, a choriambus, and a catalectic syllable; as,

Grātē, | Pŕrŕhā, sūb ān- | -trō. Hor. Od. 1, 5, 3.

2. The first foot was sometimes a trochee or an anapest, rarely an iambus.

3. When the first foot is a spondee, this measure might be scanned as a dactylic trimeter. See § 312, VI.

4. The Pherecratic subjoined to the Glyconic produces the Priapean verse. See § 310, II.

VI. 1. The choriambic dimeter consists of a choriambus and a Bacchius; as,

Lŕdā dīo | pŕ ōanēs. Hor. Od. 1, 3, 1.

2. This verse is by some called the choriambic dimeter catalectic. Cf. § 316, (a.)

IONIC METRE.

§ 317. I. The Ionic a majore, or Sotadic, (from the poet Sotades), consists of three greater Ionics and a spondee.

1. The Ionic feet, however, are often changed into ditrochees, and either of the two long syllables in those feet into two short ones; as,

Hās, cūm gēmi- | -nā cōmpēdē, | dēdicāt cū- | -tēnās,
Sātūrnē, tī- | -bī Zōiliās, | ānnūlās pri- | -ōrēs. Mart.

2. Hence the following is its scale:—

NOTE. The final syllable, by § 301, note, may be short.

II. 1. The Ionic a minore consists generally of verses of three or four feet, which are all smaller Ionics; as,

Pŕr ālēs, | tībī tēlīs, | ōpŕōcēs- | -quē Mīnērvēs... Hor. Od. 3, 12, 4.

2. In this verse, as in the anapaestic, no place is assigned to the pause; because, since the metres, if rightly constructed, end with a word, the effect of a pause will be produced at the end of each metre.

COMPOUND METRES.

§ 318. Compound metre is the union of two species of metre in the same verse.

I. The dactylico-iambic metre or Elegiambus consists of a dactylic penthemimēris (§ 312, VII.), followed by an iambic dimeter (§ 314, VI.); as,

II. The iambico-dactylic metre or Iambelegus consists of the same members as the preceding, but in a reversed order; as,

Nivā- | -quē dā- | -dācūnt | Jūvām : || nāne mārē, | nāne silā- | -es. Hor. Epod. 12, 2.

NOTE. The members composing this and the preceding species of verse are often written in separate verses.

III. The greater Alcaic consists of an iambic penthemimeris, i. e. of two iambic feet and a long catalectic syllable, followed by a chor-iambus, and an iambus; as,

Vidēs | ūt āl- | -tā || stāt nivē cān- | -dīdum. Hor. Od. 1, 9, 1.

REMARK 1. The first foot is often a spondee.

REM. 2. The cæsura uniformly occurs after the catalectic syllable.

REM. 3. This verse is sometimes so scanned as to make the last two feet dactyls.

IV. The dactylico-trochaic or Archilochian heptameter, consists of the dactylic tetrameter a priore (§ 312), followed by three trochees; as,

Solvitur | scris hī- | -ams grā- | -tā vīcē || vāris | ēt fū- | -vānt. Hor. Od. 1, 4, 1.

REMARK. The cæsura occurs between the two members.

V. The dactylico-trochaic tetrameter or lesser Alcaic, consists of two dactyls, followed by two trochees, i. e. of a dactylic dimeter followed by a trochaic monometer; as,

Lēvā | pārōnū- || -ārē | sārā. Hor. Od. 1, 17, 12.

COMBINATION OF VERSES IN POEMS.

§ 319. 1. A poem may consist either of one kind of verse only or of a combination of two or more kinds.

2. A poem in which only one kind of verse is employed, is called carmen monocōlon; that which has two kinds, dicōlon; that which has three kinds, tricōlon.

3. When the poem returns, after the second line, to the same verse with which it began, it is called distrōphon; when after the third line, tristrōphon; and when after the fourth, tetratrōphon.

4. The several verses which occur before the poem returns to the kind of verse with which it began, constitute a stanza or strophe.

5. A poem consisting of two kinds of verse, when the stanza contains two verses, is called dicōlon distrōphon, (see § 320, 8); when it contains three, dicō- lon tristrôphon, (Anson. Profess. 21); when four, dicôlon tetrastrophon, (§ 320, 2); and when five, dicôlon pentastrophon.

6. A poem consisting of three kinds of verse, when the stanza contains three verses, is called tricôlon tristrôphon, (§ 320, 15); when four, tricôlon tetrastrophon, (§ 320, 1).

HORATIAN METRES.

§ 320. The different species of metre used by Horace in his lyric compositions are twenty. The various forms in which he has employed them, either separate or in conjunction, are nineteen, arranged, according to the order of preference given to them by the poet, in the following

SYNOPSIS.

1. Two greater Alcaics (§ 318, III.), one Archilochian iambic dimeter hypermeter (§ 314, VII.), and one lesser Alcaic (§ 318, v.); as,

Vides, ut altâ stât nivâ candidum
Sôractê, nêc jam sustinêant ônis
Silvâs libôrântes, gelluquê
Flûminâ cônstitérunt acûto. (Lib. 1, 9.)

REMARK. This is called the Horatian stanza, because it seems to have been a favorite with Horace, being used in thirty-seven of his odes.

2. Three Sapphics (§ 315, II.) and one Adonic (§ 312, VIII.); as,

Jam mltis tôrrens nivis atquê diræ
Grândinis miât pârter, et, rubentê
Dextêrâ sacrâs jaculatûs arcas,
Têrruit urbem. (Lib. 1, 2.)

3. One Glyconic (§ 316, IV.) and one Asclepiadic (§ 316, III.); as,

Sic tē Divâ pôtens Cypri,
Sic frâtrēs Hêlênæ, lûcidâ stâcra... (Lib. 1, 3.)

4. One iambic trimeter (§ 314, I.) and one iambic dimeter (§ 314, VI.); as,

Ibis Libârnâs Intêr altâ nâvium,
Amicô, prôpugnâcûla. (Epod. 1.)

5. Three Asclepiadics (§ 316, III.) and one Glyconic (§ 316, IV.); as,

Scritbêrjâ Vârîs fortis, et hœstium
Victôr, Macellî carminis âliti,
Quâm rêm cûmqû fêrêx pâvibus sût æquis
Milâs, tē ducê, gessêrit. (Lib. 1, 6.)

6. Two Asclepiadics (§ 316, III.), one Pherecratic (§ 316, v.), and one Glyconic (§ 316, IV.); as,

Diânâ, tēnêrê, dicîtê virgînes:
Intônsum, pûeri, dicîtê Cynthium,
Latônâmqû suprêmo
Dilêctâm pênitâs Jôvi. (Lib. 1, 21.)

7. The Asclepiadic (§ 316, III.) alone; as,

Mœcônâs itâvis editê rēgibus. (Lib. 1, 1.)

8. One dactylic hexameter (§ 310, I.) and one dactylic tetrameter a posteriore (§ 312, V.); as,

LAUDABANT ALII CLĀRUM RHŌDŌN, SŪT MITYLĒNEN,
AUT EPHĒSŪM, BIKĀRTIVĒ CŌRINTHĪ... (Lib. 1, 7.)

9. The choriambic pentameter (§ 316, I.) alone; as,
TA NĒ QUĒSTĀRIS, SCĪRĒ NĒCĀS, QUĒM MIHI, QUĒM TIBI... (Lib. 1, 11.)

10. One dactylic hexameter (§ 310, I.) and one iambic dimeter (§ 314, VI.); as,

NŪX ERĀT, ET CŌLIS FŪLGĒBĀT LĀNĀ SĒRĒNO
INTER MĪNĒRĀ SIDĒRA. (Epod. 15.)

11. The iambic trimeter (§ 314, I.) containing spondees; as,
JĀM. JĀM EFFICĪET DŌ MĪNUS SCĪNTĪAS. (Epod. 17.)

12. One choriambic dimeter (§ 316, VI.) and one choriambic tetrameter (§ 316, II.) with a variation; as,

LYDĀ, DIO, PĒR SŪNNES
TĒ DĒCĒ ORĒ, SYBĀRIN CŪR PRŌPĒRĀS ĀMĀNDŌ... (Lib. 1, 8.)

13. One dactylic hexameter (§ 310, I.) and one iambic trimeter without spondees (§ 314, I.); as,

ALĪTRĀ JĀM TĀRTĪR BĀLLIS CIVILIBUS MĪAS;
SĪUS ET IPSE RŌMĀ VIRIBUS RŪIT. (Epod. 16.)

14. One dactylic hexameter (§ 310, I.) and one dactylic penthemimeris (§ 312, VII.); as,

DIFFĀGĒRĒ NĪVĒS: RĒDĒUNT JĀM GRĀMĪNĀ CĀMPIA,
ARBŌRIBUSQŪE CŌMPE. (Lib. 4, 7.)

15. One iambic trimeter (§ 314, I.), one dactylic trimeter catalectic (§ 312, VII.), and one iambic dimeter (§ 314, VI.); as,

PĒTTI, NĪHĪL MĒ, SĪCŪT ĀNTĒĀ, JŪVĀS
SCĪRĒRĒ VĒRSICŪLOS,
AMŌRĒ PĒRŌULSŪM GRĀVI. (Epod. 11.)

NOTE. The second and third lines are often written as one verse. See § 318, 1.

16. One dactylic hexameter (§ 310, I.), one iambic dimeter (§ 314, VI.), and one dactylic penthemimeris (§ 312, VII.); as,

HŌRRĪDĀ TĒMPĒSTĀS CŌLĪUM CŌNTRĀXĪT; ET IMBRES
NĪVĒSQŪE DĒDĒCŪNT JŌVEM:
NŪNC MĀRĒ, NŪNC ALĪUM... (Epod. 13.)

NOTE. The second and third lines of this stanza, also, are often written as one verse. See § 318, II.

17. One Archilochian heptameter (§ 318, IV.) and one iambic trimeter catalectic (§ 314, V.); as,

SŌLVĪTŪR SCĪRIS HĪEMS GRĀTĀ VICĒ VĒRIS ET FĀVŌNĪ, TRĀHŪNTQŪE SICCĀS MĀCHĪNĀS CĀRĪNAS. (Lib. 1, 4.)

18. One iambic dimeter acephalous (§ 314, VIII.) and one iambic trimeter catalectic (§ 314, V.); as,

NŌN EBŪR NĒQUE SŪRĒUM
MĒĀ RĒNĪDĒT IN DŌMŌ LĒDĒNAR. (Lib. 2, 18.)

19. The Ionic a minore (§ 317, II.) alone; as,
MISĒRĪRUM EST NĒQUE ĀMŌRĪ DĀRĒ LŪDŪM, NĒQUE DŪLC... (Lib. 3, 12.)

§ 331. A METRICAL KEY TO THE ODES OF HORACE.

Containing, in alphabetic order, the first words of each, with a reference to the numbers in the preceding Synopsis, where the metre is explained.

GRAMMATICAL FIGURES.

§ 322. Certain deviations from the regular form and construction of words, are called grammatical figures. These may relate either to Orthography and Etymology, or to Syntax.

I. FIGURES OF ORTHOGRAPHY AND ETYMOLOGY.

These are distinguished by the general name of metaplasm.

1. Prosthesis is the prefixing of a letter or syllable to a word; as, gnātus, for nātus; tētālī, for tālī. These, however, are rather the ancient customary forms, from which those now in use were formed by aphæresis.

2. Aphæresis is the taking of a letter or syllable from the beginning of a word; as, 'st, for est; rābōnem, for arrābōnem.

3. Epenhesis is the insertion of a letter or syllable in the middle of a word; as, āltūum, for āltum; Māvors, for Mars.

4. Syncope is the omission of a letter or syllable in the middle of a word; as, delūm, for debrum; meūm factūm, for mebrum factūrum; sæcla, for sæcula; flesti, for flectisti; rēpostus, for rēpōsitus; aspri, for aspēris.

5. Crasis is the contraction of two vowels into one; as, cōgo, for cōdgo; nīl, for nihil.

6. Paragoge is the addition of a letter or syllable to the end of a word; as, med, for me; claudier, for claudi.

7. Apocope is the omission of the final letter or syllable of a word; as, mēn', for mēne; Antōni, for Antōnii.

8. Antithesis is the substitution of one letter for another; as, ollī, for illī; optimūus, for optimus; afficio, for adfficio. O is often thus used for u, especially after c; as, vollus, for vullus; servom, for servum. So after qu; as, æquom, for æquum.

9. Metathesis is the changing of the order of letters in a word; as, pīstrie, for pristie.

II. FIGURES OF SYNTAX.

323. The figures of Syntax are ellipsis, pleonasm, enallage, and hyperbāton.

1. (a.) Ellipsis is the omission of some word or words in a sentence; as,

Aiunt, scil. hōmīnes. Dārius Hystaspis, scil. filius. Ōno, scil. ego. Quid multa? scil. dīcam. Ex quo, scil. tempore. Fērina, scil. caro.

(b.) Ellipsis includes asyndeton, zeugma, syllipsis, and prolepsis.

(1.) Asyndeton is the omission of the copulative conjunction; as, abūt, excessit, evāsit, erūpit scil. et. Cic. This is called in pure Latin dissolutio.

(2.) (a.) Zeugma is the uniting of two nouns or two infinitives to a verb, which, as to its meaning, is applicable to only one of them; as, Pācem an bellum gērens: (Sall.) where gērens is applicable to bellum only, while pācem requires dgere. Semperne in sanguine, ferro, fūgā versābitur? (Id.) where the verb does not properly apply to ferro.

(b.) Nego is often thus used with two propositions, one of which is affirmative; as, Negant Cæsārem mansūrum, postulātāque interpositā esse, for dicuntque postulatā... Cic. See § 209, Note 4.

(c.) When an adjective or verb, referring to two or more nouns, agrees with one, and is understood with the rest, the construction is also sometimes called zeugma, but more commonly syllipsis; as, Et gēnus, et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior algā est. Hor. Cāper tibi salvus et hodi. Virg. Quamvis ille niger, quamvis tu candida esses. Id.

(3.) Syllipsis is when an adjective or verb, belonging to two or more nouns of different genders, persons, or numbers, agrees with one rather than another; as, Attōnti novitāte pāvent Baucis, timidusque Phlēmōn. Ovid. Prōcumbit uterque prōnus hūmi, i. e. Deucālion et Pyrrha. Id. Sustulimus māsus et ego et Balbus. Cic. So, Ipse cum frātre adesse jussi stūmus. Id. Proiectisque amīculo et littēris. Curt. See §§ 205, R. 2, and 209, R. 12, (3.) and (7.)

(4.) Prōlepsis is when the parts, differing in number or person from the whole, are placed after it, the verb or adjective not being repeated; as, Principes utrinque pugnam ciebant, ab Sābinis Mettius Curtius, ab Rōmānis Hostus Hostilius. Liv. Bōni quōniam convenimus ambo, tu cāltmos inflāre, ego dicere versus. Virg.

2. (a.) Pleonasm is using a greater number of words than is necessary to express the meaning; as,

Sic ore locuta est. Virg. Qui māgis vire vincere quam diu imperāre mālīt. Liv. Nemo ānus. Cic. Forte fortunā. Id. Prūdēs sciens. Ter.

(b.) Under pleonasm are included parelcon, polysyndēton, hendīdys, and periphrāsis.

(1.) Parelcon is the addition of an unnecessary syllable or particle to pronouns, verbs, or adverbs; as, egomet, agendum, fortassean. Such additions, however, usually modify the meaning in some degree.

(2.) Polysyndēton is a redundancy of conjunctions; as, Una Eurūque Nōtusque ruunt creberque procellis Africus. Virg.

(3.) Hendīdys is the expression of an idea by two nouns connected by et, -que, or atque, instead of a noun and a limiting adjective or genitive; as, Pātēris libāmus et auro, for aureis pātēris. Virg. Libro et silvestri subēre clausam, for libro subēris. Id. Cristis et auro. Ovid. Met. 3, 82.

(4.) Periphrāsis or circumlōcūtio is a circuitous mode of expression; as, Tōnēri factus ovium, i. e. agni. Virg.

3. (a.) Enallāge is a change of words, or a substitution of one gender, number, case, person, tense, mood, or voice of the same word for another.

(b.) Enallāge includes antimeria, heterōsis, antiptōsis, synēsis, and anacolūthon.

(1.) Antimēria is the use of one part of speech for another, or the abstract for the concrete; as, Nostrum istud vivere triste, for nostra vita. Pers. Aliud cras. Id. Conjūgium vidēbit? for conjūgem. Virg.

(2.) Heterōsis is the use of one form of noun, pronoun, verb, etc., for another; as Ego quōque una pereō, quod mihi est cārius, for qui mihi sum cārior. Ter.

Rōmānus pralio victor, for Rōmāni victōres. Liv. Many words are used by the poets in the plural instead of the singular; as, colla, corda, ora, etc. See § 98. Me truncus illapsus cērebro sustulēdū, for sustulisset. Hor. See § 259, R. 4.

(3.) Antipōsis is the use of one case for another; as, Cui nunc cognōmem Itōlo, for Iūlus. Virg. § 204, R. 8. Uxor invicti Jōvis esse nescis, for te esse uxorem. Hor. § 210, R. 6.

(4.) Synēsis, or synthēsis, is adapting the construction to the sense of a word, rather than to its gender or number; as, Sūbeunt Tēgēa jūventus auxilio tardi. Stat. Concursus pōpuli mirantium quid rei est. Liv. Pars in crācem acti. Sall. Ubi illic est scēlus, qui me perdidi? Ter. Id mea minime rēfert, qui sum nātus maximus. Id. See § 205, R. 3, (1.) and (3.), and § 206, (12.)

(5.) Andōcolūthōn is a disagreement in construction between the latter and former part of a sentence; as, Nam nos omnes, quibus est ālicunde āliquis objectus lābos, omne quod est intērea tempus, priusquam id rescitum est, lucro est. Ter. In this example, the writer began as if he intended to say lucro habēmus, and ended as if he had said nōbis omnibus, leaving nos omnes without its verb.

4. (a.) Hypērbāton is a transgression of the usual order of words or clauses.

(b.) Hypērbāton includes ānastrōphe, hystēron prōtēron, hypoallage, synchysis, tmēsis, and pārenthēsis.

(1.) Anastrōphe is an inversion of the order of two words; as, Transtra per et rēmos, for per transtra. Virg. Collo dāre brāchia circum, for circumdāre. Id. Nox erit āna sūper, for sūpērrit. Ovid. El faciū āre, for ārēfaciū. Lucr.

(2.) Hystēron prōtēron is reversing the natural order of the sense; as, Mōriāmur, et in mēdia arma ruāmus. Virg. Vālet atque vivit. Ter.

(3.) Hypoallage is an interchange of constructions; as, In nōva fert ānimus mūtātās dicēre formas corpōra, for corpōra mūtātā in nōvas formas. Ovid. Dāre classibus Austros, for dāre classes Austris. Virg.

(4.) Synchysis is a confused position of words; as, Saxa vōcant lūlī, mēdiis quā in fluctibus, āras, for quā saxa in mēdiis fluctibus, lūlī vōcant āras. Virg.

(5.) Tmēsis or diacōpe is the separation of the parts of a compound word; as, Septem subjecta triōni gēna, for septentrionī. Virg. Quā me cumque vōcant terrā. Id. Per mihi, per, inquam, grātum fēcēris. Cic.

(6.) Pārenthēsis or dialysis is the insertion of a word or words in a sentence interrupting the natural connection; as, Tiūre dūm rēdeo, (brēvis est via,) pascē cāpellas. Virg.

REMARK. To the above may be added archaism and Hellenism, which belong both to the figures of etymology and to those of syntax.

(1.) Archaism is the use of ancient forms or constructions; as, aulā, for aule; sēnāti, for sēnātūs; fuit, for sit; prōhibesso, for prōhibuero; impetrassēre, for impetrātūrum esse; fārter, for fāri; nēnu, for non; endo, for in;—Opēram abūtūtur, for opēra. Ter. Quid tibi hanc cūratiō est rem? Plaut.

(2.) Hellenism is the use of Greek forms or constructions; as, Hēlēne, for Hēlēna; Antiphon, for Antiphō; aurās (gen.), for auræ; Pallādos, Pallāda, for Pallādēs, Pallādē; Trōāsin, Trōādas, for Trōādibus, Trōādes;—Abstīnēto irārum. Hor. Tempus dēstīnēre pugnā. Virg.

§ 324. (1.) To the grammatical figures may not improperly be subjoined certain others, which are often referred to in philological works, and which are called

TROPES AND FIGURES OF RHETORIC.

(2.) A rhetorical figure is a mode of expression different from the direct and simple way of expressing the same sense. The turning of a word from its original and customary meaning, is called a trope.

1. (a.) A metaphor is the transferring of a word from the object to which it properly belongs, and applying it to another, to which that object has some analogy; as, Ridet ager, The field smiles. Virg. Ætas aurea, The golden age. Ovid. Naufragia fortūna, The wreck of fortune. Cic. Mentis oculi, The eyes of the mind. Id. Virtus animum glōriæ stimulis concitat. The harshness of a metaphor is often softened by means of quasi, tamquam, quidam, or ut ita dicam; as, In animi philosophia quasi tabernaculum vite sue collocarunt. Id. Optimum quoddam et tamquam adipatse dictionis genus. Id.

(b.) Cataphrasis or abusio is a bold or harsh metaphor; as, Vir grægis ipse caper. Virg. Eurus per Siculas equitavit undas. Hor.

2. Metonymy is substituting the name of an object for that of another to which it has a certain relation; as the cause for the effect, the container for what is contained, the property for the substance, the sign for the thing signified, and their contraries; the parts of the body for certain affections; the possessor for the thing possessed; place and time for the persons or things which they comprise, etc.; as, Mortales, for homines. Virg. Amor dari Martis, i. e. belli. Id. Fruges Cæterem appellamus, vinum autem Libærum. Cic. Optio vigiliam meam tibi tradere, i. e. meam curam. Id. Pallida mors. Hor. Hausit patetram, i. e. vinum. Virg. Vina cōrōnant, i. e. patetram. Id. Necte ternos colores, i. e. tria fila diversi coloris. Id. Cedant arma togæ, i. e. bellum paci. Cic. Sæcula milescent, i. e. homines in sæculis. Virg. Vivat Pæciūius vel Nestora totum. Juv. Doctrinā Græcia nos superabat, for Græci superabant. Cic. Pāgentem Suebōrum ad ripas Rhēni considerant, for pāgōrum incolæ. Cæs. Tempora amicōrum, for res adversæ. Cic. Claudius lege prædicatoriā venalis pependit, for Claudii prædium. Suet. Vici ad Janum medium sedentes, for Janū vicum. Cic.

3. Synecdoche is putting a whole for a part, a genus for a species, a singular for a plural, and their contraries; also the material for the thing made of it; a definite for an indefinite number, etc.; as, Fontem ferēbant. Id. Tectum, for dōmus. Id. Armato milite complent, for armatis militibus. Id. Ferrum, for gladius. Id. Qui Corinthiis operibus abundant, i. e. vasis. Cic. Urbeni, urbem, mi Rufe, cōde, i. e. Rōmam. Cic. Centum puer artium, i. e. multarum.

4. Irony is the intentional use of words which express a sense contrary to that which the writer or speaker means to convey; as, Salve bone vir, curasti probe. Ter. Egrēgiam vērō laudem, et spolia ampla referis, tuque, puerque tuus. Virg.

5. Hyperbole is the magnifying or diminishing of a thing beyond the truth; as, Ipse arduus, altaque pulsat sidera. Virg. Ociō Euro. Id.

6. Métalepsis is the including of several tropes in one word; as, Post aliquot aristas. Virg. Here aristas is put for messes, and this for annos.

7. (a.) Allegory is a consistent series of metaphors, designed to illustrate one subject by another; as, O navis, referent in mare te novi fluctus. Hor.

(b.) An obscure allegory or riddle is called an enigma; as, Dic, quibus in terris tres pateat celi spatium non amplius ulnas. Virg.

8. Antonomasia is using a proper noun for a common one, and the contrary; as, Irus et est subito, qui modo Cræsus erat, for pauper and dives. Ovid. So, by periphrasis, pōtor Rhodāni, for Gallus. Hor. Eversor Carthāginis, for Scipio. Quint. Eloquentia princeps, for Cicero. Id. Tyides, for Diomēdes. Virg.

9. Litotes is a mode of expressing something by denying the contrary; as, Non laudo, I blame. Ter. Non innocia verba. Virg.

10. Antiphrasis is using a word in a sense opposite to its proper meaning; as, Auri sacra fūmes. Virg.

11. Euphemism is the use of softened language to express what is offensive or distressing; as, Si quid accidisset Cæsari, i. e. si mortuus esset. Vell.

12. Antanaclassis or punning is the use of the same word in different senses; as, Quis neget Ænēæ natum de stirpe Nērōnem? Sustulit hic matrem, sustulit ille patrem. Epigr. Amari jucundum est, si curētur ne quid insit amari. Cic.

13. Anaphōra or epānaphōra is the repetition of a word at the beginning of successive clauses; as, Nihilne te nocturnum præsidium pālātii, nihil urbis vigilia, nihil timor pōpuli, etc. Cic. Te, dulcis conjux, te, solo in hūore secum, te, veniente die, te, decedente, cānēbat. Virg.

14. Epistrophē is the repetition of a word at the end of successive clauses; as, Pænos pōpulus Rōmānus iustitiā vicit, armis vicit, liberālitātē vicit. Cic. In pure Latin this figure is called conversio.

15. Symplōce is the repetition of a word at the beginning, and of another at the end, of successive clauses, and hence it includes the anaphōra and the epistrophē; as, Quis legem tulit? Rullus: Quis majorem pōpuli partem suffragiis privavit? Rullus: Quis cōmittiis præfuit? Idem Rullus. Cic.

16. Epānalepsis is a repetition of the same word or sentence after intervening words or clauses. See Virg. Geor. II. 4—7.

17. Andiplosis is the use of the same word at the end of one clause, and the beginning of another; as, Sēquitur pulcherrimus Astur, Astur equo fidens. Virg. A. 10, 180. Nunc etiam audes in hōrum conspectum venīre, venīre audes in hōrum conspectum? Cic. This is sometimes called epānastrōphē.

18. Epāndiplosis is the use of the same word both at the beginning and end of a sentence; as, Crescit amor nummi, quantum ipsa pecūnia crescit. Juv.

19. Epāndōs or rēgressio is the repetition of the same words in an inverted order; as, Crūdēlis māter māgis, an puer imprōbus ille? Imprōbus ille puer, crūdēlis tu quōque, māter. Virg.

20. Epizeuxis is a repetition of the same word for the sake of emphasis; as, Excitāte, excitāte eum ab infēris. Cic. Ah Cōrōdon, Cōrōdon, quæ te dēmentia cepit? Virg. Ibimus, ibimus, utcumque præcēdes. Hor.

21. Climax is a gradual amplification by means of a continued anadiplosis, each successive clause beginning with the conclusion of that which precedes it; as, Quæ reliqua spes manet libertātis, si illis et quod libet, licet; et quod licet, possunt; et quod possunt, audent; et quod audent, vobis molestum non est? Cic. This, in pure Latin, is called gradatio.

22. Incrēmentum is an amplification without a strict climax; as, Fāctus est, vinciri civem Rōmānum; scēlus, verbērārī; prōpe parricidīum, necārī; quid dīcam in crūcem tolli? Cic.

23. Pōlyptōton is the repetition of a word in different cases, genders, numbers, tenses, etc.; as, Jam clipeus clipeis, umbōne rēpellitur unbo; ense minax ensis, pēde pes, et cuspidē cuspis. Stat.

24. Paregmēnon is the use of several words of the same origin, in one sentence; as, Abesse non pōtest, quin ejusdem hōminis sit, qui imprōbos prōbet, prōbos imprōbāre. Cic. Istam pugnam pugnābo. Plaut.

25. Pārōnōmāsia is the use of words which resemble each other in sound; as, Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus. Plaut. Civem dōnārū artium, dōnārū partium. Cic. Amantes sunt āmentes. Ter. This figure is sometimes called agnōmīnātiō.

26. Hōmæoprōphēron or alliteration is the use in the same sentence of several words beginning with the same letter; as, O Tūc, tūte Tātī, tibi tanta, tyrranne, tūlisti. Enn. Neu patriæ vālidās in viscēra vertille vīres. Virg.

27. Antithēsis is the placing of different or opposite words or sentiments in contrast; as, Hujus oratōnis difficilīus est exitum quam principium invēnīre. Cic. Cæsar bēnēficiis ac mūnificentiā magnus habebātur; integritāte vitæ Cato. Sall.

28. Oxymōron unites words of contrary significations, thus producing a seeming contradiction; as, Concordia discors. Hor. Quum tacent, clāmant. Cic.

29. Synōnīmia is the use of different words or expressions having the same import; as, Non fēram, non pātiar, non sinam. Cic. Prōmitto, rēcipio, spondeo. Id.

30. Pārābōla or Simile is the comparison of one thing with another; as, Repente te, tamquam serpens e latibulis, oculis emānentibus, inflato collo, tumidis cervicibus, intulisti. Cic.

31. Erōtēsis is an earnest question, and often implies a strong affirmation of the contrary; as, Crēditis āvēctos hostes? Virg. Heu! quas me aqūbra possunt accipere? Id.

32. Epānorthōsis or Correctio is the recalling of a word, in order to place a stronger or more significant one in its stead; as, Filiū unicū ādōlescentūlū hābeo: ah! quid dixi? me hābere? Imo hābui. Ter.

33. Apōsiōpēsis, Rētūcentia, or Interruptio, is leaving a sentence unfinished in consequence of some emotion of the mind; as, Quos ego—sed mōtos vīciat componere fluctus. Virg.

34. Prōsōpōpeia or personification represents inanimate things as acting or speaking, and persons dead or absent as alive and present; as, Quas (patria) tecum, Cāttilina, sic agit. Cic. Virtus sūmit aut pōnit sēcures. Hor.

35. Apostrōphe is a turning off from the regular course of the subject, to address some person or thing; as, Vi pōitur; quid non mortālīa pectōra cōgis, aurī sacra fūmes! Virg.

36. Pārāleipsis is a pretended omission of something, in order to render it more observed. See Cic. Cat. 1, 6, 14.

37. Epiphōnēma or Acclāmatio is an exclamation or grave reflection on something said before; as, Tanta mōlis erat Rōmānam condere gentem. Virg.

38. Ecphōnēsis or Exclāmatio shows some violent emotion of the mind; as, O tempōra! O mōres!

39. Apōria, Diāpōrēsis, or Dūbitatio, expresses a doubt in regard to what is to be said or done; as, Quos accēdam, aut quos appellem? Sall.

40. Prōlepsis is the anticipation of an objection before it is made, or of an event before it occurs; as, Vērū anceps pugnæ fuērat fortūna. Fuisset: Quem mētui mōrtūra? Virg.

§ 325. To the figures of rhetoric may be subjoined the following terms, used to designate defects or blemishes in style:—

1. Barbarism is either the use of a foreign word, or a violation of the rules of orthography, etymology, or prosody; as, rigōrōsus, for rigidus or sēvērus; domīnus, for dōmīnus; davi, for dēdi.

2. Solecism is a violation of the rules of syntax; as, Vēnus pulcher; vos invādēmus.

3. Neoterism is the use of words or phrases introduced by authors living subsequently to the best ages of Latinity; as, murdrum, a murder; constābulārius, a constable.

4. Tautology is a repetition of the same meaning in different words; as, Jam vos āciem, et prēlia, et hostem poscitis. Sil.

5. Amphibōlia is the use of equivocal words or constructions; as, Gallus, a Gaul, or a cock. Aio te, Ætīda, Rōmānos vīncere posse. Quint.

6. Idiotism is a construction peculiar to one or more languages: thus, the ablative after comparatives is a Latinism. When a peculiarity of one language is imitated in another, this is also called idiotism. Thus, Mitte mihi verbum, instead of Fac me certīorem, is an Anglicism.

ROMAN MODE OF RECKONING.

I. OF TIME.

1. The Roman Day.

§ 326. (1.) With the Romans, as with us, the day was either civil or natural. Their civil day, like ours, extended from midnight to midnight. The natural day continued from sunrise to sunset, as, on the other hand, the night extended from sunset to sunrise. The natural day and night were each divided into twelve equal parts or hours, which were consequently of different length, according to the varying length of the days and nights in the successive seasons of the year. It was only at the equinox that the diurnal and nocturnal hours of the Romans were equal to each other, as each was then equal to the twenty-fourth part of the civil day.

(2.) In the Roman camp the night was further divided into four watches (vigiliæ), consisting each of three Roman hours, the second and fourth watches ending respectively at midnight and at sunrise.

2. The Roman Month and Year.

(1.) The calendar of the Romans, as rectified by Julius Cæsar, agreed with our own in the number of months, and of the days in each, according to the following table:—

Jānuārius . 31 days.	Maius . . 31 days.	September 30 days.
Februārius 28 or 29.	Jūnius . 30 "	Octōber . . 31 "
Martius . . 31 days.	Quintilis 31 "	Nōvember 30 "
Aprīlis . . . 30 "	Sextilis . 31 "	Dēcember 31 "

In early times the Roman year began with March, and the names Quintilis, Sextilis, September, etc., indicated the distance of those months from the commencement of the year. Quintilis and Sextilis were afterwards called Julius and Augustus in honor of the first two emperors. The Romans, instead of reckoning in an uninterrupted series from the first to the last day of a month, had in each month three points or periods from which their days were counted—the Calends, the Nones, and the Ides. The Calends (Cālendæ), were always the first day of the month. The Nones (Nōnæ), were the fifth, and the Ides (Idus), the thirteenth; except in March, May, July, and October, when the Nones occurred on the seventh day, and the Ides on the fifteenth.

(2.) They always counted forward, from the day whose date was to be determined, to the next Calends, Nones, or Ides, and designated the day by its distance before such point. After the first day of the month, therefore, they began to reckon so many days before the Nones; after the Nones, so many days before the Ides; and after the Ides, so many before the Calends, of the next month.

Thus, the second of January was denoted by quarto Nōnas Jānuārias, or Jānuārii, scil. die ante: the third, tertio Nōnas; the fourth, pridie Nōnas; and the fifth, Nōnis. The sixth was denoted by octavo Idus; the seventh septimo Idus; and so on to the thirteenth, on which the Ides fell. The fourteenth was denoted by undevigesimo Calendas Februariæ, or Februarii; and so on to the end of the month.

(3.) The day preceding the Calends, Nones, and Ides, was termed pridie Calendas, etc., scil. ante: in designating the other days, both the day of the Calends, etc., and that whose date was to be determined, were reckoned; hence the second day before the Calends, etc., was called tertio, the third quarto, etc.

(4.) To reduce the Roman calendar to our own, therefore, when the day is between the Calends and the Nones or between the Nones and the Ides, it is necessary to take one from the number denoting the distance of the given day from the Nones or the Ides, and to subtract the remainder from the number of the day on which the Nones or Ides fell in the given month.

Thus, to determine the day equivalent to IV. Nonas Januariæ, we take 1 from 4, and subtract the remainder, 3, from 5, the day on which the Nones of January fell (i. e. $4-1=3$, and $5-3=2$): this gives 2, or the second of January, for the day in question. So VI. Idus Aprilis: the Ides of April falling upon the 18th, we take ($6-1$, i. e.) 5 from 18, which leaves 8 (i. e. $6-1=5$, and $18-5=13$): the expression, therefore, denotes the 8th of April.

(a.) In reckoning the days before the Calends, as they are not the last day of the current month, but the first of the following, it is necessary to subtract two from the number denoting the distance of the given day from the Calends of the following month, and to take the remainder from the number of days in the month.

Thus, XV. Cal. Quintiles is $15-2=13$, and $30-13=17$, i. e. the Roman date XV. Cal. Quint. is equivalent to the 17th of June.

(b.) To reduce our calendar to the Roman, the preceding method is to be reversed. Thus when the given day is between the Calends and the Nones or between the Nones and the Ides, (unless it be the day before the Nones or the Ides), we are to add one to the number denoting the day of the month, according to our reckoning, on which the Nones or Ides fell. But if the day is after the Ides, (unless it be the last day of the month), we must add two to the number of days in the month, and then subtract the number denoting the day of the month as expressed in our reckoning. The remainder will be the day before the Nones, Ides or Calends.

Thus to find the Roman date corresponding to the third of April, we have $5+1-3=3$; the required date, therefore, is III. Non. Apr.—To find the proper Roman expression for our tenth of December we have $13+1-10=4$; the date, therefore, is IV. Id. Dec.—The Roman expression for the 22d of August, in pursuance of the above rule, is found thus, $31+2-22=11$, and the date is XI. Cal. Sept.

(5.) In leap year, both the 24th and 25th of February were called the sixth before the Calends of March. The 24th was called dies bisextus, and the year itself annus bisextus, bissextile or leap year.

(a.) The day after the Calends, etc., was sometimes called post-ridie calendas, etc.

(b.) The names of the months are properly adjectives, though often used as nouns, mensis being understood.

(6.) The correspondence of our calendar with that of the Romans is exhibited in the following TABLE.

29	IV. "	IV. "	III. "
30	III. "	III. "	Pridie Cal.
31	Pridie Cal.	Pridie Cal.

(7.) In leap-year the last seven days of February were reckoned thus:—

23. VII. Calendas Martias.	27. IV. Cal. Mart.
24. bisexto Cal. Mart.	28. III. " "
25. VI. Cal. Mart.	29. pridie Cal. Mart.
26. V. " "

(a.) Hence in reducing a date of February in leap-year to the Roman date, for the first 23 days we proceed according to the preceding rule in 4, (b.), as if the month had only 28 days. The 24th is marked as bisexto Cal. Mart., and to obtain the proper expression for the remaining five days we regard the month as having 29 days. Thus the 27th of February in leap-year is $29+2-27=4$, and the proper Roman expression is IV. Cal. Mart.

(b.) On the other hand, to reduce a Roman date of February in leap-year to our date we reverse the above process, and during the Nones and Ides and until the VII. Calendas Martias we reckon the month to have only 28 days:—bisexto Cal. Mart. is set down as the 24th, and for the remaining days designated as VI. V. IV. III. and pridie Cal. Mart. we reckon the month to have 29 days. Thus III. Cal. Mart. is $3-2=1$, and $29-1=28$, and the given day is equivalent to the 28th of February.

(8.) The Latins not only said tertio, pridie, etc., Calendas, etc., but also ante diem tertium, etc., Calendas, etc.; and the latter form in Cicero and Livy is far more common than the former, and is usually written thus, a. d. III. Cal., etc.

(9.) The expression ante diem was used as an indeclinable noun, and is joined with in and ex; as, Consul Lutatius férius in ante diem tertium Idus Sextilis edixit. The consul appointed the Latin festival for the third day before the Ides of August. Liv. Supplicatio indicta est ex ante diem quintum Idus Octobres. Id. So, Ad pridie Nōnas Maias. Cic.

(10.) The week of seven days (hebdomas), was not in use among the Romans under the republic, but was introduced under the emperors. The days of the week were then named from the planets; dies Solis, Sunday; dies Lūnæ, Monday; dies Martis, Tuesday; dies Mercūrii, Wednesday; dies Jovis, Thursday; dies Veneris, Friday; dies Saturni, Saturday.

(11.) The term nundinas (from nōvem—dies) denotes the regular market day at Rome when the country people came into the city; but it is not used for the purpose of denoting the period of eight days intervening between two successive market days.

(12.) The year at Rome was designated by the names of the consuls for that year. Thus Virgil was born, M. Licinio Crasso et Cn. Pompeio Magno consulibus, i. e. in the year of the consulship of Crassus and Pompey. But in Roman authors events are often dated from the year in which Rome was founded, which, according to Varro, was in the 753d year before the birth of Christ. This period was designated as anno urbis condita, and by abbreviation, a. u. c., or simply u. c., and sometimes by a. alone, before the numerals.

Thus the birth of Virgil was a. u. c. 684. To reduce such dates to our reckoning, if the given number is less than 754, we subtract it from the latter number, and the difference is the required year before Christ. The birth of Virgil therefore is $754 - 684 = 70$ before Christ.—But if the number of the Roman year exceeds 753, we deduct 753 from the given number, and the remainder is the year after Christ. For example, the emperor Augustus died a. u. c. 767, and the corresponding year of our era is $767 - 753 = 14$.

II. TABLES OF MONEY, WEIGHT, AND MEASURE.

OF THE AS.

§ 327. The Romans used this word (As) to denote, I. The copper coin, whose value (in the time of Cicero) was about one cent and a half of our money. II. The unit of weight (libra), or of measure (jūgērūm). III. Any unit or integer considered as divisible; as, of inheritances, interest, houses, etc.; whence ex asse hères, one who inherits the whole. The multiples of the As are, Dipondius (duo pondo; for the As originally weighed a pound), i. e. 2 Asses; Sestertius (sequi tertius), i. e. $2\frac{1}{2}$ Asses; Tressis, i. e. 3 Asses; Quintussis, i. e. 4 Asses; and so on to Centussis, i. e. 100 Asses. The As, whatever unit it represented, was divided into twelve parts or uncia, and the different fractions received different names, as follows:

The Uncia was divided in the following manner:—

1	Uncia	contained	2	Sēmunciae.

ROMAN COINS.

These were the Tēruncius, Sembella, and As or Libella, of copper; the Sestertius, Quinārius (or Victōriātus), and Dēnārius, of silver; and the Aureus, of gold.

N. B.—The marks denoting a Sestertius nummus are IIS., LLS., HS., which are properly abbreviations for 2 1-2 asses. Observe, also, that when a line is placed over the numbers, centēna millia is understood, as in the case of the numeral adverbs; thus, H. S. MC. is millies centies HS.; whereas HS. MC. is only 1100 Sestertii.

ROMAN CALCULATION OF INTEREST.

The Romans received interest on their loans monthly, their highest rate being one per cent. (centesima), a month, i. e. 12 per cent a year. As this was the highest rate, it was reckoned as the as or unit in reference to the lower rates, which were denominated, according to the usual division of the as, sēmi-as, triētes, quādrantes, etc., i. e. the half, third, fourth, etc., of the as or of 12 per cent. according to the following table:—

REMARK 1. The Romans reckoned their copper money by asses, their silver money by sestertii, and their gold money by aurei and sometimes by Attic talents.

REM. 2. The as, as the unit of money, was originally a pound of copper, but its weight was gradually diminished, until, in the later days of the republic, it amounted to only 1-24th of a pound.

REM. 3. (a.) The dēnārius was a silver coin, originally equal in value to ten asses, whence its name; but, after the weight of the as was reduced, the dēnārius was equal to eighteen asses.

(b.) The sestertius, or sesterce, was one fourth of the dēnārius, or two asses and a half (semisestertius). The sestertius was called emphatically nummus, as in it all large sums were reckoned after the coining of silver money.

(c.) The aureus (a gold coin), in the time of the emperors, was equal to 25 dēnārii, or 100 sesterces.

REM. 4. In reckoning money, the Romans called any sum under 2000 sesterces so many sestertii; as, decem sestertii, ten sesterces; centum sestertii, a hundred sesterces.

REM. 5. Sums from 2000 sesterces (inclusive) to 1,000,000, they denoted either by mille, millia, with sestertiūm (gen. plur.), or by the plural of the neuter noun sestertium, which itself signified a thousand sesterces. Thus they said quadrāginta millia sestertiūm, or quadrāginta sestertia, to denote 40,000 sesterces. With the genitive sestertiūm, millia was sometimes omitted; as, sestertiūm centum, scil. millia, 100,000 sesterces.

REM. 6. To denote a million, or more, they used a combination; thus, décies centēna millia sestertiūm, 1,000,000 sesterces. The words centēna millia, however, were generally omitted; thus, décies sestertiūm, and sometimes merely décies. See § 118, 5. So, centies, 10 millions; millies, 100 millions.

REM. 7. Some suppose that sestertium, when thus joined with the numeral adverbs, is always the neuter noun in the nominative or accusative singular. The genitive and ablative of that noun are thus used; as, Decies sestertii dote. With a dowry of 1,000,000 sesterces. Tac. Quinquagies sestertio, 5,000,000 sesterces. Id. But this usage does not occur in Cicero.

DIFFERENT AGES OF ROMAN LITERATURE.

§ 329. 1. Of the Roman literature for the first five centuries after the foundation of the city, but few vestiges remain. The writers of the succeeding centuries have been arranged in four ages, in reference to the purity of the language in the period in which they flourished. These are called the golden, silver, brazen, and iron ages.

2. The golden age is reckoned from the time of Livius Andronicus, about A. U. C. 514, to the death of Augustus, A. U. C. 767, or A. D. 14, a period of a little more than 250 years. The writers of the early part of this age are valued rather on account of their antiquity, and in connection with the history of the language, than as models of style. It was not till the age of Cicero, that Roman literature reached its highest elevation. The era comprehending the generation immediately preceding, and that immediately succeeding, that of Cicero, as well as his own, is the period in which the most distinguished writers of Rome flourished; and their works are the standard of purity in the Latin language.

3. The silver age extended from the death of Augustus to the death of Trajan, A. D. 118, a period of 104 years. The writers of this age were inferior to those who had preceded them; yet several of them are worthy of commendation.

4. The brazen age comprised the interval from the death of Trajan to the time when Rome was taken by the Goths, A. D. 410. From the latter epoch commenced the iron age, during which the Latin language was much adulterated with foreign words, and its style and spirit essentially injured.

5. The body of Latin writings has been otherwise arranged by Dr. Freund, so as to be comprised in three main periods,—the Ante-classical, Classical, and Post-classical. The ante-classical extends from the oldest fragments of the language to Lucretius and Varro; the classical from Cicero and Cæsar to Tacitus, Suetonius, and the younger Pliny inclusive; the post-classical from that time to the fifth century of our era. The classical Latinity is subdivided into (a.) Ciceronian, (b.) Augustan, (c.) post-Augustan, and to the language of the fourth and fifth centuries he has given the title of late Latin.
